NATIVE PRESS.

THE INDIA COUNCILS BILL.

The Rast Gofar says:—The abandonment of the India Councils Bill will create no rejoicing or sorrow. Lord Cross's Bill stood at one extreme, and Mr. Bradlaugh's Congress mandate at the other. Men whose opinion deserves great weight thought that a compromise between the two might be safely effected introducing the elective principle, but not legalising the dangerous experiment of conferring the power of election on an unknown, ignorant, and untrained constituency. Supposing for a moment that the extravagant proposal embodied in Mr. Bradlaugh's Bill had been carried one's cry of despair would have been the memorable observation made by Robert Lowe on a somewhat similar occasion:—"Now, gentlemen, let us educate our masters." Lord Cross's Bill was too weak and tame to satisfy those whose sympathy with the Congress was based upon reason. Yet it was something, and, though we are not very sorry that obstruction and heaps of other business have necessitated its abandonment this Session, we would have had some little reason to be thankful, even if it had passed, as it stood. For it raised the number of non-official members, and gave the right of interpellation under certain safeguards. The non-officials would have been appointed by nomination, not election. But there is no reason to suppose that nomination, if carefully made, would not have secured us some excellent representatives of the people. Both Bills have now been relegated to the future—the harmless measure of Lord Cross and the dangerous and revolutionary measure of the Junior Member for Northampton—and the country has thereby suffered no great loss. Nay, the rejection of Mr. Bradlaugh's proposal may any day be a positive blessing.

Native Opinion says:—The India Councils Bill has at last been abandoned. This is the announcement which Mr. Smith, the Leader of the House of Commons, made early last week, and so, for the present, the chances of reform in the Legislative Councils have disappeared. What the future may bring forth it is difficult to say. The Congress party look upon the abandonment of the Bill as a triumph of their agitation; but we do not see where the triumph lies. The present result only shows that there is nowhere in the House of Commons any earnest desire to change the present constitution of the Councils in India. We are sorry for what has taken place, for we are afraid it will take long before another attempt is made to bring in a Bill for the reform of the Councils. With a little more of moderation and sound discretion the Congress party would have probably succeeded in obtaining a measure of reform suited to the existing political condition of India; but their persistence in their own views has brought things to an unsatisfactory pass for which none but themselves are to blame.

AGRICULTURAL CONFERENCE AT SIMLA.—Two months hence, says the Gujrati, an Agricultural Conference will meet at Simla. The public are ignorant of the precise aims and objects which the Supreme Government have in view in convening such a Conference. But at the same time it is pretty certain that the Simla authorities seem to be anxious to take some steps with a view to ameliorate the condition of the agricultural classes. Past experience has shown that costly European implements and chemicals are unsuited to this country at present, and the great question of the hour is, what practicable and suitable measures can be devised to raise the material prosperity of the agricultural population? We do not believe the solution of this problem will be facilitated by the total exclusion of the Native element from the Conference. It passes our comprehension why Government is so reluctant to seek light from distinguished Native gentlemen who are in living contact with the people whose interests the authorities seem desirous to promote.

NATIVE CIVIL SERVANTS.—The six Indian candidates, says Native Opinion, who just passed the Indian Civil Service examination, were entertained at a dinner at the Northbrook Indian Club, under the presidency of Lord Northbrook. This is the first time, we believe, when the passed Indian candidates were so honoured—an indication of the goodwill the leading English statesmen entertain towards the people of this country. That six Indians should pass at the same time at a most severe competitive test is indeed no small matter for congratulation, but this unprecedented success need not lead the British public to suppose that the difficulties of Indian candidates, compared to those of Europeans, are any way lighter. Look at the disparity of marks assigned to the Sanskrit and the Arabic as against Latin and Greek, as also the disadvantage of having to pass the examination in a foreign language.

THE Government of India has just directed the formation of a ninth company in the 27th and 28th Punjab Infantry, to be composed entirely of Afridis.

RUSSIA'S RAILWAY ADVANCE INTO CENTRAL ASIA. Notes of a Journey from St. Petersburg to Samarkand. By GEORGE DOBSON, Author of the Letters in the Times on "The Central Asian Railway."

"Those of our readers who remember the original letters will need no further commendation of our correspondent's accuracy of information and graphic powers of description."—Times.

Crown 8vo. 6s.

THE QUEST OF SIR BERTRAND, and other Poems. By R. H. DOMENICHETTI.

"Mr. R. H. Domenichetti, in 'The Quest of Sir Bertrand, and other Poems,' is a maker of ballads of the kind that Coleridge and Scott made popular, and Lewis imitated, more successfully than most of their contemporaries. The poet's diction is quite in the brave old style."—SATURDAY REVIEW.

"There is certainly much promise in Mr. R. H. Domenichetti's 'The Quest of Sir Bertrand, and other Poems,' for which Mrs. Truquair has drawn an effective frontispiece. . . . He has evidently a keen eye for natural beauty, whether in wood, water, or woman."—GRAPHIC.

Demy 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.

CAMP AND STUDIO. By IRVING MONTAGU, late of the Illustrated London News, &c.; Author of "Wanderings of a War Artist." With Portrait, and 102 Illustrations from Sketches by the Author.

"Needless to say he has many tales of horror to relate."—SCOTSMAN.

"There are also some excellent passages relating to the war being carried on at the same time in Europe. But it is in the least known episodes round Kara, Erzeroum, and Trebizond that the author's lively and clever pen finds its best material."—DAILY TELEGRAPH.
"And all who remember his admirable sketches in the Illustrated London News will be interested to know the circumstances under which they were drawn."—ST. JAMES'S GAZETTE.

LAST NEW VOLUME OF THE "STATESMEN SERIES." Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

GAMBETTA. By FRANK MARZIALS

"Both in style and matter, the life of Gambetta is one of the best studies of statesmen that have appeared in the 'Statesmen Series.' Mr. Marzials is evidently master of his subject."—STATESMAN.
"The life of 'Gambetta,' by F. T. Marzials, is a highly interesting book."—EVENING NEWS AND POST.

SATURDAY SONGS. By H. D. TRAILL, Author of "Recaptured Rhymes," &c.

"A book of satires not inferior to any which have seen the light since the time of Præd, and not unworthy to be ranked alongside the Anti-Jacobin. . . . Some of the most brilliant of many brilliant verses contributed to the Saturday Review."—ST. JAMES'S GAZETTE.

"They are more than clever enough to deserve collection in a book."—SCOTSMAN.

FOR COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS. DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED A REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false. This caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—The Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR OF CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—See The Times, July 13th, 1891.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE IN NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY. GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH, LONDON, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME OF DIARRHŒA."

From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla. Jan. 5, 1890.

To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.
DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power. We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescribe and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEAD-ACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cures all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, Hysteria.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSUBSTANTIATED IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists, 1s. 1ld., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

"Earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

What higher aim can man attain, than conquest over human pair?

JEOPARDY OF LIFE, THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset!! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm. The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—J. C. ENO.

CAUTION.—Examine each Bottle, and see that the Capsule is marked ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." Without it you have been imposed on by a worthless imitation.

OLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS, POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S PATENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced life they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1890.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 29th August; from Allahabad and Madras to the 27th August; and from Calcutta to the 26th August.

THE Viceroy and party returned from their hill trip on the afternoon of August 24th, making a long ride in from Narkhanda to Simla.

SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS returned from Narkhanda to Simla on August 23rd.

At the meeting of the Legislative Council at Simla, August 28th, General Sir George Chesney presided, owing to the Viceroy being slightly indisposed. The Hon. Sir David Barbour moved that the Bill to amend the Indian Paper Currency Act, 1882, be taken into consideration. The motion was agreed to, and the Bill was then passed. The hon. member also moved that the Bill to amend the Indian Salt Act, 1882, be referred to a Select Committee, consisting of the Hon. Sir A. Scoble, the Hon. Khan Singh Bedi, and the hon. mover, with instructions to report after a month. The motion was agreed to. The Hon. Mr. Hutchins then moved that the Bill to amend the Indian Emigration Act, 1883, be referred to a Select Committee, consisting of the Hon. Sir Andrew Scoble, the Hon. Mr. Crosthwaite, the Hon. Khan Singh Bedi, and the hon. mover, with instructions to report after one month. This was agreed to. The Hon. Mr. Hutchins also moved for leave to introduce the Bill to amend the Births, Deaths, and Marriages Registration Act, 1886. After the hon. mover had explained that the object of the Bill was to extend, till April 1st, 1891, the period for transmission to the Registrar-General of registers, prescribed in section 32 of the Act, suggested that separate Commissioners be appointed in several provinces instead of having a single body of Commissioners for the whole of India. The Bill was introduced. It was also agreed that the Bill should be taken into consideration at the next meeting of the Council. The Council then adjourned till September 11th.

THE MAHARAJA OF COOCH BEHAR has arrived in Simla.

SIR MORTIMER DURAND has received permission to extend his leave to the spring if he so desires. As he has now completely recovered his health it is not altogether certain that he will take advantage of the opportunity.

SIR THOMAS BAKER has arrived in India, and will pay a visit to Simla before taking up his command at Rawalpindi.

COLONEL MACGREGOR STEWART, R.A., succeeds Brigadier-General Gatacre permanently as Deputy Quarter-master-General.

MR. J. D. REES is appointed Collector and Magistrate and Sessions Judge of the Nilgiris, but he will continue to act as Private Secretary to the Governor of Madras.

MR. M. E. BRADFORD, C.S., son of Sir Edward Bradford, has died in Calcutta from malarial fever contracted while one of Prince Albert Victor's shooting party in the Terai last March.

THE Punjab Chief Court have in hand a memorandum on the subject of agricultural indebtedness in their Province.

A DESPATCH has gone home dealing with the present aspect of the contagious diseases question in relation to the army in India.

THE Mahsud Waziris have raided across the frontier in the neighbourhood of the Janikhel outpost, near Bannu. The raiders, who carried off a thousand cattle, were pursued, but not overtaken. This is one of the boldest raids that has been known on the frontier for many years, and will be met with prompt punishment.

THE force visiting the Black Mountain this cold weather will only march along the frontier, not entering the tribal territory. Probably about a thousand men will take part in the promenade, with another thousand in reserve, all drawn from the frontier force.

ACCORDING to latest arrangements some 30,000 of the new magazine rifles and 75,000 Martinis will be supplied to troops in India during the current financial year.

A COMMITTEE is shortly to be appointed, chiefly consisting of Natives, which will inquire thoroughly into the question of working hours and holidays with reference to the women and children employed in factories. Their report, which will be based on the facts collected in the North-West Province, Bengal, and Bombay, will be submitted to Government before any legislation takes place in connection with the Factory Act in the cold weather.

A HEAVY fall in freights has taken place at Calcutta owing to the rise in exchange, and steamship owners are severe sufferers. Two or three failures have occurred, and others are impending.

IN Kuner and Jellalabad, in the Mohmand country, and in Terah, the summer home of the Afridis, also among the Aka Khel villages, a rumour prevails that the Ameer of Cabul is about to enter upon a religious war. It has probably arisen from orders given recently by the Ameer to Mr. Pyne to turn out breech-loading ammunition at the Cabul factory with all possible despatch.

ABDUR RAHMAN brought back with him from Afghanistan the larger portion of the troops that had been employed in the suppression of Ishak Khan's rebellion, and the province beyond Hindu Kush is now but slenderly garrisoned.

It is intended in future to use the Midland Railway route entirely for the mail service between Bombay and the Punjab.

At a meeting of the subscribers to the Lord Reay Memorial Fund, in Bombay, it was decided to order out a bronze statue from England for a sum of £3,000.

MR. BYRAMJEE JEEJEEBHROY, C.S.I., has given a donation of Rs. 3,50,000 for the purpose of establishing an Anglo-Vernacular School in Bombay for poor Parsees.

THE Bombay Chamber of Commerce have again addressed the Government on the question of the appointment of Presidency Magistrates in this city.

THE military authorities are likely to take up the question of water supply and sanitation in cantonments, so as to keep pace with what is being done by the Municipalities.

THE petitioners for the abolition of Simla Municipality are drawing up another memorial urging that Simla is not adapted for Municipal rules. The petitioners deny the Municipality has cleared itself of the charge brought against it.

A SERIOUS outbreak of typhoid fever has occurred at Agra. Among the victims are twelve young soldiers.

GENERAL financial failures are reported from Calcutta, owing to the rise in exchange.

A GALLANT and popular officer, whilst crossing the river Ghaggar recently, it is reported, had to jump out of his gharri and literally "run for dear life," the four bullocks being stirred up to gallop for probably the first and last time in their sleepy lives! No sooner had the officer gained the bank than a wall of water, eight feet high, came down, sweeping all before it.

NOTES.

THE news from India by wire and Overland mail this week is quiet and uneventful.

THE papers report that the Viceroy and party arrived at Simla from their trip into the interior in excellent health. The Viceroy, owing to the rapid changes of climate, suffering from fever." This is somewhat contradictory, but it may be the way how a Simla special correspondent is given to reporting special intelligence.

THE rise in exchange has not been welcomed in India by all other classes as it has been by those who have to remit money to England. A largely attended meeting of the import merchants has been held at Calcutta to consider the question of the import trade as affected by the recent rise in exchange. The Chairman, Mr. G. A. Walker, said that the recent rise in exchange had led many of them to consider the position, and it seemed desirable to adopt some definite line of action. Their interests were not at all identical, and it behoved all to sink personal considerations for the general good. The question was how their interests were to be reconciled, so as to enable them to try and work so as to minimise as much as possible the evils with which they were confronted, and the losses which might arise. It was not to be denied that the condition of the import trade was critical, exchange had risen some 20 per cent., and serious losses stared them in the face.

A CURIOUS feature in the transmission of money over India is brought to notice by the Head Commissioner of Paper Currency in his last annual report. The bulk of silver bullion imported into India is, for obvious reasons, landed in Bombay, and presented to the Mint there for coinage. When any of this money is wanted in Calcutta it is sent over in Bombay notes at the trifling cost of registration through the post, and can then be sold in Calcutta at another trifle of discount of, say, half an anna per cent., and paid into the Treasury at par for Government dues, such as the purchase of opium. In this way the banks move their money across India at Government expense. The amount of Bombay notes cashed at the Calcutta Currency Office during the year 1889-90 was more than two crores, as against thirty-two lakhs of Calcutta notes cashed at Bombay; and, of course, Government had to move money over to meet the difference. Another reason this against the contention that Government should undertake to cash all notes at any office; the risk can now be grasped by the most opinionated.

THERE was an outbreak in the Srinager Jail on Aug. 4. The Civil and Military Gazette remarks:—"We can well believe our correspondent who describes the recent jail outbreak in Kashmir when he says that Colonel Neville Chamberlain, Military Secretary, has 'found fault' with the behaviour of the sepoys on the occasion. If seventy armed Kashmir sepoys take to flight before seventeen prisoners armed with clubs how many of these sepoys would be required to stand against a Cossack brigade? Making allowances for possible exaggeration in the narrative, it is obvious that the Kashmir army—leaving out of account the war service corps—is not quite the peerless military machine which the Kashmir obstructionists to military reform pretended."

ONE of the heroes of the smoking-room in a recent outward bound P. and O. steamer, says the Pioneer, was a Russian Colonel on his way to Vladivostok. The conversation of the afternoon had taken a turn on the question of Home Rule in Britain, and the development of self government in India, the agitation by the Congress-wallah in Bengal and the Separatist in England, and it ended by a demand for the Russian's opinion. This he was reluctant to give, and required some little persuasion before he could be induced to favour the company with his views. "I am not," said he, speaking very slowly and deliberately, "advocate. I am not . . . politician. I cannot speak well your English, and I do not understand your Home Rule . . . your rule of Local Self-Councils . . . or what you call it in India . . . If it means that small municipal affairs do settle themselves by small Municipal Councils . . . I say . . . ver well. If it means . . . the making of Parliaments . . . legislating by Local Boards . . . meddling with Imperial concerns . . . I say God damn." Needless to add the Colonel's epigrammatic summary of the situation was received with loud applause.

THE Rangoon Gazette asks, "Why is the coal industry so miserably pursued in Burma, where, if half the reports of the existence of coal are true, there is abundance of it in the Province?" Making all the excuses possible for the youngness of the local administration in not having encouraged private enterprise in this direction hitherto, we can see no reasons now for longer delaying this important industry. For three or four years the country was much too disturbed in the districts, and it would have been cruel had the Government lent itself to any deliberate plan of inviting private capital to invest in them. But now that the country is at peace from Dan to Beersheba we trust to see the local administration follow the example of the Government of India in fostering as much as lays in its power an industry that will do much towards opening out one of the most abundant of this province's resources.

WE live and learn. The following is from the Daily News of this morning:—"The Americans are worrying themselves about the origin of the name 'John Company,' and a clever Anglo-Indian writer, Mr. R. Kipling, has given them the explanation he himself received. 'H.E.I.C.' was the monogram of the Honourable East India Company. Turn the I into a J, and you get J. C.—the initials of John Company. It may be so; but it rather reminds one of the description given of the derivation of four from dies—diablement changé en route. Nobody knows how the greatest of all commercial companies came to be called John Company. Perhaps the simplest explanation is the best. 'John' is the Briton's nickname, as Jonathan, or Uncle Sam, is that of his American relative. 'John Chinaman' is another national nickname. In the Eastern Soudan we called our Hadendowa foes 'Johnnies.' From 'John' or 'John Bull' to 'John Company' seems a natural transition. The Native of India pronounces it 'Jan Kumpani;' and in out-of-the-way corners of the country he is under the impression that 'Jan Kumpani' still rules, and that every year he sends across the Kalapani a ship or two laden with rupees for the Queen of England."

THE Army and Navy Gazette says:—"It is quite within the range of possibility that the Indian troopships will, after the present season, be no longer manned and officered from the Royal Navy, but handed over to the Indian Marine, or perhaps the merchant service, with Naval Reserve officers in charge. One reason for this change is to be found in the scarcity of men and officers for the regular service. The men now employed in the Indian troopships—fully 1,000 in number—are probably required to man the cruisers for the Australasian Special Squadron. The notion has many points in its favour, and, however popular the trooping service may be with some persons, it is assuredly waste of costly material to employ highly trained seamen in the passenger traffic. In fact, the sole advantage lay in their thus being in reserve, as it were, and always available for service, but as reduced crews for ships of the First Reserve they will be much better employed.

AN extraordinary incident occurred in the Court of the Deputy Commissioner, Hoshangabad, the other day. A man walked up to the dais where the magistrate was sitting, hearing a case, and handed him something wrapped up in a pipal leaf, which, when opened, was found to contain his wife's nose. The husband having asserted his authority had come in to take the consequences. And to think that such a being is without a vote.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.(By TELEGRAPH.)

CALCUTTA, SEPT. 14.

The Government, replying to a memorial of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, on the subject of assessment to income-tax of profits on goods consigned to agents for sale in India, states that it has no doubt of the legality of the assessment, but, having regard to the difficulty of estimating such profits, it has resolved to hold the orders in abeyance for the present. The letter also answers the Chamber's arguments for the entire abolition of the income-tax. The Government is unable to give any hope in that direction, and considers it doubtful whether the recent improvement in the finances will continue. It believes that several other fiscal reforms should take precedence, whenever a permanent surplus is obtained, and contends that the income-tax is now fairly remunerative, that its administration is greatly improved, and that no other impost reaches the professional and official classes.

BURMA.

RANGOON, SEPT. 13.

The Irrawaddy has again risen to an unusual height. Considerable anxiety is felt at Mandalay.

The condition of the upper province is remarkable. While a large portion of the country runs the risk of scarcity from drought, the stations along the Irrawaddy are threatened with inundations. The floods are due to the melting of snows north of Bhamo.

The Commissioner of Pegu has sentenced five men to death and two to transportation for life for dacoity committed near Rangoon. A police inspector was killed by these dacoits.

A painful case is reported. Forty-seven persons convicted of any crime were deported on suspicion, under the Upper Burma village regulations, to the Upper Chindwin. The persons deported were to be fed at the Government expense. The duty of providing food was handed over to a local contractor, who grossly neglected it. From the 30th of May to the 1st of August these forty-seven people received no food, and were given only Rs. 105 for their subsistence, or an average of less than three farthings a head per day for men, women, and children. It is impossible adequately to support life on such a pittance. The contractor has been convicted and punished. It is specially incumbent on the local government, when they use the extraordinary power vested in them under the village regulation, to ensure, at any rate henceforward, that the persons so deported shall not be exposed to a process of slow starvation.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.

ADMITTING NATIVES OF INDIA.

(Englishman.)

Now that the age for the Civil Service examinations has been raised, and the number of competitors from India is likely to increase every year, it would be interesting to know whether the Government of India and the Secretary of State and his Council have looked sufficiently in advance to see what the possibilities in store for the administration of this country really are. When the age limit was fixed at nineteen years the Government was charged with having adopted this dubious device in order to put a check on Native candidates, who were unable to leave India until they had attained a certain age, and were therefore severely handicapped as compared with English boys. Whether there was any truth in the charge it is unnecessary to consider, but there can be no doubt that the limitation had the effect of shutting out competition from India. When the agitation arose to increase the age limit it was suggested as an alternative arrangement that two examinations should be held, one in England and one in India; but this idea was rejected with little hesitation on several substantial grounds. At length the age limit in England was raised to a point higher than it had been even before the complaint of reduction. Whether this was done solely in the interests of English youths, or also for the benefit of candidates from India, it is impossible to say. The best age for the examination is a question that has been hotly argued, and there is much to be said for both the higher and lower limit. The singular fact, however, in connection with all this agitation has been that it has never once been suggested that it was possible for the Native element in the Indian Civil Service to be overdone. It seems hardly possible that such an important point could have been overlooked by the responsible rulers of India, but if it suggested itself the courage to state it was certainly lacking; yet the importance of the question cannot be denied, and, what is more, it will be impossible under the new arrangements to overlook it much longer.

When the limit of age was nineteen years, a very fair number of Native candidates passed the examinations, whose names now adorn the Civil Service List. At the last examinations six Native candidates passed, which, it must be admitted, was rather a formidable percentage out of the total number, and in coming years this high percentage, as already stated, may be expected to increase largely. The serious question before the Government is, How large an admixture of the Native element is it prepared to allow in the Civil Service of India? We take it that the enlightened object which the Government of India has in view is the gradual elevation and civilisation of all classes under its administration, and with this desire members of each class have been pushed with a parental care into the best positions they showed themselves qualified for. This has been done with the double object of allowing the Native community a fair share in the administration, and of encouraging all classes to try and raise themselves in the social scale. That it has often been done to the actual detriment of the administration cannot be denied. At the same time the principle that there must be a large European element in all the superior grades of the Uncovenanted Service has been always recognised. If this is the case with the inferior service, and it cannot be denied that it is so, how much more does the argument apply to the Covenanted Service, which is the backbone of the administration. If the Government is firmly resolved that it can never allow a representative assembly which would take the controlling power out of its hands, it has equally good grounds for holding that the bulk of the administration must be in English hands. Yet as matters now stand, if we can imagine the Civil Service examinations being inundated by ambitious Native youths, there is the possibility of nearly the whole of the successful candidates each year being Natives of India.

It may be objected that this is an extreme view of the case, but still we would argue, in the words of the patriarch, if per-adventure ten of the total number were not Natives of India, would the Government still accept twenty Native civilians out of a total of, say, thirty passed candidates in one year? It is necessary, in fact, to fix some limit, and what does the Government of India regard as the right limit? It is prepared to allow a system of competitive examinations to be an open door by which the higher administration may be made more than half Native when a strong European element is carefully preserved in the lower branches of the service? No doubt the suggestion that only a certain percentage of Native candidates should be admitted will at first be received with strong disapproval, but the reasonableness of it, and the necessity for it, must at once be obvious. The Civil Service examinations, although competitive, are not open to the whole world. In addition to this, without entering into the question of intellectual capacity, it must be remembered that India sends up candidates from a population of more than two hundred millions against some thirty millions in the United Kingdom. If the number of Native candidates who may pass is left unlimited up to the full number allowed each year, then it may be expected that the rush of Natives from India to England will in a few years be very large indeed. To the credit of the race it must be said that there is no limit to their ambition, and the sacrifices endured by students for the University examinations in India, where the reward is uncertain and often disappointing, are a fair index of the efforts that will be made to secure the highest prizes the Government has in its gift. But if it were distinctly understood that only a small percentage of the passed candidates could be Natives the rush would be at once stopped, and only likely candidates belonging to the wealthier and more respectable classes would incur the cost of going to England. What proportion of Natives of India should be admitted is a matter that would require careful consideration, but if this proportion was fixed, then, even if it was again found desirable to reduce the age limit in England to nineteen years, Native candidates could with perfect justice be allowed two years more, so as to place them on an equal footing.

THE OPIUM TRAFFIC.

(Pioneer.)

For a long time the favourite argument of Sir Joseph Pease and his friends of the anti-opium crusade was that India was directly responsible for the consumption of opium in China. The recent returns, however, of the Chinese Imperial Customs have shown that this contention was too absurd for even an anti-opium crusader to maintain, and we were curious to see the new line of attack. The curiosity is gratified in the issue of the Friend of China, which contains the full reports of the speeches delivered at a great palaver held in Exeter Hall last June. The lion of the function was Canon Wilberforce, who, with all the authority of a winter's tour in India, ravished his hearers with awful accounts of the opium dens of Lucknow and Bombay, and graphic descriptions of the "cannon-balls" of opium he saw manufactured at Patna. The Canon is one of the most respectable of the Exeter Hall fraternity, but no more than his brethren is he proof against the rabies of fanaticism. In reply to the argument that India was not responsible for the consumption of the drug in China Canon Wilberforce was content to quote the remark of somebody, whom he called cleverer than himself, to the effect that:—"This is the rogue's motto all over the world: 'I do not do the evil—I only profit by it.'" It is the fatal defect of the fanatic that he cannot make distinctions—with him every rule is absolute, and he would undertake the government of the world with no other equipment than a few copy-book headings; he cannot see that the heavens will not fall even if injustice be committed, or that it would be exceedingly hard on a great many just people if they did. We suppose the sort of the persons the Canon's friend had in view are those who pretend the good and perform the evil; such, for instance, as a dissenting parson of whom we read in the current Quarterly Review who preaches on Sundays and writes doubtful literature for Shoe-lane on week-days, but the Government of India in their relations to the consumption of opium in China are not in the same case at all. The dissenting parson and his similars do evil which would not otherwise have been done and profit by it; even if the opium trade were unmitigated evil it would exist whether the Government of India were to be constituted anew on Exeter Hall principles to-morrow. It is mere moral pedantry to say that we should not make what profit we can out of a trade with China which the Chinese Government itself recognises and permits. This even on the supposition that the consumption of opium must necessarily be an evil; but there is really no ground for such an assumption. We deplore as much as Canon Wilberforce some of the sights in the Indian opium dens; but we would not absolutely prohibit beer and alcohol in England because there are numerous drunkards. The Canon seems to think that every opium smoker must become a physical wreck; but what of the Sikhs and Rajputs, with whom the use of opium in one form or another is habitual? And what of the advantages of the drug as a protection against the results of malaria? Edmund Burke was not an intemperate man, or one who liked intemperance in others, but one of the most courageous things he ever wrote was a defence of gin. According to Canon Wilberforce, Burke must have been no better than a rogue. Shelley once said that he would rather be damned with Plato than go to heaven with Paley; and the man of common sense must take his chance with Burke rather than with Exeter Hall.

PUNJAB EXCISE.

(Bombay Gazette.)

There is something of the nervous dexterity with which, according to the proverb, the cat walks on hot bricks, in Sir James Lyall's recent review of the excise administration of the Punjab for the past year. The Government have to account for an excise income exceeding by nearly a lakh and a-half that of the previous year, and this includes an addition of 15,000 gallons, or nearly 10 per cent., to the receipts from still-head duty as compared with the previous year. With the fear of Mr. Caine before his eyes, the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab says that if this increase signified an absolute increase in drinking, it could not be regarded with much complacency. But the familiar explanation that it only means that illicit drinking has taken the place of illicit is brought in aid. In most districts where the revenue has gone up special attention has been directed to illicit distillation, and it is "a fair inference," Sir James Lyall thinks, that these repressive measures have had their effect. Proof, we should have thought, would have been more satisfying than fair inferences, and the Punjab Government seem to be conscious of this when they say that though this explanation may account for a considerable portion of the recorded increase, yet what remains is probably real. Mr. Caine will no doubt regard this admission as an invitation to look in upon what is going on in the Punjab when he comes this way a few weeks hence. The question of a standard ratio of drinking houses to population appears to have engaged the attention of the Punjab authorities, as a year or two since, according to the famous four-hundred page despatch, it was engaging the attention of the department in the North-West Provinces. There seems to be an enormous variation in the ratio in various districts. In Hazara, for example, with a population of less than four hundred thousand, nearly all Mahomedans, there are sixty-four shops; while in the Umballa district, with a population of more than a million, forty shops are found to suffice. The Punjab Government are right in holding that in some districts there are too many drinking shops; whether they are equally right in the conclusion that in other districts there are too few, is another question; and their declaration upon this point challenges discussion as to whether it is the duty of Government to fix a standard ratio of drinking houses to population to which the authorities ought gradually to "work up." A gradual "working down"—to is another matter, though even this would need to be done with a discreet regard to the legitimate requirements of the public and to vested interests, State and private. Sir James Lyall avoids embarrassing conclusions by simply observing that "the matter is one almost wholly depending on local knowledge, and not to be suddenly decided."

THE INDUSTRIAL PROBLEM.

(Madras Times.)

Among students of the subject of India's ancient and modern industries, Captain F. Beaulerck takes a prominent position. His name now appears among the signatures to a paper anent the establishment of "The Industrial Association of Western India." No other European name accompanies Captain F. Beaulerck's, but perhaps the project apparently due greatly to his instigation will lose nothing by being chiefly supported by Natives of India. The main objects of the Association are praiseworthy enough, though there are signs that its promoters entertain a rather exaggerated idea of the importance of the ancient industries of this country, and desire to work upon lines that might almost be called reactionary. They allude to the "collapse of India's handicrafts under the competition of European machine-made fabrics," and from the "only partial revival" in Calcutta and Bombay they pass on to "the interests of the mining enterprise at the mercy of transport, the general disorganisation, in fact, of Indian industrial life and even the danger of its annihilation." It might be logically deduced from remarks such as these that their framers have an idea that European competition has placed the interests of the mining enterprise in India at the mercy of transport; and the strange manner in which the paper referred to opens may cause many to doubt whether the solution of a difficult problem is being attempted by the most competent persons. It implied in one sentence that India is in peril because she is "too entirely" dependent on agricultural effort and produce for her food supplies. Apparently this means that our Industrial reformers think it a mistake that India should be entirely self-dependent as regards her food supplies, and are of opinion that instead of devoting herself to agriculture, insuring liberal supplies, and developing her export trade with other countries she should bestow more attention upon industrial and artistic development, and not allow her arts and her industries to decay. As India's people require something more than mere food it may be admitted that their attention should not be confined to agriculture. But on no account should any attempt be made to disparage national self-dependence, whether in regard to food supplies, clothing, tools and implements, or anything else ordinarily required by man.

If it frames its programme carefully such an Association as that here alluded to may do good. Judging from the paper before us, the important question is to be studied, whether the decay of industries and art is owing to the "shrinking of the national capital available for industrial effort, or to the loss of national energy or skill, or whether it is not rather only a passing depression caused by the sudden and unexpected contact of European competition." No doubt it is advisable that this subject should be closely studied; but, after all, though the past can teach much, any body of men professing to promote industrial and artistic development must also look closely to the present. The two branches referred to can hardly be bracketed together, however. Art may be wise in chiefly looking back. "Revival" is the key-note to be struck in this case, and progress should run upon the lines of the past, lately hidden or so much overlooked. With industries it is different. For many years past evolution, now difficult to distinguish from "revolution," has shown revival to be impossible. Revival means hand labour, road communications, and hand or animal transport. Revolution has brought out machine labour, the iron road, the locomotive, and the steamer; and any progress that is to be made must be based upon a system intended to turn to best advantage the chief discoveries of modern science. For this reason, reluctance is likely to be shown in accepting such doctrines as are now put forward by men who class industries and arts together, and who even urge upon Government that the sole safeguard of the poorer classes against famine lies in the rehabilitation of an industrial system "based as of old on diverse employments, and suited to the genius of the people." In India, the genius of the people is now no more stationary, no more unchangeable than it is in other countries. Diverse employments are available, and they need no Association to protect them. What is really needed is that each of the many trades, industries and employments should be brought to a higher standard; that special training should be given in the place of that hereditary training which seems to be losing ground and deteriorating in quality; and that the advantages of the division of labour and those occasionally derivable, even where manual labour is cheap, from a discreet application of machinery, should be made apparent to India's masses.

There are two great difficulties in the way of the satisfactory solution of the industrial problem in India. It has to be determined to what extent industrial arts shall be deliberately pushed at the expense of agriculture; and the lines have to be selected upon which industrial progress shall be attempted. The latter point being taken first, it may be fairly argued that the choice of particular arts and the establishment of technical schools for the purpose of imparting instruction respecting these arts, though useful, is not sufficient. If the industries of India are again to assume a prominent place, they will, in all probability, have to adapt themselves to modern requirements by following a similar course to that adopted in respect to the cotton industry. If Europeans and the most intelligent among the Natives find the brains and the machinery, while the poorer classes of Natives do the manual work necessary, then other industries can be developed as well as those of cotton-spinning, woollen spinning, paper making, and the others already established. Ship-building seems to be a lost art in this country. Iron foundries are to be found, but there are few worthy of comparison with English foundries. For her guns, her boilers, her steam engines, her machinery generally, India has to go to England, although her history exhibits records of good work done in various branches in the past, of such a kind as to show that the material and the workers are at hand if some one be found ready to organise the means of utilising both in much wider fields than of old. It seems to us that there is a risk of industrial reformers or revivalists devoting too much of their attention to the less important industries, and virtually walking backwards when they should be steadily trying to advance. It is idle to think of purely manual labour competing on favourable terms with machinery. But there is no reason why machinery should not be turned to much better account than at present. In the West handicrafts have given way in many directions before the advance of mechanical industries. In the East, also, prospects of progress greater when such industries are cultivated than when any attempt is made to return to or to revive the anæmic handicrafts whose former strength and beauty are known to us only by tradition, by history, or by some few lingering specimens of their product.

THE INDIAN RAILWAYS.

(Bombay Gazette.)

We hear that the chief Guaranteed Railway Companies in India have requested the Secretary of State to veto certain sections of the Indian Railway Act, 1890, which came into force on the 1st of May last. These sections, say the directors of the various lines, interfere with the contracts made direct with the great Indian Railways under powers created by the Imperial Legislature. They urge, therefore, that no power inferior to that of the Imperial Legislature can abrogate the contracts or release the Secretary of State in Council from them, and that the Governor-General in Council has certainly no such power. On the faith of these express contracts the Guaranteed Railway Companies have expended very large sums, and it is impossible, the directors maintain, that the Secretary of State could desire to repudiate them, or that he can possibly do so; and as the Secretary of State cannot himself commit a breach of any such contract, it follows that he should prevent anyone, over whom he has absolute legal control, from doing or attempting to do for him that which he would not do for himself. He has, in this matter, as they point out, absolute legal control over the Indian Legislature. We may give a few instances in which the new Indian Railway Act is felt to seriously affect the contracts between the leading companies and the Secretary of State. Chapter III. provides for the execution by the Companies of additional accommodation and other works at any time on the requisition of the Governor-General in Council. The Companies strongly object to being subject at any time to any such requisition, on the ground that they have already, under their contracts with the Secretary of State in Council, duly completed to his satisfaction all their railways with such works and convenience as the Secretary of State considered necessary or expedient. Again, Chapter V. virtually repeals the provisions in previous contracts as regards rates and tolls, and the management of the railways, and creates a new tribunal with absolute powers over the rates and tolls to be charged by the Companies, and over their management of their lines. Chapters VI., VII., VIII., IX., and X. also interfere with the rights of the Companies under contracts. The new Indian Act is based on the English Act, but there is no fair analogy between Indian and English railways. In England the State owns no railways, and the Railway Commission there is perfectly impartial. Here, as we in Bombay especially know to our cost, the State is a powerful and tyrannical rival, and it would certainly seem inexpedient to give the strongest competitor, even if it terms itself the Government of India, absolute power over its rivals. For this reason the directors of the great Guaranteed Companies request the Secretary of State to veto the obnoxious sections; failing that, they are, we learn, determined to resist the enforcement of these provisions by litigation. This is a subject in which the large body of shareholders in the various companies are directly interested. The obnoxious sections, if allowed to remain in force, would depreciate the value of the shares, and enable the Government to purchase the railways, when they fall in, at a depreciated value. This would be an injustice to the shareholders, and could not but have a prejudicial effect on the credit of the Indian Government.

KASHMIR.

(Indian Spectator.)

The correspondence on the subject of Kashmir, so far as it has been published, does, indeed, show that the Government of India and the Secretary of State were warranted in handing over the administration of the State to a Council on account of the incompetency and mal-administration of the Maharajah. But it must be remembered that such correspondence, which alone is now available to the public for the formation of an opinion on the question, may scarcely tell the other side of the story. It is difficult, by any means, either to agree or sympathise with those who perpetually carp at the British Government for its interference with the Native States. The Native Chiefs and Princes ought to have, no doubt, liberty of action allowed them as regards the internal administration of their States; but the British Government, as the Paramount Power, is not only entitled, but is morally bound to see that the liberty does not pass into licence, and that the Princes do not tyrannise over their subjects and behave towards them in a manner contrary to the enlightened spirit of the age. At the same time no Native Prince ought to be deprived of power without a fair trial by his peers. It is often said that Residents and Political Agents are the responsible representatives of the British Government in Native States, and when a Resident or a Political Agent reports unfavourably about the Prince to whose State he is credited the Government is bound to act upon it. But Residents and Political Agents are, after all, fallible, and may err. When a Resident or Political Agent complains that a Prince is not behaving well he stands in the position of a prosecutor, and the Prince must be given every opportunity of answering the charges against him. It would have been better, therefore, if the Maharajah of Kashmir had such an opportunity given him at a trial by his peers before the Government took the step of depriving him of power. The Government of India, perhaps, thought that a trial would create a sort of sensation and breed agitation; and that it was better to act in the matter quietly. But quiet steps of the kind subjects the action of the Government of India, even where it may be right, to misunderstanding, which ought to be avoided as far as possible.

BENGAL.

(August 26.)

A BEERBHOOM case, which came up at the Calcutta High Court the other day, exhibits, says the Englishman, in a striking manner the difference between Hindoo and Mahomedan superstitions. Hinduism holds that every supernatural being is a god; that is, an incarnation or manifestation of the Supreme Being, and entitled therefore to homage and propitiatory offerings. This idea is abomination to the followers of the Prophet, the first article of whose terse creed is that there is but one God. Islam, however, permits of the belief in an unlimited number of ghosts and goblins, who are all to be treated as enemies, to be anathematised and repulsed, but on no account to be compounded with or conciliated. The case at Beerbhoom, then, was this: There was a desirable piece of land lying waste, because it was reputed to be haunted by a goddess who resented interference with her domain. The Hindoos did all they could to propitiate her, setting apart a tree for her abode, erecting an idol in her honour under the tree, and making offerings to it of fruit and flowers. Still, the goddess continued implacable, and on one man venturing to cultivate some of the land, she caused him and his children to be carried off by death. Eventually, some Mahomedan neighbours, laughing to scorn the Hindoo superstition, undertook to reclaim the land, but the goddess presented herself before one of them as a frightful ogre, and although he religiously set her down as a veritable hobgoblin, that only increased his terror. But a brother religionist argued that a Hindoo goddess ought to have no chance in fair fight with the followers of the Prophet. So the Mahomedans, under his leadership, proceeded with a cow to the goddess's tree, and killed it there, placing parts of the carcass among the branches, and even smearing the idol with its blood. As the result of this defiant outrage the goddess was completely routed. Indeed, she would never have been heard of again, but that her devotees were inconsolable and set the Penal Code in operation against her oppressors, so that five of the Mahomedans were sentenced to imprisonment for "outraging religious susceptibilities," as our impartial law puts it. From the Hindoo point of view all this is as it should be; but to the Mahomedans it will appear that the Government has taken the part of the hobgoblin, when they were defending themselves against its unprovoked and malicious hostility.

MADRAS.

(August 27.)

SPEAKING at a public meeting called by the Congress party on the evening of August 25th, Mr. Norton gave an account of the campaign of the Congress delegates in England. Mr. Norton denounced the Conservative party as a stupid party, and announced that the Congress party would during the seven next months declare openly in favour of the Radical party. He regarded the postponement of the Councils Bill as favourable for the Congress movement. Mr. Norton also alluded to the degrading political serfdom existing in India, and spoke contemptuously of the British officials in this country. The meeting was a large one numerically, half of the persons present being lads. He was the only European present omitting Press representatives. Other speakers were Mr. Salem Ramasamy Mudelliar, Mr. Ananda Charlu, Dr. Pulney Andy, and Mr. Sankara Menon. Mr. Norton emphatically contradicted the statement that either delegates to England had received any pecuniary assistance from the Congress funds.

H.H. THE MAHARAJAH OF MYSORE has returned to Bangalore from Madras, his early departure being due to the present unhealthy condition of this city.

ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-NINE persons died of cholera last week, the death-rate being 74½ per thousand.

BOMBAY.

(August 29.)

MR. H. C. MILES acts as Political Agent, Khairpur, during the absence of Lieutenant-Colonel A. H. Mayhew on privilege leave.

MR. S. N. TAGORE, District Judge and Sessions Judge, Sholapur-Bijapur, has been granted special leave, on urgent private affairs, for four months.

DR. P. PETERSON, Professor of Oriental Languages in the Elphinstone College, has been granted furlough for fourteen months.

COLONEL R. I. CRAWFORD, Chairman Kurrachee Port Trust, has been granted privilege leave for three months. Mr. R. N. Coghlan, Vice-Chairman, will act for him.

AMONGST the passengers who arrived here from Europe by the last mail steamer were Captain Hext, R.N., C.I.E., the Director of the Indian Marine; Mr. F. D. Little, C.E., Executive Engineer, Northern Division; and Major-General Sir J. Baker.

IN deference to a suggestion by the Committee of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, Reuter will, in the course of a few days, give in his commercial telegrams the daily quotation for Bar Silver in New York, and the demand rate of Exchange in New York on London.

THE hearing of the case in which Mr. P. M. Mody stands charged, at the instance of Mr. Symington, the Secretary of the Queen Insurance Company, with cheating in respect of a claim for Rs. 40,000, arising out of the Apollo-street fire, was again resumed before Mr. Cooper at the Esplanade Police Court on Monday, when, after Mr. Craigie had addressed the court for upwards of two and a-half hours, the accused (his client) was committed to the ensuing Criminal Sessions.

THE subjoined is a summary of the Bombay Presidency season reports for the past week:—Rain throughout the Presidency. More wanted in Ahmednagar, Sholapur, and Dharwar generally, and in parts of Ahmedabad, Nasik, Poona, Satara, and Bijapur. Agricultural operations progressing in some districts, but retarded in parts of Bijapur for want of rain. Young crops suffering from drought in parts of Poona, Ahmednagar, Sholapur, Bijapur, and Baroda; damaged by rats, locusts, or other insects in a few talukas of Sind; otherwise good. Fodder sufficient, except in parts of Nasik, Poona, Ahmednagar, Sholapur, Bijapur, and Dharwar. Agricultural stock healthy, except in parts of Hyderabad, Nasik, Ahmednagar, and Sholapur.

Mr. Byramjee Jeejeebhoy, C.S.I., has given a handsome donation of Rs. 3,50,000 for the purpose of establishing an Anglo-Vernacular School for poor Parsees after the manner of the Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy Parsee Benevolent Institution.

Mr. Byramjee has appointed Messrs. Sorabjee Shapoorjee Bengallee, C.I.E., Rustomjee N. Byramjee Jeejeebhoy, P. N. Wadia, and Khan Bahadur Rustomjee Jamaspjee Ashburner trustees of the proposed charity. The trustees, we understand, intend to purchase Mr. Nowrojee Wadia's house, which is one of the largest buildings in the fort, for the new school. We are sorry to state that Mr. Byramjee Jeejeebhoy is at present seriously ill, and his medical attendants have given up all hopes of his recovery. Mr. Byramjee's charities are always of a catholic nature, and he has in the present instance extended his munificence to his own co-religionists, as there is a great want felt for an educational institution of the kind for the poorer classes of the community. Mr. Byramjee, who has established educational institutions at Tanna, Poona, Ahmedabad, and elsewhere, has also given Rs. 8,000 for the purpose of establishing a school at Bhowndy, near Tanna.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES AND PUNJAB.

(August 27.)

A NUMBER of Europeans who formed part of the running staff of the North-Western Railway have been thrown out of employment, owing to reduction of establishment in consequence of decreased traffic. As their deposits in the provident fund have not yet been paid them, says the Lahore paper, several Europeans who, not long ago, worked as drivers and guards on the N.-W. Railway, are to be seen wandering about in a state of temporary destitution; because, as they allege, their deposits in the provident fund have not yet been paid to them. Four such Europeans have recently applied to be admitted into the Lahore workhouse; and there are likely to be more applicants. To say that this is not as it should be, if the men's explanation of the cause of their destitution is correct, is mild.

INDIAN OFFICERS AND THE RUPEE.

(Army and Navy Gazette.)

THE question of the rupee is one that affects Indian officers very seriously, and it is not to be wondered at that it should arise periodically. It has come to the front again, in the columns of the Times. Successive Governments have been appealed to in vain to remove the hardship, and it is to be hoped that Lord Cross will see his way to ameliorate the evil, which presses severely in the cases of married officers whose families are in England, and who are obliged, therefore, to keep up two homes. We doubt, however, whether any immediate settlement of the difficulty is probable. Those who are the victims of the system do well to agitate in the matter, for it is only by agitation that such injustices can be brought home to those in authority. The officers in the Indian Army have our sympathy, and may reckon upon our support if any satisfactory solution of the problem of "exchange" can be suggested. But it must be admitted that the matter is a complicated one, and allowances have to be made for the India Office, which finds itself on the horns of a dilemma. India has at the present time many representatives in the House of Commons. If Indian officers could induce one of these to espouse their cause there might be a reasonable prospect of something being done to alleviate the injustice under which they undoubtedly suffer. What has Sir Richard Temple to say on the subject? It would be interesting to know what his views are, for there is no one who is better qualified to express an opinion, and we may be certain that any proposals emanating from so high an authority would carry weight both with the India Office and the individuals whose interests are affected. Sir Richard Temple is fortunately a member of the House of Commons, and a much-respected and very zealous member, too. Any efforts which he might make to bring about a settlement of the question could not fail to produce their effect. Our advice to the officers who are agitating is to obtain, if possible, the support of such a champion as this. If they did so, there would be a prospect, perhaps, of legislative action, but we doubt the efficacy of the means hitherto adopted. Departments are always hard to move, and it is only by concerted action in the House of Commons that such questions can be brought under notice with reasonable prospects of success.

THE BURMA RUBY MINES (LIMITED).—The Shares of this Company were last quoted on Saturday 1-16 dis. to 1-16 prem.

THE MYSORE-WYNAAD CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINING COMPANY (LIMITED).—An extraordinary general meeting of this company will be held on Friday, Sept. 19, "for the purpose of receiving a report from the directors as to the result of their negotiations with the Government of Mysore. We understand this to mean that the Mysore-Wynaad and the Mysore West Companies have succeeded in purchasing from the Mysore Government an important block of auriferous land lying between the properties of the Nundydroog and the Balaghat-Mysore Companies.

A DUEL BETWEEN ELEPHANTS.

It was my good fortune, writes a correspondent to a Karachi paper, a few years ago to spend some months every season in a fine forest and hill country, where my duties gave me chances of seeing a great deal of elephant, bison, and other big game that frequented those parts, and also brought me a good deal in contact with the hill people—Munans, Muthnars, and others—who had to deliver their hill produce for the established Government rewards. Many were the yarns I used to enjoy with these simple folk, and in connection with the ivory brought in I was often interested in the stories of how it had been found, and more than one fine pair of tusks had a story attached to them of fights which had brought their owners to grief. On one occasion a tusk was brought broken in several pieces; this had been occasioned by a fight which had smashed the ivory while the animal still lived. Another very handsome pair I remember being brought in, the result of a fall of an elephant that had lost its life on precipitous ground where it had gone after the wild plantains. I saw the scene of the fall some time afterwards, and a furrow down the precipice showed where the ill-fated beast had carried vegetation and stones with it on its downward slide. The finest and best tusk, however, came from the tragic fights that the hill people described as going on sometimes for days, till the fate of one or other of the combatants was decided.

I had been some years on the hills, and witnessing the beginning of such fights, but in two cases of what appeared to me to be trials of strength between rivals either our own neighbourhood or the interference of other members of the herd (in one instance of two old females) interrupted, and broke up the fight, but at last I had an opportunity of witnessing such a scene as the Munans had described.

Our camp was on a partially isolated hill, a good deal above the surrounding country, and with a view for miles of hill and dale, forest and stream, a beautiful grazing-ground for herds of bison, deer, and elephant. It was interesting to watch the animals, both in herds and as solitary males, feeding in the open glades, where, from our post above, they were plainly visible.

We had been some days in camp, but had not been visited as usual by our friends the elephants, when one afternoon the sudden bellow of one evidently in pain roused everyone in the camp. A hill man presently came up to say that two large tuskers were hard at it close by. Everyone turned out on to the hillside, from where it was easy, even with the naked eye, to see what was going on, while with a glass even the movements of a startled deer could be made out.

About 700 or 800 yards below the crowd watching the fight were the two tuskers. The one somewhat nearer us, a burly stout-built beast with short, powerful tusks, was evidently getting much the worst of the combat, and the white and red furrows in his sides and rear plainly indicated seams run by his antagonist's tusks; blood could be seen trickling down his head and shoulders. On the rise of the hill was the rival, a still larger animal, possessing the advantage of longer gleaming tusks. It was a lost fight, and in a few minutes the victor with a quick rush at the other made good a thrust at the side, and, though there was a severe struggle the tusk went its full length into the now beaten brute, and using all his weight the victor pressed him down the hill, where they disengaged themselves and prepared for another bout. The wounded tusker's roars of pain and rage were pitiful to hear, and though he would have escaped if he could, the other kept close behind and administered thrust after thrust, but not in any vital part. Separating again they both stood on a piece of open land, where the grass was short enough to allow a clear sight, and the wounds were then visible on both. The fight had apparently lasted some days, and even the victor had by no means escaped severe cuts and rips which showed open and gory.

Presently wheeling round they raced and came together with a mighty smash. This was about the only stand made, and was quickly overpowered by the more powerful and fresher victor. The thrusts now put behind the shoulder and into the body quickly disabled the poor brute, and in fact in a few minutes the combat finally was over; the conqueror with one rush completely rolling his enemy over, and by repeated thrusts into the prostrate form finishing the fight amidst moanings and trumpeting. Darkness ended our view of the finish, though sounds could still be heard of smashing reeds and occasional trumpeting. All this time there was no sign of the herd, which had, however, been near, for next morning on our proceeding to look for the tuskers we found a large herd in an excited state almost on the spot where the finish had occurred. In it were several small tuskers, besides the big conqueror of the evening before, who seemed to instill a great deal of fear into the youngsters. He came now into the open glade with a fine young female, and as he approached even the other cows there was a general stampede out of his way.

With my glasses it was plain the victory had not been a cheap one, as his head was swollen to a huge size, and festering sores on the sides and shoulders showed gaping wounds. He now moved towards where the two had last been seen, and I followed him and the cow into the wood below the scene of the last struggle. Winding us he moved away, and we came on the dead beast which had been butted and rolled, after it was killed, into a clump of bamboos, which had saved it from rolling down the hill. It had been a fine, burly animal, but was marked from forehead to rear and from top to foot by rips and cuts, while the bowels were protruding at several places. He measured 9 feet 6 inches at the shoulder, and the tusks, which were taken by the hill men, proved slightly over 100 lbs. the pair. The victor, which in the fight appeared to tower over his foe, must have been quite ten feet high, and had the longest tusks I have ever seen clear of their sockets. I tried to get him, but what with his harem about him, and the difficulty of getting a clear view in the long grass, I failed to get a shot, though people watching on the hill above told me I had been within a few feet of him, and they wondered I had not fired.

The cows, however, had winded us, and the whole herd moved rapidly away, and, although we quickly followed, and more than once got close up, it was impossible to pick out the tusker clear of the herd in such a sea of grass, and eventually they took the alarm and went off, leaving the dead tusker to the vultures and kites.

THE GANGES IN FLOOD.

A correspondent of an up-country paper gives the subjoined account of the Ganges in flood:—Of all the changes that the rainy season brings to the landscape of Northern India, there is none so remarkable as the transformation of its huge river-beds. Standing on the Ganges Bridge at Cawnpore, and looking up stream, the main feature that strikes the eye is, for three parts of the year, the long monotonous level of grey sand that stretches between the green of either bank. The same glaring expanse of white is there day after day, and only for a short space in the evening does the yellow sunlight, falling from behind the high bluffs which guard the Cawnpore side of the river, give another tinge to the scene, and turn the dull-hued sands to a momentary gold. But the view from the bridge is very different now. The high bluffs have disappeared, and only a thin fringe of green marks the outline of the Cawnpore bank. Below this and right away to the horizon the eye meets nothing but a broad expanse of moving waters. There are no dull hues now, but the mingling of earth and sky gives in the moist air a wealth of brilliant and variegated colour-fancies. On the Oudh side of the river no bank, excepting the low breakwater near the railway, exists at all; for the floods have covered the mainland, and have made it seem part of the mighty stream that is rushing beneath us. Perhaps, however, that far waste of waters with its occasional patches of higher ground and groups of half-submerged trees gives rather the idea of a succession of endless trees—

“With all their fairy crowds
Of islands, that together lie,
As quietly as spots of sky,
Among the evening clouds.”

But these are only accessories to the great central feature, the vast stretch of the advancing river which comes as it were from the sunset land and moves on deep and irresistible in its downward course. Here is no vulgar brawl, as in the varying surge and whirl of a mountain torrent, but a smooth unruffled surface, which almost belies the terrific rate at which the stream is really moving; and the only sound an even muffled roar as the water strikes the buttresses of the bridge and makes a tumult which ceases almost to be a tumult because it lasts for ever. For the rest, it is no “priestlike task” on which these moving waters are engaged. Watch for a moment as they pass rapidly down-stream the different evidences of the destruction wrought by the floods that the river bears on its bosom—here a piece of thatch or planking, there a gurra or some earthen vessel of the kind; sometimes even a bullock, alive or dead, as the case may be, all tell the same tale of loss and desolation. In different directions across the floods on the Oudh side can be seen the roofs of submerged villages, the inhabitants of which, refusing to be warned in time, had in many cases to spend nights and days on the branches of neighbouring trees waiting for rescue, and exposed meantime to starvation and the inclemencies of sun and rain. But this is not all. There is a sudden rush of spectators to the side of the bridge as the form of a human being is observed floating helplessly in midstream. He is supported by a log of wood under each arm, and as he nears the bridge his eyes are lifted towards the last hope of human aid. It is not in vain, for two ropes are thrown to him, which he clutches as he passes, and drops the logs of wood which have hitherto acted as his life-preservers. Then the strain of pulling him up begins; but, alas, almost at one the treacherous ropes break, and the poor wretch sinks headlong into the depths, and is whirled away to a grave beneath the warters. Yet this unfortunate creature is only one of the many that the Great River God has of late claimed for his own; while it would be at the present time almost impossible to estimate the world of human misery and disaster which has been caused by the flooding of the Ganges. The miles and miles of rotten cultivation which the receding inundation will leave behind it is bound surely to add no inconsiderable quota to the ruin which the excessive rainfall has already caused to the "kharif"—the crop, by the bye, on which the "poor man" chiefly depends for his subsistence throughout the year. So much the better for the Baniahs no doubt. But we Englishmen, accustomed as we are, many of us to look out on India with the limited horizon afforded by routine of station life are sometimes perhaps too apathetic in our regard for the miseries and wants of the people amidst whom we live, and give, it may be a certain justification to the strictures of our French critics, who almost invariably impute that great defect, a hopeless lack of sympathy, to our otherwise wise irreproachable rule. Not that in the present case the district officials concerned have not done all that was humanly possible to alleviate suffering and distress. But those does not alter the fact that if such a flood as the one described above, where dozens of villages have been inundated, and thousands of poor people rendered destitute and homeless, had happened in England, it would have sent a wave of deep-stirred sympathy and companion rolling over the land, and would not have ceased till its story and been told to the furthest end of Europe.

Miscellaneous.

THE Amir intends personally to go through the accounts of Naib Sultan of Kabul, who has for some time been suspected of misappropriating Government money.

THE Novoye Vremya's announcement concerning the intentions of the Ameer of Afghanistan is one, a contemporary judges, that may be safely ignored. The Ameer could not embark on his own account upon a course of negotiations and embassies with Russia without directly violating the tenor of his engagements to the British Government; and a commercial treaty with Russia is a transaction which he would know could not be kept secret. That he may be taking steps in that direction with the knowledge of the Government here is an alternative supposition negatived by the fact that nothing is known of the matter in India, as well as by the certainty that any arrangement of the kind in which he might be wanted to join by Russia would necessarily be opposed to British interests.

THE Pioneer draws attention to "a curious feature in the transmission of money over India, which is brought to notice by the Head Commissioner of Paper Currency in his last annual report. The bulk of silver bullion imported into India is for obvious reasons landed in Bombay, and presented to the mint there for coinage. When any of this money is wanted in Calcutta, it is sent over in Bombay notes at the trifling cost of registration through the post, and can then be sold in Calcutta at another trifle of discount of, say, half an anna per cent., and paid into the Treasury at par for Government dues, such as the purchase of opium. In this way the banks move their money across India at Government expense. The amount of Bombay notes cashed at the Calcutta Currency Office during the year 1889-90 was more than two crores, as against 32 lakhs of Calcutta notes cashed at Bombay, and of course Government had to move money over to meet the difference. Another reason this against the contention that Government should undertake to cash all notes at any office; the risk can be now grasped by the most opinionated."

THE question of the organisation of the forces of our Empire of Hindostan, which has for the past four years, or since the deliberations of the Quetta Delimitation Commission, been under the serious consideration of Government, has at last been decided. The Indian army is to consist of four army corps, each 25,000 strong; namely, three standing army corps, one for each of the Presidencies of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay, and one reserve army corps only in time of war. The three army corps are to have their military requirements supplied by two grand arsenals—one at Rawul Pindia, and one at Bellary; the former meeting the requirements of the Bengal Presidency, and the latter, situated as it is midway between Bombay and Madras, supplying the wants of the Madras and Bombay Presidencies. Accordingly, while the present first-class arsenal at Bellary is to be raised and enlarged to the standard of a grand arsenal, the grand arsenal now at Fort St. George is to be reduced to a dépôt. Bellary occupies a central position, 210 miles in a straight line from the Coromandel, and 180 miles from the Malabar coast, and it is in railway communication with Madras, Mysore, Goa, Hyderabad, Bombay, and the far North.

THE NATIONAL INDIAN ASSOCIATION.—A meeting of the members of the National Indian Association was held at Poona on Aug. 16, at Mr. Kirkham's bungalow. Mr. Kirkham, the honorary secretary, read the minutes of the meeting. A sum of Rs. 100 was sanctioned and placed at the disposal of the lady visitors for distribution among the teachers of the different Municipal female schools of the city. Lord and Lady Harris were thanked for becoming patron and patroness. After the meeting Mr. Kirkham introduced Mr. Walsh, the superintendent of the deaf and dumb school of Bombay. Mr. Walsh related a brief history of the progress of the institution. He also said that a public examination of the pupils would be held on Sept. 6, and that most likely Lord Harris would preside.

THE MYSORE PRINCE'S CASE.—In the matter of Hurry Churn Palit v. Sultan Mahomed Bukht, of the Mysore family, Mr. Justice Prinsep delivered the following judgment on facts which have been already reported:—After hearing Mr. Garth for the petitioner—complainant in the Presidency Magistrate's Court—who asks for a rule directing the trial to proceed on the ground that the evidence disclosed the commission of the offence of thefts or some other offence proved against the accused, we have examined the record, and we are not prepared to find on the evidence taken by the Presidency Magistrate that the facts disclose an offence such as would require the accused to be put on his defence. We are by no means satisfied, on the statement of the complainant and of the witnesses, that any offence was committed. The petition is, therefore, refused.

DESTRUCTIVE FLOODS IN BEHAR.—It is impossible to estimate the damage that has been done to the crops in both North and South Behar by the heavy floods, until the rain abates somewhat. Such a rainy season has not been known for years past. The whole country presents the aspect of a submerged waste, and prices have already begun to rise. In most places there will not be more than an eight anna bhadoi crop, and in some places not even that. The dhan has been submerged not only in the deara and low-lying tracts, but in the high lands, too, wherever sown. The raysats say that there is no escape this year from scarcity, if not actual famine. Towards the north several bunds have given way, and some indigo factories have suffered. One factory in the north of Bhagulpur was getting a good outturn when the bund that the proprietors had constructed at considerable expense and trouble gave way, and in one night the best part of the crop was submerged.

A HANDSOME DONATION.—We understand that Mr. Byramjee Jeejeebhoy, C.S.I., has given a handsome donation of Rs. 3,50,000 for the purpose of establishing an Anglo-Vernacular School for poor Parsees, after the manner of the Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy Parssee Benevolent Institution. Mr. Byramjee has appointed Messrs. Sorabjee Shapoorjee Bengallee, C.I.E., Rustomjee N. Byramjee Jeejeebhoy, P. N. Wadia, and Khan Bahadur Rustomjee Jamasjee Ashburner trustees of the proposed charity. The trustees, we understand, intend to purchase Mr. Nowrojee Wadia's house, which is one of the largest buildings in the Fort, for the new school. We are sorry to state that Mr. Byramjee Jeejeebhoy is at present seriously ill, and his medical attendants have given up all hopes of his recovery. Mr. Byramjee's charities are always of a catholic nature, and he has in the present instance extended his munificence to his own co-religionists, as there is a great want felt for an educational institution of the kind for the poorer classes of the community.

THE LATE MR. LAMBERT.—We regret to learn from Karachi of the death there of Mr. G. N. R. Lambert, superintending engineer in Sind, who was for many years employed in the Public Works and Irrigation Departments of the Government Service. The following obituary notice appeared in the Sind official Gazette Extraordinary of Aug. 13:—"The Commissioner in Sind has received, with deep regret, the intelligence of the death of Mr. G. N. R. Lambert, superintending engineer in Sind. Mr. Lambert began his service in Sind as assistant engineer in December, 1868; and during a period of nearly twenty-two years devoted himself with unceasing zeal and industry to the development of the resources of the Province, and the improvement of the condition of the people. In him the State has lost a valuable servant, and the people of the Province a true and trusted friend." Mr. Lambert was a Major in the Sind Volunteer Corps. His remains, followed by an exceptionally large number of friends, were buried with military honours on Wednesday evening, Aug. 13. The Karachi Volunteers, by whom he was much esteemed, attended the funeral and formed the carrying party.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

A CLASS for the training of battery schoolmasters will assemble annually at Kirkee on the 1st October.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL AUCHINLECK, commanding the Presidency District, has arrived in Simla on sixty days' leave.

MAJOR W. WILSON, D.A.A.G., at Army Headquarters, has been granted one year's extension of his appointment.

NON-COMMISSIONED officers proceeding from India to England on furlough are in future not to receive more than one month's pay in advance.

ACCORDING to latest arrangements some 30,000 of the new magazine rifles and 75,000 Martinis will be supplied to the troops in India during the current financial year.

THE four local corps in Rajputana are to be concentrated early in November at Ajmere, where they will be inspected by the Viceroy on his visit to the station.

THE military authorities are likely to take up the question of water-supply and sanitation in cantonments, so as to keep pace with what is being done by the Municipalities.

MAJOR CREIGHTON, late of the 7th Hussars, who was tried last year by General Court-Martial at Secunderabad and sentenced to one year's imprisonment, was released from the Coty Jail on the 15th August.

It is greatly feared that the Lansdowne Institute, now in course of erection at Rawalpindi, will not be completed in time to hold the Soldiers' Industrial Exhibition in it in January next, as was originally intended. At present work on the building progresses very slowly.

HIS Excellency the Governor-General in Council is pleased to sanction the formation of a Volunteer corps to be composed of employes on the Indian Midland Railway and to be designated the "Midland Railway Volunteer Rifles." The corps will be under the orders of the Commander-in-Chief in India.

COLONEL W. C. HOOD, commanding 2nd Battalion Royal West Surrey Regiment, and Colonel G. D. Wahab, commanding 2nd Battalion Lancashire Fusiliers, will be placed on half-pay on the 29th and 24th September next respectively, and have been permitted to proceed home on or after those dates.

THE Government of India having recently had under consideration the question of the procedure for the grant of privilege leave to the administrative officers of the Commissariat-Transport Department, they have decided that, in accordance with the practice obtaining in the Bengal Presidency, the Commissary-General-in-Chief will in future grant such leave to the Commissaries-General, Madras and Bombay, on their application being submitted to him, with the concurrence of the local Commander-in-Chief.

THE Government of India have sanctioned a reallocation of the existing staff of Medical Staff officers in the three Presidencies. The present distribution of the Medical Staff officers, which was decided in 1886, is: Bengal, 202; Madras, 68; and Bombay, 52. But since then changes have been made in the strength of British troops in the several commands. The authorised establishment of 322 Medical Staff officers will, during the ensuing relief season, be carried out strictly in proportion to the number of British troops in each Presidency as follows:—

			Troops.		M.S. Officers.
Bengal	44,498	...	198
Madras	14,825	...	66
Bombay	12,897	...	58

LADY ROBERTS is to be congratulated upon the practical completion of her largest undertaking in connection with the scheme of providing lady nurses for the military hospitals in India. The Quetta Home, which is now ready for occupation, represents an advance on anything that has been done in this way before. Finding that house accommodation was not attainable in Quetta, and that every inch of space in the official buildings was fully occupied, Lady Roberts determined that she would have a building of her own, and suitable plans having been procured, the Home has been privately constructed out of the resources of the Fund without any assistance from Government. It provides comfortable accommodation for three lady nurses, which is as many as the garrison of Quetta will ever require. Lady Roberts will probably pay the Home a visit on her return to India in the spring of next year.

It is notified that in this and future years the Matriculation Examination will not be held at Belgaum. It will be held at the remaining four places only, viz., Bombay, Poona, Ahmedabad, and Karachi.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

DUPLEIX.*

Though the Marquess Dupleix was never, strictly speaking, a Ruler of India, we are too grateful to Colonel Malleon for his delightful sketch of the remarkable career of that great Statesman to cavil with Sir W. W. Hunter for bestowing upon him a title that scarcely belonged to him. Readers of Colonel Malleon's picturesque "History of the French in India" will hardly expect to find anything new or original in this special monograph devoted to the memory of a heaven-born ruler of mankind. They will be pleased, however, that Dupleix's sympathetic biographer does not adopt Lord Stanhope's unworthy estimation of his character. It was not merely vanity and a love of ostentation that prompted Dupleix to indulge in such extraordinary demonstrations of royal magnificence and splendour. Being only human, he may quite possibly have derived some personal satisfaction from the "pomp and circumstance" by which he was surrounded, but his true motives lay deeper below the surface. He fully appreciated the Native love of gorgeous trappings, and, accordingly, in his reception of chiefs, princes, and great noblemen, he spared no expense to dazzle their eyes and charm their understanding. He succeeded, beyond any European who has ever held power, in ingratiating himself with the people of the land, from the highest to the lowest ranks. He thoroughly sympathised with their habits, usages, and prejudices, and troubled himself not at all to introduce Western ideas and simplicity of manners and deportment. On only one occasion did Dupleix allow himself to be led away by personal feelings to the perpetration of a great folly, which is carefully ignored in this otherwise admirable memoir. He was surely unwise in laying the foundations of "Dupleix's City of Victory," and in erecting a pillar of triumph, with its four boastful inscriptions. After the battle of Kaveripati Clive made very short work of this injudicious and defiant trophy, and thereby taught the natives that the great man they had hitherto revered was at least not invincible. Clive's noble defence of Arcot further convinced the princes of Southern India that a powerful rival to Dupleix had appeared upon the scene, gifted with the military genius that had been denied to the French statesman. Though not himself a soldier, and unable to maintain his composure amid the roar of artillery and the clashing of sabres, the French ruler could, nevertheless, plan a campaign, and regulate beforehand the manner in which he desired the military operations to be conducted that had taken their birth in his teeming brain. The Peace of Aix la Chapelle was a cruel blow. Had it been deferred for only a few months the English would have been entirely—perchance temporarily—expelled from Southern India. For all that, Dupleix was at one time practically master of a territory equal in area to that of monarchical France, but he was badly supported by his own Government, while his direct employers, the French East India Company, did well to be displeased with a superintendent of their factories who was more intent on founding an Empire than in sending home large dividends for the gratification of the shareholders in a commercial enterprise. The old India Office in Leadenhall-street would have told a very similar tale. Dupleix was unfortunate in his relations with the really able men who were occasionally sent out from France to supplement the deficiencies of the gouty D'Auteuil and other officers of yet inferior calibre. Unfortunately, it was his ambition to be aut Cesar, aut nullus. It was thus he failed to co-operate harmoniously with the really distinguished Labourdonnais. He failed in like manner to act cordially with the gallant Lally Tolendal. With Bussy, indeed, he got on better, because that excellent officer was almost as much in the Nizam's service as in his own, and was occupied with affairs that did not clash with his own immediate administration. His own sad fate was wholly undeserved, and inflicts an indelible disgrace on the rulers of his own country.

[Pressure on our space to-day obliges us to hold over a number of reviews and notices in type.]

ALL entertainments at Karachi for a fortnight were postponed, owing to the lamented death of Mr. George Lambert, who was most popular with both Europeans and Natives.

THERE was recently a police case in Calcutta in which two policemen entered a zenana in the exercise of their duty. It has excited warm discussion in the vernacular papers. One of these remarks:—"The Bengali blood is cold, and that is why Inspector Kingsley and Constable Panchu had not their heads severed from their bodies when they ventured to enter into the zenana of Nabadwipa Babu."

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1890.

WIDOWHOOD AND INFANT-MARRIAGES IN INDIA.

It is possibly owing to the difficulties which Editors of daily papers here, when London is "out of season," have in finding "copy" that attention is now being given to Indian matters. The Silver Question as it might affect exchange with India or Rupee Paper was, of course, one to be touched upon in due course, but to devote long editorial comments to the questions of Indian widows' treatment and Indian child-marriages shows that our daily contemporaries are striking out a new line of thought for themselves, and leaving for a moment the ancient ways of London journalism during the "silly season." When there is nothing else to write about—the big gooseberry, the shower of frogs, and even the sea-serpent being all stale and unprofitable topics now—India is as good a subject as could come to the editorial hand. And the two Indian questions which some of our morning and evening contemporaries, following the lead of the Times, have just taken up give considerable opportunity for the display of much recondite knowledge on the part of the writers. There is plenty of room for the flowing pens of Fleet-street to indulge in eloquent appeals to the British public on behalf of the Indian widow whose lot is so terrible in the East, or in fiery denunciations of a system which permits the marriages of infants and, in case of the death of the boy-husband, condemns the girl-wife to disgrace and degradation—to, indeed, what has been rightly characterised as a living death. And whether the new interest awakened here has been owing to want of other "copy," or to a real sympathy with India's sorrows, it is something to be grateful for that the leading journals of England take up Indian questions at all.

Both the questions affecting India which are being agitated in the English Press in England just now are far from being new topics. They are questions which have troubled English statesmen in India for many years. The fear of the statesmen has been to hurt the susceptibilities of the Hindus by legislating upon the subject. The idea has been that both were questions on which change or reform could only come from within the Hindu social system itself. It argues well for the good influence which English thought is having upon the East, that English legislation prohibiting child-marriages is likely to be welcomed rather than condemned.
 As to reform in this matter, and in that of the status of Indian widows being brought about by the Hindus themselves, the leading thinkers of that community, who have dared to express their opinions openly, do not certainly encourage this idea. One of these writes:—"I have little faith in Social Reform Associations. They come into being with a flourish of trumpets, and are expected to effect all sorts of good. Their constitution is determined upon, rules are framed, pledges are signed, and penalties are fixed for defaulters. And what happens? One by one the pledgers slink away under one pretext or another, and eventually their organisation dissolves into darkness. Whatever the checks and penalties you may introduce in a voluntary organisation, they are of no avail if the members are wanting in the spirit of earnest, genuine reform."

All who have had experience of Indian ways when questions of social change or reform have been suggested, will endorse the truth of this. But the writer emphasises his argument further:—

"A wise law educated the people out of the horrible notion of Suttee, and a wise law can educate the people out of other notions too, no less horrible, which are as an incubus on the rise and progress of our community. And be it remembered there was no education among our people in those days. Now education has made great strides, and the people are more prepared to receive a beneficent law harmonising with justice and humanity than they were fifty, or even twenty-five, years ago."

The writer of the above is Mr. Madhowdass Ragnathdas, of Bombay, who, having committed the inexpressible crime among high caste Hindus of marrying a Hindu widow, tells the story of the persecutions he had to endure in a very plain but pathetic narrative, which he calls the "Story of a Widow-remarriage." On this question, which, of course, more immediately affected himself and his wife, he says :—

"Is the mass of the people really so unwilling as actively to resent Government intervention? The mighty mass, dense, impenetrable, steeped in darkness, made no sign of discontent while Mr. Malabari, all honour to him, was most actively carrying on his campaign against child-marriage and enforced widowhood. They are innocent of exaggerated notions of liberty. They are brought up in the traditions of the almightiness of Government to enact what laws they please, and if a law such as I advocate were passed they would give vent to a murmur of disapproval, but they never would dream of opposing it. The Sircar is their mabap (parents), who can make what laws they choose for their children, even though the laws might not be quite after their taste. And is it too much to expect that the innate sense of right which is to be found in all men will assist in enlisting the popular sympathy on the side of a good and just law."

This is plausible enough, but it may be doubted if the Government will actively interfere without taking some careful steps to ascertain how far interference can safely go. We believe that in the end such interference on the part of Government would be hailed with gladness as just and righteous interference, but Government must be cautious. To precipitate reforms, however radically good, may produce evils worse than before.

It is officially announced to-day that the Secretary of State for India has appointed Sir S. C. Bayley, K.C.S.I., C.I.E., Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, to be Secretary in the Political and Secret Department of the India Office, in the room of Colonel Sir Edward Bradford, K.C.B., Commissioner of Police. This appointment will possibly be looked upon with some surprise by old Anglo-Indians, who may consider that it is rather taking a step "downwards" for the Governor of an Indian Presidency to accept the position of a Secretary in the India Office. But whatever motives have led Sir S. C. Bayley to take this step—and we can see no loss in "dignity" in his doing so—it will be generally acknowledged, we think, by all who know him, that he will bring to his office the gifts of wide knowledge of India, of ripe experience, and of sound and calm judgment. India will be the gainer by the addition to the Secretary of State's advisers in England of such a man, and Lord Cross is to be commended for having made so excellent an appointment.

It has often been wondered where a number of well-known Calcutta loafers, who had no houses to resort to, spent the night. Inquiries were recently set on foot, and it has been ascertained that the durwan of a certain church in Calcutta was in the habit of allowing these men to sleep on the benches of the church, and charge them one anna each for the night's accommodation.

We regret to hear from Calcutta of the death of Mr. M. E. Bradford, of the Bengal Civil Service. Mr. Bradford accompanied his father, Sir Edward Bradford, on the Prince's shooting trip to the Terai last March, and there contracted malarial fever from which he seems never to have thoroughly recovered. Mr. Bradford, who was in every way a fine specimen of a young Englishman, rowed in the Oxford eight in the University boat race of 1883, in the autumn of which year he came out to India. His early death is a loss to a great number of friends, and it may truly be said to the public service.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

"Earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

What higher aim can man attain, than conquest over human pair?

JEOPARDY OF LIFE, THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset!!! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm. The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—J. C. ENO.

CAUTION.—Examine each Bottle, and see that the Capsule is marked ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." Without it you have been imposed on by a worthless imitation.

OLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS, POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S PATENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means, you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced life they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1890.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 5th September; from Allahabad and Madras to the 3rd September; and from Calcutta to the 2nd September.

At the meeting of the Legislative Council on the 28th August Sir David Barbour's Currency Bill was passed without reference to a Select Committee. Mr. Hutchins introduced a short Bill amending the Births, Deaths and Marriages Registration Act of 1886. The object of the Bill is to extend till the 31st March, 1891, the period for transmission to the Registrar-General of the registers prescribed in Section 32 of the Act. Local Commissioners will be appointed to examine and verify such registers.

THE text of the Sikkim treaty will be made public by the Government of India shortly, now that its ratification has been announced from England. The most important provisions are those which contain the acknowledgments by the Chinese Government of British suzerainty over the State in accordance with existing treaties.

LORD LANSDOWNE is making a satisfactory recovery from the feverish attack which he has been suffering from since his return to Simla, but is still confined to the house.

THE VICEROY will hold a levee for the officials of the N.W. Provinces at Agra on the evening of 22nd November next. A durbar will be held the next day. At Ajmere the chiefs of Rajputana will be received by his Excellency, but no formal durbar will take place.

THE Governor of Madras leaves Ootacamund on the 22nd inst., and will proceed to Thuvapur to open the southern section of the Mayanerum-Muttupett Railway. He subsequently proceeds to Kistna to inaugurate the opening of the East Coast Railway.

SIR ANDREW SCOBLE will probably pay a visit to Hyderabad in November before the Government re-assembles at Calcutta.

SIR D. FITZPATRICK will leave Hyderabad about the middle of November on a tour of some two months' duration through the Berars.

MR. A. MACKENZIE, Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces, will take furlough in March.

MAJOR-GENERAL SIR THOMAS BAKER will start from India to take up the Quartermaster-Generalship at home about the middle of November. He will make over the Rawalpindi command to Lord Frankfort some time in October. General Baker left Simla for Rawalpindi yesterday.

COLONEL MACGREGOR STEWART, whose nomination to the post of Deputy Quartermaster-General at Indian Army Headquarters was lately announced, has determined to remain in England in preference to taking up the appointment at Simla. A successor to Colonel Gatacre therefore has still to be found.

LIEUT.-COLONEL YOUNG, 24th Punjab Infantry, will officiate as Assistant Quartermaster-General, Army Headquarters, on Major Ridgeway vacating that post.

LORD WILLIAM BERESFORD arrives in India by the first week in October.

MAJOR-GENERAL T. E. GORDON, Military Attaché at Teheran, will make a trip extending over two or three months this cold weather to the south and south-west of Persia. He will probably visit the Karun Valley in the course of his journey.

THE latest news from Kabul reports that the Firuzkohi and Hazara country is completely pacified.

THE work of the Financial Secretaryship in these Provinces during Mr. Robert Smeaton's absence on leave will be carried on by Mr. T. W. Holderness, who has officiated in the post before, in addition to his ordinary duties as Director of Agriculture and Land Records.

CAPTAIN YOUNGHUSBAND was to have left Leh on the 2nd ultimo by way of the Karakoram road, on his way to Parimi. He was joined at Leh by Messrs. Lewnard and Beech, two sportsmen who have recently come out from home, and who intend to travel into Chinese Turkestan for sporting purposes.

A COMMITTEE will probably be appointed shortly at Simla to consider the question of remounts for the Native cavalry.

THE Simla Committee of the Uncovenanted Civil Services Association held a meeting on Friday, at which the results of the Parliamentary inquiry were considered.

A SMALL Commission, composed chiefly of Native gentlemen, is about to be appointed in connection with the proposed factory legislation. They will investigate the questions of the hours of labour for women and children, and of holidays. Their inquiry will extend to such parts of India as contain factories, and their report will be furnished before the Viceroy's Council assembles at Calcutta in December.

MAJOR E. BARROW delivers a lecture at the United Service Institution to-day upon the Anglo-Siamese Boundary Commission.

No final report on the Mandalay-Kunlon route for a railway through the Northern Shan States has yet reached the Government of India, and no official conclusions on the project have been come to at headquarters. Further special railway surveys in Upper Burma will be postponed until the topographical surveys have made some progress. The Mu Valley and the Meiktila-Myingyan lines are quite equal to absorbing all the money available for construction purposes at present.

THE annual Staff College dinner at Simla will take place at the United Service Club on the 27th inst., the Adjutant-General presiding.

ANTHRAX has broken out in the Viceroy's stables at Dehra Dun. A veterinary surgeon has been promptly summoned, and is on the spot. Some five or six horses have been affected already, and three of them have died, among them being Lord William Beresford's handsome Arab pony Shamshad. All Lord William's other race-horses are also there, and these, with the Viceregal horses, are being dispersed to open neighbourhoods.

THE Government of India offices close at Simla on Oct. 31st, and reopen at Calcutta on Nov. 1st.

THE Civil Engineers of the Public Works Department at a meeting at Simla on September 2nd passed the following resolutions:—The Committee noted that the scope of the recent Parliamentary inquiry did not embrace the special case of the Civil Engineers, but that the report was satisfactory in so far as it recommended the removal of some distinctions drawn between different civil sections of the Department. The meeting proposed that the Civil Engineers' Association press their claims as heretofore, and recorded its appreciation of the services rendered by Mr. Greig, the London agent.

THE Commander-in-Chief directs that officers attached to Native cavalry regiments on completing one year's seivice are to be specially reported on by commanding officers as to their fitness for permanent employment with the same. Those who have completed twelve months will be reported on at once.

LIEUT.-COLONEL VONSDEN, V.C., has been appointed Commandant of the 5th Punjab Cavalry, vice Hammond, vacated, and Major Cuninghame Second in Command. Lieut. G. Baldwin is to be Wing Officer, Corps of Guides, and Surgeon Elphick to be officiating in charge of the 39th Bengal Infantry, vice McKenna, granted sick leave.

THE case of Womesh Chunder Ghose, who took a woman, who was dangerously ill, to the Burning Ghat, and left her there several days until he was compelled to remove her to the Eden Hospital, where she died, has been concluded at the Criminal Sessions, Calcutta. The jury, which was a special one, and composed mostly of Natives, found the prisoner guilty of causing death by a rash and negligent act; and he was sentenced to two years' rigorous imprisonment. The Judge said the jury had taken a merciful view of the case.

LIEUT. DOUGLAS, of the Royal Navy, died of typhoid fever at Poona on September 3rd.

NOTES.

THERE is little news to be found in either the telegrams or the papers to hand by the present mail from India. Madras has always objected to being called the "benighted," but when a crowded meeting assembles to protest against the insanitary condition of the city, it may be taken for granted that there are some things not altogether perfect there.

It is an open secret, according to the Pioneer, that the Simla Committee of the Uncovenanted Service Association are by no means satisfied with the action of the London Committee in burking the evidence of witnesses duly accredited from India; and hence their anxiety that the Government, in any action they may contemplate on the report of the Parliamentary Committee, should deal direct with men still engaged on active service. The managers of the movement at home are on the pension list, and their aim was naturally mainly directed to securing the best terms for themselves in the matter of pension payments; but the great body of the Uncovenanted Service are still engaged on duty in India, and to them furlough pay and allowances, length of service qualifying for pension, &c., are almost as important as the pensions themselves. The dissatisfaction, therefore, with the action of the London Committee on certain points can be well understood, and utterance will, if we mistake not, be very shortly given to this in an unmistakable way.

* THE Native papers are discussing, not without perplexity, the question who is to be the Chairman of the Congress which is to meet this year at Calcutta. At the present time nothing whatever seems to have been decided—not even the preliminary question whether the chair shall be allotted to a European or an Indian gentleman. Somebody has mentioned Mr. Herbert Gladstone, with greater regard, no doubt, for his surname than for its prefix, and the idea is being discussed in delightful ignorance as to whether he would care to come, and under the strange misconception that he would give weight to any deliberations over which he might have the good fortune to preside.

IN General Orders Sir Frederick Roberts says that his attention has been called to the game of polo, particularly with reference to its danger and expense. As regards the danger his Excellency points out that accidents have of late been very numerous, several officers having lost their lives, and many having been seriously injured. Although he by no means wishes to discourage amusement on account of danger he says it becomes a duty to reduce this to a minimum.

THE chief sources of danger are the increased height of the ponies; the use of imperfectly trained ponies, and the neglect to wear a headress. The attention of all clubs is called to these objections. The game has become expensive and beyond the means of many who feel bound to join in it, and the Commander-in-Chief looks to commanding officers to see that all officers are first provided with efficient chargers and not undersized horses; and until such are provided no expensive ponies are to be kept, and the price of ponies is to be kept strictly within the means of officers providing them.

THE manner in which the further exploration of the Chin-Lushai country will be carried out during the ensuing cold weather is now engaging the attention of the military authorities. It is not intended to form special field forces similar to those which General Symons and Tregear commanded last season, but in the autumn the garrisons of the existing posts will be raised to a strength sufficient to enable the officers commanding to send out small columns in various directions. One of the first steps will be to complete the telegraph line, there being now only a small gap between the Koladyne and Haka. The wire will remain of the light field pattern until it has been decided what the permanent route is to be. This wire will eventually give direct land communication with Upper Burma, and will relieve the pressure upon the line to Rangoon, through which station all messages intended for Burma have now to pass. In years to come we may see Calcutta linked direct with Bhamo, and a possible extension from the latter place in touch with the Chinese wire which has already been laid well into the Yunan Province. There will then be a great diversion of telegraphic traffic from the cables of the Eastern Extension Company to the land lines laid and owned by the Government of India.

THE blockade of the offending sections of the Orakzais on the Kohat-Thull frontier has now been in force for some time, and it is already rumoured that the A Khel are anxious to make terms, pay up the fines imposed upon them, and be good boys for the future. But their submission alone would not be enough, and unless all the offenders "come in" the Government will have to consider whether a punitive expedition should not be sent. The main body of the Orakzais, one of the most powerful clans on the border, are believed to be indifferent in the affair; but one can never count upon the temper of wild tribesmen when a force enters their country. The Punjab Frontier Force are quite equal to dealing with the malcontents as they stand, but the addition of a strong battalion of British infantry might be desirable if an expedition were sent. At present, however, no active measures are to be taken.

"AN OLD SOLDIER" writes to the Pioneer:—"Will you allow me space in your paper for the insertion of the following suggestion and appeal? In India officers have a fund to which they can subscribe called the 'Queen's Military Widows' Fund,' which has proved very beneficial to many a widow and her family. What I would point out is that, notwithstanding that such a society exists for officers, no such one is open to the non-commissioned officers and men of Her Majesty's Service. Now, I would ask some of your kindly-feeling officers to take up our cause for us and put it forward with a view to such a society being established whereby non-commissioned officers and men of H.M.'s Service might be allowed to subscribe and so ensure some means of leaving their families (in case of death) free from destitution and poverty, for how many families of non-commissioned officers and men dying in the Service have been put to their wit's ends to know how they are going to exist? Again, if such a society as I mention could be started, how many women (soldiers' widows) would be spared the painful feeling of having to seek the door of some union or other place of refuge. I would, therefore, ask any non-commissioned officer or man of H.M.'s Service to bring forward now their fatherly feelings regarding the above, for I feel sure, could such a society be started, the greater part of the married non-commissioned officers and men of H.M.'s Service would become subscribers. My concluding idea is that, if such a society could be started, it should extend throughout H.M.'s Service, both at home and abroad."

THE Reis and Rayyat, alluding to the death of Sir E. Bradford's son, Mr. M. Bradford, says:—"Mr. Bradford was one of the best specimens of British young manhood. Passionately fond of hunting and sports he was no gross John Bull, but a man of education and feeling. He was, in fact, a thorough gentleman in the best sense, and no mere man of the world. He conquered wherever he went. He was beloved by all classes, Europeans and Natives. He was one of our most promising officers in the Bengal Service, having already given unquestionable proofs of ability—not simply of intellectual grasp, but also of executive tact and energy—and, withal, he knew how to approach the hearts of those he had to deal with. The death of such a public servant is a loss to the State. To the good father of the deceased we offer our most respectful sympathies. His is a most trying bereavement. The death of a grown-up son in the flower of life is always a cruel calamity. And he has lost such a son."

CALCUTTA, according to all reports, appears to have now gone as mad over gold-mining shares as it once did over Port Canning shares. There are already seven gold-mining companies in existence there, and a local paper says:—"After a frenzied struggle, worthy of the South Sea days, to-day an eighth company is to be floated, and the prospectus of a ninth has been issued. The shares of one company have gone up a thousand per cent., and its capital of Rs. 50,000 has attained a value of five lakhs. The market value of another company's nominal capital of 11½ lakhs is about 30 lakhs. It is not easy to account for this fever on the basis of any ascertained and published facts. What the practical results of the mining operations may prove still appears to be a matter of pure speculation."

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

(Times Correspondents.)
INDIA.

CALCUTTA, SEPT. 21.

A crowded public meeting was held at Madras on Friday evening to consider the insanitary state of the city. The chairman, the Rev. Dr. Miller, stated that the death-rate was far above that of almost any other place in the civilized world. The meeting resolved to request the Governor to appoint a special sanitary officer or a committee to investigate the causes of cholera epidemics, and of the unusual mortality.

Probably Sir Stuart Colvin Bayley will vacate the Lieutenant-Governorship of Bengal about December 15. It is not yet decided who is to be his successor.

The 39th Bengal Infantry are warned for the expedition to the Lushai country at the beginning of the winter.

BURMA.

RANGOON, SEPT. 20.

It is decided to send a column to the Chin Hills during the next cold weather, to compel the submission of the remaining tribes. Owing to the troubles on the Lushai frontier, it will probably be necessary also to despatch a force to operate on the northern frontier.

The Judicial Commissioner's judgment in Yanyun's case is published. Having regard to the discussion in Parliament on this case, it is desirable to quote the exact terms of the judgment.

Mr. Hodgkinson finds that no crimes or atrocities are proved against Yanyun, and that the letter from the subordinate magistrate, inviting Yanyun's surrender, went much further than merely promising to try and get his life spared. He therefore declines to confirm the sentence of death, and declares it a sacred duty to keep such promises as those made to Yanyun with the utmost exactness and scrupulousness. He adds that Yanyun was not expressly excluded from the benefit of the second paragraph of the proclamation offering pardon to dacoits, and was entitled to the construction of the proclamation most favourable to him.

The Rangoon Times of the 16th, commenting on this judgment, urges that, after the decision of the highest court in the provinces and the pledge given in Parliament by Sir John Gorst on Sir Charles Crosthwaite's behalf, even an apparent breach of faith should be avoided, and that Yanyun ought to be released on giving security for good conduct.

An interesting and ably-written report by Mr. Scott, Superintendent of the Shan States, on those principalities has just been published. It gives most useful information. Mr. Scott, however, remarks that the communications between the Shan States and Burma are very little advanced since last year. An official letter from the Chief Secretary has been published, declaring that nothing can be further from the truth than Mr. Scott's statement about communications. This extraordinary contradiction shows the impossibility of public officers in Burma discharging their duties independently under the present régime, or doing otherwise than belaud the action of the local government.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

RAILWAYS IN BURMA.

(Pioneer.)

As the Finance Minister is likely to have a handsome surplus at the close of the current official year, thanks to the rise in exchange, the claims of Upper Burma to a special grant for railways might well be considered. At present 50 lakhs per annum is the sum allotted for opening out the new province by means of steam communication, but a good deal more could be spent with advantage. The Tounghoo-Mandalay line has shown how rapidly traffic can be developed, and considering that the net earnings of the whole system of State railways in Burma are now some 16 lakhs a-year, there is every justification for special expenditure. A bonus, so to speak, of 50 lakhs for the year 1891-92 would enable the Local Government to build the branch line from Meiktila-road to Myingyan on the left bank of the Irrawaddy, opposite the mouth of the Chindwin. This extension would undoubtedly yield very good returns almost immediately. Its survey was sanctioned last spring, and it is known that no great difficulties would have to be overcome. The Mu Valley Railway is making good progress, and the present assignment of money to it is sufficient for all practical purposes. It is somewhat disappointing to notice in the annual report on the administration of railways that the reconnaissance made from Shwebo towards the Chindwin, opposite the mouth of the Myitha River at Kalewa, shows that though, up to Yamatoung, there will be little or no difficulty in locating this branch line, yet beyond that point no suitable route for a railway has been found. Several routes have been prospected, but the country has in each instance proved most difficult. While on this subject we may as well quote the official conclusion regarding the suggested Shan plateau railway. "The reconnaissance of the Shan country to the Kimlon Ferry," says Colonel Conway-Gordon, "leaves little doubt that the difficulties to be encountered across the so-called 'plateau' have been very considerably underrated, and no feasible route from a point on the Tounghoo-Mandalay Railway on to the plateau has yet been discovered. There is still much survey work to be done before any decision can be arrived at regarding a railway through the Shan country to the Chinese frontier." This, too, is rather disheartening, but we may still hope that a thorough topographical survey may pave the way for our railway engineers.

HOSPITAL PRACTICE.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

One great reason why the lower orders of the people object to going into eleemosynary institutions like hospitals and poorhouses is that there they are, or think they are, apt to be made the corpora vilia of any surgical or other experiments the authorities may think fit to subject them to. In the hospitals especially they fear the knife of the inexperienced surgeon or Native assistant. Of course it would be best to have no one but an experienced and qualified surgeon to operate on all patients without exception; but this is impossible, and the younger men must be allowed, for various reasons, to perform operations that may possibly be not quite within their capacity or skill. In the Medical College Hospital of Calcutta there is a complaint that too few opportunities of performing operations are afforded to the house-surgeons and advanced students. While the fact complained of may be good for the patient, it is bad for the future utility of the house-surgeon and student. The Inspector-General of Civil Hospitals in Bengal, Dr. Hilson, is, we see, in favour of allowing more latitude to the house-surgeons and advanced students, one of his reasons being that at the Mayo Hospital, Lahore, a considerable number of the major operations are entrusted to the younger men. The matter is an important one for Bengal, for the lack of practice in surgery among the house-surgeons and students means lack of capacity and experience for use in the districts to which the surgeons and students proceed upon leaving the hospital.

TRANS-FRONTIER POLITICS.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

Another matter which may tend to strain our relations with Afghanistan is the quarrel in Bajaur and Swat between Umra Khan of Jandol and Sharif Khan, ex-Khan of Dir. The former has set his ambition upon the title and status of an independent monarch; and, as it was one of the alternative conditions demanded by the mullahs before they would agree to introduce his name as such in their public prayers, he is now busily engaged in getting up a jehad against the Lal Kafirs. In this he is aided by the priests, and large numbers of volunteers are flocking to his flag. Among these are many of the Indian refugee fanatics, who settled in Swat after creating disturbances in the Punjab during and after the Mutiny. These are always the first to rally for a jehad. Umra Khan appears to be so taken up with this new venture as to be willing to give Sharif Khan better terms than that chief asked for immediately after his expulsion from Dir. Now, however, Sharif Khan, who is in Swat, refuses to take back his territory and the Fort as a gift from Umra Khan, and has treated the latter's envoys with contempt, saying that he would retake Dir with the sword, and give it afterwards as an act of charity to Umra Khan, as he once gave him back the Fort at Jandol. This change of attitude of humility to haughtiness on Sharif Khan's part is probably due to the fact that he has received private information that the Amir of Afghanistan will assist him against Umra Khan. Immediately after his defeat, it will be remembered, he sent his brother to ask help from the Amir's general, Gholam Haidar, at Jellalabad, and the latter received the envoy courteously, sending the petition on to the Amir. Since then Sharif Khan, awaiting the Amir's reply, has wandered about in Swat, meeting generally with kindness. At Saidu, the people accepted him as their ruler and offered tribute; but he had not decided to accept the offer when letters arrived from Kabul from his brother, Sher Muhammad Khan, who had gone there to interview the Amir, with General Gholam Haidar. After reading these letters, Sharif Khan hurried off to Oshrai in Bar Swat; and it is generally believed that his brother had sent him assurances of active assistance from the Amir, which would explain his haughty dealing with Umra Khan. If, however, the Amir does interfere in Bajaur and Swat, he will be adopting a course of action which should be most unpalatable to the Government of India and the Mehtar of Chitral. Thus the quarrels arising from the ambition of the petty chief of Jandol may have a wider scope. As we have more than once said, in predicting this eventuality, the Government of India would be weak and ill-advised to abandon Umra Khan, without very cogent reasons for doing so, to his fate. He is a man of marked military ability and resource. He has repeatedly overcome hostile combinations that seemed overwhelming. He has great personal courage, and has the gift of imparting his confidence to his followers. In a word, although his fighting has been on a small scale, he is a great general, and with encouragement and assistance in money and arms, would easily unite Swat and Bajaur under a firm rule which would fill in the gap between Chitral, Kafistan, Afghanistan, and India—a region which is now the happy hunting-ground of refugees and bloodthirsty adventurers from all sides. There are many reasons, also, why this country should not be annexed to Afghanistan.

THE BONE TRADE OF BENGAL.

(Englishman.)

Reference was lately made to the development of the bone trade in the North-West Provinces. In Bengal also, within the past few years, the collection of bones from village wastes for exportation to Calcutta has become the regular profession of the low caste Hindus, called chamars, in the central and western districts of Bengal proper. The trade is also extending to the outer parts of Bengal in proportion to the increasing demand of the Calcutta mills and the extension of railway communication. Heaps of raw bones collected for transport to Calcutta may now be seen along the railway and principal river routes of Bengal. In the North-West it was stated that bones were collected only for export, and that the land was thus deprived of a manure which might be used by the ryots with much advantage, although hitherto they had neglected it. In Bengal both the indigo and tea planters already use bone meal on their lands, and it is in a fair way to be popularised among the ryots. The bones brought to Calcutta are ground at the bone grinding mills, of which there are four or five at present, and nearly the whole of the meal is exported. Its price is about two rupees a maund. A trial was made at the Seebpore Farm to determine the comparative merits of the dhenki or Native bone-mill and an English made mill. The Native process won the day, as it took two annas a maund less to prepare bone meal with the dhenki than with the English mill. This may be regarded as satisfactory, for if the ryots ever take to the use of bone meal for manure they will not require complicated European machinery. Numerous experiments to test the efficiency of bone meal as a manure for paddy have been made in Burdwan and Hughli, but it has been impossible to obtain from the ryots a reliable statement as to the results obtained. Perhaps the most satisfactory proof of its value is that there has been an increasing demand for it in the villages where it has been tried. At present the ryots prefer oil-cake, the effects of which they allege last longer; but if bone meal were cheaper than it now is, it would probably be much more readily adopted.

ANCIENT MINES AND MINING IN MYSORE.

(Madras Mail.)

Wherever indications of gold have been found in Mysore, there also are to be seen remains of work which show that systematic mining had been carried on in times past by a people who must have had sound practical knowledge of the art, and who were bold and skilful miners. Although gold-mining must have been carried on on a vast scale, and for a long period of time—as witness the numerous and extensive old pits and galleries throughout Mysore—yet nothing is known of the race or the times when these works were carried out. We have historical notices of vast sums in gold changing hands in Mysore, but so far no records have turned up of an industry which must have employed a large section of the community for a lengthened period of time. Judging of these ancient miners from what we know of the indigenous mechanical arts in Hindustan of the present day, one is apt to ascribe to these primitive workers the rudest appliances for carrying on their operations. Thus, it is often said that the old men merely scraped at the surface of the reefs, as the water would have prevented them digging to any depth; that the lode was taken away by means of "open casts" (cuttings) terraced into steps, so that basket-loads of quartz could be handed from person to person till it reached the surface: that explosives were unknown, and that large fires were used to detach masses of the lode; that timbering was not practised and ventilation ill-understood.

A close examination of many of these old mines will show that there is no foundation for assuming that the ancient miners were as ignorant as it is assumed they were, but that there is much ground for believing that mining, as it is understood in the present day, is not so much in advance of the knowledge of the ancients as would at first sight appear. In the Mysore Mine old workings have been found at a depth of 301 ft., and the shafts and passages are of such a form as to preclude all possibility of ore or water-bucket being passed from hand to hand, from bottom to surface. In places, the old drives and galleries are so narrow and the surrounding rock so tough that fire could not have been the agency by which the reef was removed. Or the Kolar gold-field these workings are mostly filled in with alluvial drift, so that it is hard to follow them, and they can only be traced underground by the softer earth met with while stopping or shaft-sinking. In other parts of Mysore some of these old works are in fairly good preservation, and a description of some of these may be of interest and give some idea of the manner of mining as conducted by the ancients. It is pretty well known that the gold-rocks of Mysore are confined to the metamorphic schists overlying the gneiss which forms so large a feature of the plateau. These schists have been called the "Dharwars" by the Geological Survey of India, just as rocks peculiar to or conspicuously prominent at Cuddapah or Kurnool have been called the Cuddapah and Kurnool series. It may have been that the rocks known as the Dharwars were at one time spread over the whole face of the Mysore Province, but just now, bands and outlying patches, dotting the country here and there, and rising into prominent ridges with great stretches of gneiss and other rocks between, make up the surface of the country.

So far as has been observed the old workings are confined to the rising ground on the hillsides, and, as is natural in such situations and in such a climate as we have in Mysore, no great volume of water would be met with underground, and there would be no difficulty in removing such quantity as would be met with by means of Persian wheels and "gins" working a large bucket and rope. The "Manual of the Geology of India" gives a drawing of the Persian wheel commonly in use among the diamond miners of Panna, in the wilds of Bandelkhand, while Sir William Hunter tells us of wells 490 feet deep in the Bikaner Desert, from which water is drawn by means of a gin worked by camels or a dozen or more coolies. With little water to contend with the modern pump is unnecessary, as the bucket and rope could drain the

ine. In Australia, in the Sandhurst District, mines extending to a depth of 2,000 feet are kept free of water in a precisely similar manner. So far, the experience of the present industry in Kolar points to the same conclusion—viz., that little water will be met with in the closely-packed schists which make up the matrix in which the auriferous quartz lodes are included. Near the surface the old pits made by the ancient miners have acted as receptacles for the lodgment of the surface flow due to the monsoon, but these once drained, and precautions taken to prevent the lodgment of surface drainage, no difficulty will be experienced with springs below. That the people who could cut the marvellous rocks, temples of Mahavellipuram (Seven Pagodas) near Madras, or the still more wonderful cave temples of Ellora, would experience much difficulty in cutting through the schists and slates of the Dharwar, or even the harder included quartz-lodes, is not to be thought of; and knowing, as we do, that South India was long famous for producing the finest steel in the world—wooltz—still used by Native stonemasons in preference to the best English cast steel, we cannot wonder when we find that the old gold-miners started shafts and drove galleries where modern miners, with all the appliances of science to back them, hesitate to begin work. Before the introduction of rock-drills, worked by compressed air, in Kolar, the progress made in shaft-sinking and driving was extremely slow—so slow and expensive that it was at one time thought that the works would have to be abandoned on this account, yet when, with the aid of machinery, the works were extended to 300 feet in the hard schist, there old workings were found, to the great astonishment of the English miners. It is not known whether the Natives used timber to protect the sides of their shafts and to keep open the galleries when stoping; wood being so easily destroyed none of it has been found as yet in the old workings, but there are marks in the old shafts which are probably recesses for the ends of the frames, and it is quite possible that the shafts now seen were at one time timbered.

There can be no doubt that the ancient miners were assisted in their operations by those who had some knowledge of the chemistry of gold and of practical assaying and refining. Some remnant of this knowledge is still to be found among the professional gold-washers. These men can neither read nor write any language, yet are perfectly acquainted with the use of the "touchstone" and can tell to a fraction the amount of alloy in a sample tested. The poorest of them carry a bag containing a set of minute scales for weighing gold, a small wooden bottle containing a little quicksilver, a piece of Lydian stone (touchstone), a ball of black-wax, small piece of dry cocoanut, and a little salt. The weights are the small red and black seeds of a species of creeper called "gundoo-manie," said to be the origin of the carat weight ($3\frac{1}{2}$ grs.); and several multiples of this standard in the shape of tiny coins. When the jaglar has secured a quantity of gold dust mixed with heavy black sand from which it is difficult to free the gold by ordinary washing, he puts the mixture into his wooden washing dish and pours on a little water. He then adds a drop or two of mercury from his tiny wooden flask, the mouth of which is plugged with wax. A pinhole in the wax plug enables him to shake out a minute drop or two of the quicksilver, this metal being too expensive to be wasted. He now proceeds to rub the mercury well into the black sand and gold, and in a little time the grains of gold become coated with mercury and cake together, so that the black sand—which is unaffected by the mercury—can be easily washed away. Should the mercury, from any cause, not readily coat the gold, the jaglar throws in a grain or two of salt, and continues rubbing. This always proves effectual, as the salt appears to clean the mercury and makes it combine more readily with the gold. When he has collected the gold amalgam into a lump, he refolds it in a piece of damp rag and proceeds to squeeze out the superfluous mercury, which is carefully put back into the wooden flask. When all the superfluous mercury has been squeezed out, the ball of amalgam, still enfolded in the damp rag, is placed on a live coal and blown to a flame, the burning rag preventing the loss of gold from the spluttering of the amalgam when heated. As soon as the rag is completely burnt away, the jaglar knows that the mercury has also been dissipated, and that only a sponge-gold is left behind. If from the colour of the sponge-gold the jaglar suspects the presence of silver or copper, which are frequently associated with gold, he tests a little by rubbing it on a touchstone, and if this test should show the presence of a large percentage of alloy (10 to 25 per cent. is considered large) he proceeds to refine his gold. This is done by breaking up the sponge-gold between the fingers, when it readily breaks up into grains, and mixing it with twice its weight of saltpetre and burning it in a piece of broken chattle. By this process the copper, if there is any, is got rid of. To free it from silver is more difficult and seldom undertaken unless the quantity of gold-dust is fairly large (half oz. or so). The gold-dust resulting from the sponge-gold is mixed with four times its weight of common salt and the mixture placed between two of the cow-dung cakes commonly used as fuel by the Natives all over India. These two cakes are carefully placed in a chattle and placed in the midst of a well-heated fire. When the two cakes are burned to ashes, the chattle is removed from the fire and its contents carefully washed in the jaglar's dish, and gold dust of great purity is recovered.

Those acquainted with the European system of assaying and refining will at once perceive that these operations in gold refining are thoroughly scientific, and must have been learned from some one thoroughly acquainted with the chemistry of the metals. The burning of common salt sets free its contained chlorine, which combines with the silver in the gold-grains and forms chloride of silver. Chloride of silver melts more readily than gold, and the ash of the cow-dung cakes absorbs the silver-chloride, just as the cupel does in European assaying, and leaves the pure gold in grains which can be collected by washing the ashes. In the same manner the means employed by the jaglar for removing the copper that may be present with his gold can be shown to be thoroughly scientific. The jaglar is a poor man, and he is also a careful man. He cannot afford to lose even the little gold deposited by abrasion on his touchstone; so he collects even this by pressing the ball of wax we have mentioned as finding a place in his bag, against the touchstone. The gold adheres to the wax and leaves the stone clean. Once in four or five years the ball of wax is melted down and the gold dust recovered. The little "rules of thumb" by which the jaglar calculates the fineness of his gold, his devices for refining it, his practical knowledge of chemical processes for which he can give no reasons, all point to a time when the gold industry must have been common in India and its requirements well understood, so that it would be safe to assume that what we see of old mines now in existence, and what we know of the operations of the gold-washers, may be taken as remnants of an industry that at some distant period of time prevailed in many parts of India.

BENGAL.

(September 2.)

THE Government offices will reopen at Calcutta on October 31st or November 1st.

THE Lord Bishop of Calcutta leaves on a tour in the North-West Provinces on September 26th, and returns on November 4th.

THE Maharaja of Kuch Behar, it is said, applied to the Government of Bengal some time ago for a loan of five lakhs of rupees on the securities of the Chucklajat Estate, the money being required for the proposed Kuch Behar State Railway. The terms proposed by Government, however, were not accepted, and the transaction fell through.

THERE has been a mutiny among the students of the Free Church College at Chinsurah, near Calcutta, in consequence of the dismissal of one of the Native professors, whose cause they espoused. Their remonstrances, which were insolently submitted, having failed to move the Principal to restore the dismissed Professor, the students of the College classes became very rowdy, threw down their books, insulted their Professors, and in a body walked out of their class-rooms. After absenting themselves for four days they sought readmission; but the Principal refuses to readmit the ringleaders under any circumstances, and the others only on the payment of a penalty of five rupees each.

THERE were altogether 454 suits in the various Courts of Bengal, in which the local Government was a party during the year 1889-90. Of these 348 were decided in favour of the Government, 58 against it, while the rest were compromised. Only one suit of importance was decided against the Government, and in that the question at issue was the rather intricate one of the reformation of diluviated land. The decrees recovered amounted to Rs. 55,247, but of this sum only Rs. 11,659 was recovered, and a large portion of the balance will have to be written off. The Court of Wards was involved in 700 suits, of which 584 were successful, 62 unsuccessful, and the rest compromised. The decrees obtained amounted to more than eleven lakhs of rupees, of which only some two lakhs were realised. Recent collections on the Burdwan Raj estate are encouraging, but a very large balance is still due on the Tikari estate.

ORDINARY business in the market in Calcutta is reported to be almost suspended owing to excitement over gold mining shares. There are already six Bengal gold companies in existence, and the number is being rapidly augmented. A seventh company sprang into existence on Saturday, the capital of 4 lakhs being allotted in a couple of hours. A local paper says:—"After a frenzied struggle worthy of the South Sea days, to-day an eighth company is to be floated, and the prospectus of a ninth has been issued. The shares of one company have gone up 1,000 per cent., and its capital of Rs. 50,000 has attained a value of 5 lakhs. The market value of another company's nominal capital of 11½ lakhs is about 30 lakhs. It is not easy to account for this fever on the basis of any ascertained and published facts. What the practical results of the mining operations may prove still appears to be a matter of pure speculation.

THE IMPORT TRADE AND EXCHANGE.

The Englishman publishes the following report of a largely-attended meeting of members of firms engaged in the import trade of Calcutta, held in the rooms of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce on the 27th ultimo, with Mr. G. A. Walker, of Messrs. Gisborne and Co., in the chair:—

The Chairman, in opening the proceedings, said he would not detain them with a long speech, and had only a few words to say. The recent rise in exchange had led many of them to consider the position, and it seemed desirable to adopt some definite line of action. Their interests were not at all identical, and it behoved all to sink personal considerations for the general good. The question was how their interests were to be reconciled so as to enable them to try and work so as to minimise as much as possible the evils with which they were confronted, and the losses which might arise. It was not to be denied that the condition of the import trade was critical, but exchange had risen some 20 per cent., and serious losses stared them in the face. No doubt, many had come prepared to offer suggestions, and all would be glad to hear them.

Mr. J. Ralli said that the present position of the import trade was sufficiently critical to warrant some steps being taken to help buyers, subject, of course, to their carrying out on their side loyally the conditions of their contracts, according to the long-established customs of the trade, and not trying to evade them by any quibbles or subterfuges. If the necessity for help was recognised, what steps to be taken was the next question. Native dealers were of opinion that no sales should be made for a period, say, up to all the Pujahs. This could be accepted, provided all present were unanimous in accepting it. Objections on the part of consignees were met by the fact of the danger of present guaranteeing inactivity, which, although bad, was the less of two evils. The buyers, if they saw that sellers were almost unanimous in their intention of helping them, would endeavour to abstain from buying from any firms not included in the combination, and also from natives buying direct. Consequently the common interest appeared decidedly to point to some such unanimous action being taken. As to Bombay and Kurrachee competing with Calcutta, it was sufficient to say that the piecegoods markets there were different as to quality, finish, dimensions, and borders. If the proposed combination was impossible to be carried out at once, he would suggest the formation of a committee to ascertain what firms would agree to stop selling, and what native buyers would undertake not to buy from such firms as remained out, and to report to the chairman and consult with him as to the best steps to be adopted to advise importers either by circulars or otherwise.

Babu Juggernath Khannah was glad at the way in which Mr. Ralli had expressed his views, but he was afraid that if such a combination was formed, excluding dealers, the movement would not work so smoothly. It was their first duty to ascertain what classes of goods would suffer, and a combination affecting them could be formed. Some goods such as Turkey reds and woollens had not suffered much, and were not likely to suffer much.

Raja Durgacharan Law said it was a most difficult thing to suggest a remedy under the present circumstances. A combination such as was suggested would be a very good thing to relieve the market, but would such a combination be generally accepted? It would certainly help the import trade if, for two months, they held their hands and did nothing. Speaking for himself he would be glad to join such a movement, if importers abstained from forward sales for the time mentioned.

Mr. Cheetham, speaking on behalf of his firm, was perfectly willing to join such a movement for the period named, and thought this was the only way out of the difficulty. If firms held back for two months, people would be able to prepare their hands. If deliveries were forced, their hands might not be cleared, and considerable quantities of goods at the higher exchange would arrive.

Another member present was of opinion that one month's time to settle was sufficient.

Mr. J. R. Bertram said that they had met to discuss combination or other remedies to apply to the sore which was now working through the whole of the piece goods system of trade; but was there any guarantee that anything they did would meet with support from dealers? Would their Marwarie friends keep to their word? He had had great experience of this class in India and Burma, and had found the Marwaries the same all over the world. Nothing was to be gained by combination; those who were in a good position now would gain, and those who were in a bad position would lose. Speaking for himself and the people he represented, he did not think there was any chance of any good coming from combination, because it was found from experience that the party would not keep faith. He said this with great reluctance; but, on the other hand, there were combinations in jute and other things, and what was the result? All met and promised to combine, and they did so, all the time revolving methods to juggle out of it. There was no use in combination, and the courts were the only place to enforce contracts in their entirety; and if they did not choose to avail themselves of legal methods to enforce contracts, no combinations would help them to do so.

After some desultory discussion it was resolved to take the sense of the meeting as to whether import firms should or should not combine. This was done with the result that there were twelve votes for and twenty against combination.

Babu Juggernath Khannah said that as the result of the votes was against combination, he had to suggest that a vote be taken on the question whether the matter should not be referred to a committee for consideration and report. Dealers would then know that something had come out of the meeting.

It was then resolved that a committee, consisting of the following gentlemen, be formed to consult the different import firms, and find out whether they could not devise some necessary basis upon which all could work together for the common good:—

G. Walker (chairman), Messrs. T. K. Milne, L. P. Lutrari, G. R. Cheetham, C. H. Wilkie, W. Thomson, E. C. Petrocchino, J. Toomey, F. E. Patteson, A. H. T. Becker, Rajah Durga Charan Law, and Babu Romacanth Sen.

All interested were invited to send in suggestions on the subject to Mr. S. E. J. Clarke, the Secretary to the Chamber of Commerce.

MADRAS.

(September 3.)

LORD CONNEMARA leaves Ooty for the Plains on the 22nd, and proceeds to Tanjore, where he turns the first sod on the proposed line of the metre gauge railway from Mayavaram to Mutupett. His Excellency subsequently proceeds to Guntakul and on to Bezwada, at which latter place he will inspect the Bezwada line. His Excellency arrives at Madras on the 2nd prox.

MR. GEORGE, C.I.E., late Inspector-General of Registration, Madras, has been appointed an additional member of the Madras Legislative Council.

CHOLERA has, during the last week, abated somewhat, the total deaths therefrom being 105 against 129 the previous week. The death-rate from all diseases is 77 per thousand per annum, against 40 per mille, the mean of the ten previous years.

BOMBAY.

(September 5.)

SURGEON-MAJOR H. W. B. BOYD, F.R.C.S.I., Superintendent Lunatic Asylum, Colaba, has been allowed privilege leave for three months.

KHAN BAHADUR DADABHAI HORMASJEE NANAVATI has been confirmed in the appointment of Assistant Political Agent, Rewa Kantha, from May 23rd.

MR. RIBBENTROP, Inspector-General of Forests, will return to India at the end of February next, when Mr. H. C. Hill, officiating Inspector-General, will hand over charge, and proceed on two years' furlough.

MR. G. H. FARRAN, Assistant Commissioner and Taxing Master, having returned from England, has resumed charge of his office. Mr. Oliver, who acted for him, has returned to the Appellate Side, and resumed charge of the office of Deputy Registrar.

THE writer of the following paragraph in the Punjab Times has rather amusingly mixed things up:—In celebration of the birthday of the Hindoo deity, "Krishna," Resaldar-Major Rad Singh, the Hindoo A.D.C. to the Governor of Bombay, gave an evening party at his residence at Ganeshkind, Poona. Among the European guests present were H.E. Lord and Lady Harris, Sir George Greaves, and other respectable shroffs and the élite of Poona society.

THE REV. DR. MACKICHAN presided at the thirty-sixth annual meeting of the Bene-Israel Benevolent Society, held on Monday, at Mr. Abraham Daniel's residence in Israel Mohlah. The Chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, which was agreed to, referred with regret to the falling-off in the income of the Society during the past year, and made an eloquent appeal for increased funds to enable the committee to carry on the useful work in which the Society had been engaged for nearly forty years past. He also observed that, notwithstanding the complaints one often heard of the smallness of the Bene-Israel community, its poverty and depressed condition, he believed that as a community, in proportion to its numbers and opportunities, it had achieved a greater progress than most of the larger communities.

THE following is a summary of the Bombay season reports for the past week:—Rain throughout the Presidency Proper and in Kurrachee. More wanted in parts of all districts of the Deccan and Southern Mahratta Country and Ahmedabad, Broach, and Kathiawar. Standing crops withering in parts of Poona and Nasik, damaged by excessive moisture in parts of Khandesh and Poona, by breaches in canals in parts of Shirapur, by caterpillars in parts of Dharwar, and by rats, locusts, or other insects in parts of Kurrachee and Hyderabad; otherwise good, except in Sholapore. Sowing of late crops progressing in parts of Bijapur and Belgaum, and preparations commenced in parts of Ahmednagar. Fodder scarce in Sholapur and parts of Nasik, Poona, Ahmednagar, and Dharwar. Agricultural stock good, except in parts of Nasik.

AN unusual and painful scene was witnessed at the Secretariat on Monday, when the widows of late contributors to the Bombay Uncovenanted Family Pension Fund went to draw their usual pensions. It seems, from the statement of one of the widows, that for the first time since the establishment of the fund all of them entitled to receive over Rs. 41 per mensem were called upon to pay "income-tax" from March, 1890, to March, 1891. In the case referred to, the pension amounted to Rs. 50, and the income-tax to one rupee eight pias per month, so that the unfortunate woman's scanty provision was mulcted in the sum of Rs. 12-8—no small deduction, seeing that in the majority of cases the women have large families, and no means of support beyond their pension. Pension is deferred pay, and it seems somewhat hard upon the widows that the scanty pension accruing to them should be subjected to a further impost.

We take this paragraph from the Asian:—"Doctor Gaye has been associated with the Indian Turf for near upon thirty years. Under the familiar name of 'Mr. Herbert' he has ridden and owned horses for nearly the whole of this period. He has for a long time been Secretary and Steward of the Western India Turf Club. He had during the whole of his career reflected honour and credit on the Turf, and has earned the goodwill and lasting respect of all those who have been associated with him for his sterling good qualities and high sense of honour. Straight going has ever been the worthy Doctor's motto, whether when steering his mount in a race, either of the legitimate or illegitimate order, or following hounds, or when administering the affairs of the Western India Turf Club.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES AND PUNJAB.

COLONEL ERSKINE, the Commissioner of Kumaon, is a guest at the Viceregal Lodge.

THE clerks in the Secretariat, Simla, are memorialising the Government of India against the curtailment of travelling allowances.

MR. DUNLOP, of the Nizam's Revenue Service, and Professor Middleton, of the Agricultural College at Baroda, will probably also attend the Simla Agricultural Conference.

AN extensively signed memorial has been sent into the Punjab Government by the tenants and ratepayers defending the Simla Municipality, and praying that it be continued. This is in opposition to the first petition, which was signed by the principal householders in the station.

THE first report on the condition of the cotton crop of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh up to 7th August is as follows:—"The rains set in about the usual time, but they have been very heavy, and have continued almost without a break for nearly six weeks from their commencement, causing serious floods in Rohilkhand and the Gangetic Doab, the chief cotton tracts in these Provinces. Weeding has been much impeded, and the plants in many places have rotted in the field. The total area this year has been estimated at about 10 per cent. less than the normal area."

THE annual report on the condition and management of the jails in the N.W. Provinces and Oudh shows that the daily average population during the year exceeded twenty-one thousand men and a thousand females, taking convicts alone; the number of new admissions was 47,706 males and 3,345 females. There has of late years been a progressive increase in the number of convicts annually admitted to the jails of these Provinces. The number has increased from 33,000 in 1885, a year of plenty, to 42,000 last year. The total expenditure on jails during 1889 was Rs. 9,60,821; the convicts earned Rs. 1,63,692; so that the net cost to Government was nearly eight lakhs, or Rs. 33-12 per prisoner. The average cash earnings per prisoner was Rs. 7-5, which does not come anywhere near paying for his rations, which cost Rs. 17-7-3. The charges for establishment and police guard cost Rs. 18-11-2 per man; the hospital charges are under a rupee, and clothing and contingencies come to less than Rs. 4 a-head per annum. A system of storing grain was introduced during the year, and this, when carefully worked in every district, should lessen the cost of rations. The establishment and police charges are lower in the first-class district jails than elsewhere, and are highest in the small jails of the fourth class; but short of reducing these little jails to the rank of mere lock-ups, it is difficult to see how any reduction of expenditure on establishment is possible.

NATIVE PRESS.

LORD HARRIS ON NATIVE MUSIC.

The Gujrati, in the course of an article, says:—"What Indian is there whose soul does not draw fresh inspiration and feel higher elevation as the satar, been, or serangee, played upon by a skilful hand, send forth their sweet and delicate sounds in regular succession, expressive of the manifold emotions of the human breast? The music of the pibroch excites new visions before the mind of the Scotch, and is sweet to the ear. The Englishman, however, pronounces both Hindoo and bagpipe music as jarring and discordant. Natives find it difficult to appreciate English music, which many of them declare as a confusion of inharmonious sounds. Lord Harris's frank confession of his inability to appreciate Native music is but another proof of the indelible influence exercised upon the formation of tastes and the education of senses by early impressions stored in the brain. Sir Charles Turner made a similar confession some years ago at Madras, while presiding at a public gathering held to celebrate the anniversary of the Madras Philharmonic Society. The fact, however, remains that each race and nation has its own music which it thinks to be sweet, and which it is its duty to cultivate and carry to higher perfection. The people of this country have inherited a science most elaborately worked out, and we are glad Poona has been endeavouring for the last fifteen years for its revival. Baroda also has a music school of its own under the superintendence of a well-known Native professor of music, and we hope to see other Native States following the Gaekwar's enlightened example, and doing something to restore to its pristine glory what may fairly be looked upon as one of the most ennobling and fascinating arts with the help of ancient and modern scientific resources.

INDIAN GOLD MINING SHARES.—Mysore-Harnhalli Shares on Saturday rose 1-16, but there was a reduction of 1-16 in Mysore and Ooregum. Mysore Shares were last quoted 5 to 5½, Mysore-Harnhalli 3½ to 3¾, Nundydroog 1½ to 2, Indian Consolidated New Company (9s. paid) 4s. to 4s. 6d., Balaghat-Mysore (New) 9s. 6d. to 10s., Ooregum Ordinary 2½ to 2½, ditto Preference 2 to 2½, Devala-Moyar 9d. to 1s., Nine Reefs New (fully paid) 4s. to 5s., Mysore Reefs (£1 paid) 7s. 3d. to 7s. 9d., Mysore-Wynaad (18s. 6d. paid) 3s. to 3s. 6d., South-East Mysore 2s. to 2s. 6d., Indian Glenrock New 2s. 3d. to 2s. 9d., Gold Fields of Mysore 9s. to 10s., New South-East Wynaad 6d. to 1s., and Mysore West (17s. paid) 2s. 6d. to 3s.

A LEPROS HOSPITAL.—It has been suggested that no better use could be made of the large subscriptions that have been paid or promised for the memorial that was proposed to be erected to perpetuate the name of the great Minister of Hyderabad, Salar Jung, the first man to found a leper hospital where the poor victims of this much-dreaded disease might find an asylum, instead of roaming about the city and spreading the contagion broadcast. Will not some local philanthropist take the matter in hand, and lay it before the Nizam? No more fitting opportunity, we think, can present itself than the present, when the leading nobility of England, with the Prince of Wales at the head, have taken the question of leprosy and the segregation of lepers in hand, and the London Committee that has been recently formed are about sending a commission to India to study the subject on the spot.

LEPERS.—In consequence of the constantly increasing number of patients afflicted with leprosy, and are daily applying for treatment to Pundit Shibboo, at the Afzul Gunj Hospital, we hear that Dr. Lawrie has applied to the Chuddergaunt Municipality for a building to accommodate the poor people afflicted with the disease, and it is probable that a place situated on the road to Golconda, about two miles out from the City, will be placed at the Pundit's disposal for the purpose. The City Kotwal Nawab Akbar Jung has also been requested to ascertain the names and numbers of persons suffering from leprosy, at present roaming about homeless, and to furnish a list of them to the medical authorities. We wish Pundit Shibboo every success in his laudable endeavours to alleviate the sufferings of these poor people.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE Brigadier at the principal Camps of Exercise will be chosen from the senior officers on the spot, and will not be specially selected from among the Colonels on the Staff as heretofore.

FREE conveyance is sanctioned for the charger of an officer of garrison artillery on transfer to a mountain battery, provided that the horse is an approved charger, and is intended to be used as such.

THE Secretary of State for India has sanctioned an increase from Rs. 30 to Rs. 50 per mensem in the Staff allowances of Staff Surgeons attached to 2nd class districts. The change will take effect from the 1st August.

THE Madras Times says it has reliable authority for stating that Major-General Sir James Dormer, commanding the troops in Egypt, will succeed Sir Charles Arbuthnot as Commander-in-Chief of the Madras Army next February.

No news had reached Army Head-Quarters at Simla regarding the filling up of the vacant division on the Bengal establishment. In case General Elles is nominated, as seems most probable, he will take up the Allahabad command.

AMONG the latest arrivals in Simla is Lieutenant H. Bower, 17th Bengal Cavalry, whose pursuit of the murder of poor Dalglish probably forced Dad Mahomed to take refuge in Russian territory. Lieutenant Bower during his trip to Yarkand came across more than one Russian explorer, we believe, so his journey must have been one of special interest.

THE Midland Railway will be used this trooping season for troops proceeding to and from Northern India instead of the Rajputana-Malwa line. This will necessitate the formation of rest camps at Jhansi and Hoshungabad. When the direct line between Delhi and Umballa is opened troops from the North of Umballa will be moved by that route.

THE 17th Lancers leave behind a detachment of one officer and fifty rank and file in charge of horses, &c., for transfer to the 16th Lancers. This detachment will be despatched so as to arrive in Bombay in sufficient time for embarkation by troopship. A squadron of 147 rank and file of the 17th Lancers will be dropped in Egypt, with the necessary complement of officers.

THE Artillery Camp at Pur, which was such a success last cold weather, is to be repeated this season on a somewhat different plan. Siege practice is to be the end in view, and two regiments of infantry with a complement of sappers are to work with six batteries of artillery in carrying out the operations. The camp will be formed at Pur some time during November.

A SERIOUS tiger-shooting accident is reported from Hyderabad, and has occurred to soldiers. Three men of the 21st Hussars wounded and were following up a tiger, who suddenly charged, and attacked them one after another. The third escaped unharmed, having mortally wounded the animal just as it turned on him, but the other two have been brought into hospital at Trimulgherry with very severe injuries.

THE Civil and Military Gazette remarks:—"A recent Gazette contains a brevet promotion conferred upon a captain for services performed while he was a subaltern. We have no wish to enter into the question of the claims of the officer referred to, and will at once allow that they are at least equal to those of others who have been similarly rewarded; but we would protest against the whole principle of permitting the services of any young officer to stand over unrecognised for five or six years, and then to make him a major in the army on the day he gets his troop or company in his regiment. If the services of a young officer are worthy of reward at all, the reward should be bestowed while the circumstances are still fresh in the memory of all concerned. . . ."

CAPTAIN R. C. TEMPLE's sixth and last memorandum on the new Code of Cantonment Regulations has been completed and forwarded to Government. The whole Code now awaits the further orders of Government as to the best way of publishing it and bringing it into practice. Most likely an influential Committee representing most of the departments of Government will sit upon it before it is advanced very much further. It will be a long document of between 700 and 800 sections; but a glance at the permissive clauses of the Cantonment Act, 1889, will show that this is unavoidable, as there are thirty-one of these, each containing two or three points on which regulations were to be made. The aim of the new Code will be to cover the whole subject of cantonment administration for every part of India and Burma, and to lay down the law on every point connected with it as clearly and completely as possible.

THE Civil and Military Gazette says:—"Soldiers invariably have black sheep among themselves to thank for the curtailment of their privileges. In the case of non-commissioned officers proceeding to England from India, on furlough, they used to be allowed to take an advance of three months' pay. This privilege has now been curtailed to one month, owing to a sergeant on the Unattached List, who had received three months' pay in advance, having spent it all on the voyage, and having applied at the India Office for a further advance, as he had actually no means of living! The good are now to be punished because of this solitary case of indiscretion. The decision is hard on the large body of non-commissioned officers on the Unattached List, and we should like to see it set aside. Surely individual punishments would suffice to meet individual cases of abuse of privilege?

THE following corps, under instructions received from the India Army Headquarters, will be kept in readiness for special service in the Zhob Valley, and they are to concentrate at Hindu Bagh on the 1st October:—Headquarters and two squadrons of the 18th Bengal Lancers; No. 7 Mountain Battery, Royal Artillery; 500 rifles, King's Own Yorkshire Light Infantry; No. 1 Company Bombay Sappers and Miners; 550 rifles, 29th Bombay Infantry; and another native infantry regiment to be detailed later on. All the men are to be medically inspected, only those fit being allowed to proceed. One hundred and fifty rounds of ammunition per man for infantry and one hundred rounds for cavalry will be taken. Field service kits are to be taken, with 5 lbs. additional for warm clothing. The officer commanding the 13th Bombay Infantry will hold four companies of his regiment in readiness to proceed to Loralai on the 18th September to relieve the 29th Bombay Infantry, detailed for the Zhob Column. The officer commanding at Loralai has been directed to withdraw the detachment of the 29th Belooch Regiment from Harnai to headquarters. It is decided that the status of the Column will be field service. Its official designation is to be the Zhob Field Force. Troops proceeding with the force will be rationed daily by the commissariat at field service scale from the dates they leave their respective stations. Waterproof sheets will be allowed at the rate of one per fighting man and follower. The extra 5 lbs. of warm clothing has been sanctioned.

THE Indian Planter's Gazette says:—"When Sir Frederick Roberts reviewed the Behar Light Horse, it may fairly have been said to be in a very high state of efficiency; but since then it has been undoubtedly slowly but steadily deteriorating. More than one of the leading officers have shown decreasing interest in their work, several of the best have resigned, and only a minority have attempted to keep up the ancient prestige. At parades troopers, or rather the minority of them, do their duty with little or no heart. Many deliberately refuse to turn out, but stand and look on; and in spite of the excellent drill sergeant-majors, who are universally popular, it is too manifest that the duties of the members of the regiment have been made so unpleasant and irksome to them that little or no esprit de corps is left in the rank and file. Now, it surely is an absurdity when a patient requiring a doctor prefers to die sooner than disclose what is wrong with him, and why the local commanding officer of the Behar Light Horse should have let things come to pass as they have, seems to us blameworthy in the extreme. It was his duty, when he saw things going out of gear, to find out the reason and rectify matters as quickly as possible. But instead of doing this we find Lieut.-Colonel Hudson actually resigning the post of commandant of a corps, the proved progress to perfection of which has chiefly been due to his own exertions, at a time when it needs his wondrous tact to resuscitate it.

THE TROOPING SEASON.

INDIAN BREWERIES AND THEIR OPPONENTS.

AN Indian "industry" which at one time met with considerable support from the Supreme and Local Administrations in that country, is, we hear, being attacked in a very curious way. The industry which we refer to is that which for some years past has supplied to the British soldier in the East good and wholesome beer, brewed upon the spot, and subject to all manners of tests, &c., which medical knowledge and skill could devise, with the object of securing for him a sound liquor which, taken in moderation, would lead him neither to the guard-room nor to the hospital. It took a long time for the authorities in India to hit upon a plan whereby Tommy Atkins might quench his thirst without playing havoc with his head or stomach. It used to be the custom to insist upon him going to the canteen at midday and there imbibing, whether he wanted it or not, a glass of rum or a pint of beer. He was not allowed to have either at his meals—he had to take his indulgence at the canteen during the hottest part of the day, or leave it alone till eventide. The old seasoned warriors, who were "curry-proof" in the matter of edible or potable stimulants, did not, perhaps, quarrel with an arrangement which secured for them their midday "tot" with scrupulous regularity; but it was hardly an arrangement to encourage temperance in the army by forcing the young soldier, who had just, perhaps, landed in India, to accompany his older comrade to the canteen for the purpose of drinking rum at midday in the hot weather. It was a good thing for the army when—under Sir Hugh Rose's command, we think—this midday drinking of rum was put a stop to, and the men were allowed to have beer with their dinners. The beer, however, which was supplied by the Commissariat in those days was a heavy, heady stuff—little inferior in its deleterious effects to the canteen midday rum. It was, therefore, in every way an important change for the better when certain enterprising capitalists established breweries in the hills for the purpose of supplying a light, sound, and wholesome beer, suitable for consumption under all the exigencies of an Indian climate. The experiment was at first a risky one, for those who undertook it had considerable difficulties to contend against. In the first place, there was the natural prejudice amongst Englishmen against any beer that was not brewed in England; and, excellent although the Indian beer was proved to be, this prejudice lingered, perhaps, longer in the Indian Commissariat than even in private circles. But the Indian brewers persevered; and, in spite of rebuffs, disencouragements, and all manner of official difficulties thrown in their way, they succeeded at last in demonstrating to the authorities that they could supply the troops with an article which would bear the test of all the examinations or proofs required. The result was that excellent malt liquor could be obtained for the regimental canteens at a reasonable figure, and at a great saving to the State in many ways. It was, therefore, only a sensible policy which the Government of India adopted in encouraging the local beer industry, though it had the result of diminishing the importation of beer from England—an importation which put the Indian Commissariat to considerable trouble, and the Government of India to considerable expense. The Indian brewers, however, gave such satisfaction in their supplies that, throughout the country and in Burma, they secured lengthened contracts, which still hold. But, if our information be correct, there is trouble brewing for these brewers. The enlightened and enterprising Parsee has come upon the scene, and scenting, of course, "profit," is not over particular as to the means of making it. He is getting Tommy Atkins to find fault with the Indian brewed beer, and to ask that English-brewed beer, as supplied by the Parsee, may take its place in the regimental canteens. Those who know the ways of Parsee store-dealers, and the ways of canteen sergeants, will have very little difficulty in understanding how matters can be arranged so as to make it appear that the British soldier in India prefers English-brewed beer to the beer brewed in the country. It may here be stated that the great brewers of England, such as Bass, Allsopp, and others whose names are accepted as guarantees for the quality of their brews, do not supply liquor under contract to Indian regimental canteens. Beer supplied by the Parsee merchant comes from a source known only to the Parsee merchant. But where the Indian brewers have a just cause of complaint is in this: They have to supply beer of a certain strength and quality, defined by very stringent rules, and under very stringent supervision. The Parsee can supply what he likes, and no official questions are asked. If the British soldier in India desires English-brewed beer, and it can be obtained at the same price as Indian-brewed beer, it would be neither good for the State nor for him to force the "local industry" upon him. But the same precautions which are insisted upon with the Indian brewers, as to quality, &c., should be insisted upon with the Parsee suppliers. Then let the best beer win. But it is certainly an extraordinary wandering away from the sound system of policy which, without fostering monopolies, still helped to encourage legitimate local industries, to find that so important a local industry as that of the Indian Breweries should be placed in jeopardy by the machinations of Parsee traders acting in combination with corruptible canteen sergeants.

DEATH OF LIEUT. DOUGLAS, R.N.

Lieut. Douglas, of the Royal Navy, died, at Poona, Sept. 3, of typhoid fever. He had been suffering for seventeen days. Surgeon Burke, the Assistant Civil Surgeon, was attending the deceased. He was thirty-three years of age, and came out to India about eight months ago to join the Marine Survey of India, prior to which he was on the new survey vessel Research at home. The funeral took place in the evening at the New Cemetery. There was an imposing cemetery. The coffin was placed on an artillery gun drawn by six black horses. The funeral left the residence of the deceased officer at five o'clock. Officers of the Royal Navy followed the coffin, and a large number of military officers also joined the procession. Near Wanowrie Lines a guard of honour, consisting of 200 men, under the command of Captain Nugent, with band, awaited the arrival of the procession. The gun carriage halted, and the funeral party went ahead. On reaching the cemetery the coffin was taken off and borne upon the shoulders of the carrying party to the grave. The Rev. Mr. Horne read the service. The funeral was attended by Sir George Greaves and staff, Major-General Solly-Flood and staff, Captain Cox representing Lord Harris, besides all the officers of the Garrison of Poona and Kirkee.

A JOCKEY SUSPENDED AT LUCKNOW.

The Lucknow stewards have held an inquiry into the conduct of the jockey Dunn when riding Lord William Beresford's horse Cumberland in the last race on Saturday, Aug. 30. After the bell rang for the jockeys to mount for the race Dunn, though repeatedly ordered to go out, hung back in the enclosure in a manner that raised suspicion, and the assumption was that he wanted to interest himself in one of the horses in the race. Then, instead of going across the shortest way to the post, he took his horse at a good pace a long way round the course, and in the race he lay a long way behind. The stewards at once held an inquiry, and on Sunday evening published the following decision:—

"The stewards of the Lucknow Races, having taken into careful consideration the whole of the evidence and statements in the case, unanimously declare their conviction that Dunn purposely made no attempt to win the race, and they hereby, under Rule VIII. para. (2) of Part II. of the Calcutta Turf Club Rules, suspend him from riding during the remainder of the meeting, and, further, strongly recommend that his suspension be extended, under the same para., to all meetings under the Calcutta Turf Club Rules for a period of one year."

The foregoing is signed by Colonel Turnbull, Captain Dewar, Messrs. Alexander and Lawrence, Captains Renton and Hopkins, Major Neeld, and Colonel Williamson. The decision has been sent to Calcutta for confirmation by the Calcutta Turf Club.

LONDON W. H. ALLEN & CO., 18, WATERLOO PLACE.

FOR COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS. DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED A REMEDY TO denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false. This Caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—See The Times, July 18th, 1884.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY. GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH, LONDON, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBSON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME OF DIARRHŒA." From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla. Jan. 5, 1880. To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.

DEAR SIR.—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaar, and, judging from the sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power. We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescribe and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted. DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, Hysteria. IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d. SOLE MANUFACTURER, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Gt. Russell St. W.C.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

"Earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons Justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

What higher aim can man attain, than conquest over human pair?

JEOPARDY OF LIFE, THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset!! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm. The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—J. C. ENO.

CAUTION.—Examine each Bottle, and see that the Capsule is marked ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." Without it you have been imposed on by worthless imitation.

OLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS, POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S PATENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced Life they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 30, 1890.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 12th September; from Allahabad and Madras to the 10th September; and from Calcutta to the 9th September.

THE only business at the Council meeting on 4th September was the passing of the Bill introduced by Mr. Hutchings on the 28th August for amending Chapter 5 of the Registration Act.

THE VICEROY has recovered from his late attack of fever, and is now allowed to take carriage exercise. His Excellency will pay a flying visit to Nabha after leaving Patiala.

RAJA DURGA CHARAN LAHA and the Hon. Amir Hosain vacate their seats in the Legislative Council on the completion of their terms of office. Successors have not yet been nominated to the vacancies.

SIR CHARLES CROSTHWAITE, Chief Commissioner of Upper Burma, has left Mandalay for a short tour in the Chindwin districts.

GENERAL SIR HARRY PRENDERGAST, K.C.B., V.C., has gone to Simla from Baroda on a visit to the Viceroy, and is to remain there for about two weeks.

SIR W. LOCKHART will take over command of the Punjab Frontier Force early in November.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL KEEN will command the Northern Force in the Attock manœuvres, and Sir William Lockhart the Southern. Major-General Lord Frankfort will act as Chief Umpire. Major R. K. Ridgeway, V.C., has been appointed Assistant Quartermaster-General for the Camp-of-Exercise, the arrangements for which will be on a very large scale.

THE Black Mountain parade takes place in October, under the direction of Brigadier-General McQueen.

THE Zhob Expeditionary Force under Sir George White will rendezvous at Hindu Bas early in October, and probably will proceed across the hills bounding the Zhob Valley to the north, where Dost Mahomed, the late Chief of the Zhobwals, still exercises some little authority. The country is quite unknown. Colonel Holdich, now in charge of the Beluchistan survey party, will personally superintend the survey operations in connection with General White's force. The expedition will terminate with a visit to the tract of country held by the Kidderzai section of the Shirani tribe, which has not yet made submission to the political authorities. The Kidderzais number only 300 or 400 fighting men, so are not likely to give trouble to the column.

THE Siyin tribe of Chins, against whom the troops at Fort White have been carrying on intermittent hostilities for the past two years, have at last made a complete surrender. On Sept. 1st the Chiefs of the tribe assembled in a body at Fort White, delivered over their last seventeen captives in the presence of General Wolsley, and paid the tribute of Rs. 200 imposed upon them as a sign of their acknowledgment of allegiance to the British power.

COLONEL HENDERSON, Superintendent of the Thuggee and Dacoity Department, has postponed taking his six months' leave home until next year.

SURGEON-MAJOR COATES, Civil Surgeon of Murree, and Surgeon Major Lewtas, of the Guides, have been nominated Civil Surgeons of Simla. Surgeon Major Beatson declined the appointment which was offered to him.

MR. C. J. MACDONALD, for so many years Superintendent of the Terai, died recently at Naini Tal.

PROPOSALS have been made for a survey of the country about Aden during next cold weather. If the work is sanctioned Colonel Tanner will close his long career in India by undertaking it.

OWING to the increase of business and correspondence between India and the East African Company's territories a direct mail service and money-order exchanges have been arranged with the company's post-offices at Mombassa and Lamu.

A SERIOUS accident occurred to Dr. Robertson on his way up from Srinagar to Gilgit. In crossing the Indus the boatmen overloaded the ferry-boat with men, baggage, and animals, with the result that it capsized, and several lives were lost. A quantity of Dr. Robertson's belongings went to the bottom of the stream, including a rather large sum of money.

H.E. THE VICEROY leaves Simla on a tour on Oct. 21st, reaching Calcutta in the second week of December.

A VICEREGAL levee will be held at Calcutta on Dec. 16th, and a Drawing Room on the 18th of the same month.

THE name of the Goorkha cantonment of Kaludana has been changed to Lansdowne, in honour of H.E. the Viceroy.

GOVERNMENT will, in all likelihood, soon consider the appointment of a Revenue Commissioner for British Beluchistan, as the province is expanding.

H.E. THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF will leave Simla for Bombay on Oct. 15th.

SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS, addressing the members of the Army Temperance Association at Simla, said that, since its formation in India, crime had lessened and the health of the troops had improved.

FORT WHITE has been found unhealthy, and General Wolsley suggests a new site should be selected for military headquarters in the Chin Hills.

A LARGE bridge on the Eastern Bengal Railway, near Gogoola, was carried away by a heavy blast of wind, immediately after a train had passed over.

THE military authorities are urging on a new survey and estimate for the Bolan Railway, via the Mushkaf route.

THROUGH communication on the Darjeeling Himalaya Railway has been restored.

THE damages done by the late floods at the River Gogra, in the Ballia district, according to the latest accounts, include the complete ruin of the kharif crops, over an area of 155,000 bigas, valued at 19 lakhs of rupees.

THE damage done by the recent floods in the Bolan exceeds the original estimate. About seven miles of the permanent way has been washed away, together with several bridges.

BETWEEN seven and eight thousand rupees have been cleared at the Fancy Fair at Simla, in aid of the Countess Dufferin Fund.

COLONEL R. ALEXANDER, R.H.A., who has returned from a short trip to Australia, has resigned the command of the Royal Artillery in the Secunderabad District, and proceeds home on retirement from the Army after thirty-five years' service, most of which has been spent in India.

NOTES.

THE telegrams from India which we publish to-day will show how scanty the news is there of anything important or eventful. And the news which comes to hand by the Overland Mail has only the same characteristics.

It is certainly satisfactory to learn that there is a new departure from the old way of getting a railway made in India. It is found to be no longer necessary to lean upon Government either to make the line or guarantee the interest on the required capital. It is a most promising sign for the development of the resources of a country when any district in it offers to pay locally for the line it wants, and it is satisfactory to know that in the new departure Madras takes the lead. Madras is determined to show that she is not so "benighted" after all.

COMMENTING on this matter a financial contemporary says this morning:—"In the interest of India it is sincerely to be hoped that the public enterprise which has just made itself apparent in Madras will extend indefinitely. Railways are sadly needed in the Dependency, whereas capital is by no means plentiful, and the method of raising money adopted in the instance of the Mayavaram-Mutupet line is possibly the best under the circumstances. The district to be served taxes itself to provide half the necessary capital, the Provincial Government of Madras advancing the other half as a loan."

HERE is another nut for the Congress and those friends of India who want an extension of the elective system there to crack:—The Resident of Bangalore has informed the new Municipal Board that the elective system has worked so badly in Bangalore that he had applied for and obtained the sanction of the Government of India to the abolition of the elective system; but that he is willing to give the system a further trial under the new rules he has framed, and hopes the representatives will show a greater appreciation of the trust reposed in them by the rate-payers, and a livelier interest in duties demanded of them as municipal commissioners.

THE friends of the Congress and admirers of Lord Reay might do worse than read the following, taken, be it noted, from a Native newspaper:—"Facta, non verba. This was one of the mottoes which was paraded at the Poona Native Institute, when Lord Harris lately visited it, and which his Excellency made the text of a little exhortation to his hearers. We are not sure that the Governor had in mind the sad failure of the Reay Memorial Fund, started in Poona, when he urged upon the assembly the value of deeds as against mere words. With educated Natives the motto is reversed in practice, and so it would read verba, non facta. On the eve of Lord Reay's departure the Poona Brahmins were most effusive in their gratitude and thankfulness to him. They vowed that they would perpetuate his name by founding a museum, and they estimated the cost of it to be Rs. 35,000. If the depth and earnestness of their feeling could be gauged by the profuseness of their eloquence, one might suppose that nothing could be easier for them than to subscribe, not Rs. 35,000, but ten times that amount. A subscription list was sent round, and Rs. 9,000 has been promised up to now. But the actual amount realised is Rs. 4,289. It appears that the feeling of the Deccanese, whatever be the motives that had prompted it, evaporated, no sooner had the object of their adoration turned his back upon them and left these shores for good."

DISCUSSING the probable method by which the Government of India will take up two crores of paper required under the New Currency Reserve Act, the Englishman states that the voluntary conversion of 4½ per cent. securities is proceeding most successfully. Three crores have already been presented for transfer, as much as one crore in the final week of August. This is the largest financial scheme ever projected in India, and when completed will save ten lakhs annually. The Englishman believes Sir David Barbour will borrow a leaf from Mr. Goschen's book and convert one of 4 per cent. loans. The Government can give three months' notice of cessation of interest on one of its many four per cent. rupee loans. Simultaneously it might issue a new loan of equal amount, but bearing lower rate of interest—say 3½ or 3¼ per cent. Of this loan it would itself take two crores for currency reserve, issuing the remainder to the public with the proceeds of issue, and the two crores of released cash reserve it would redeem the four per cent. loan at par. The transaction would be a profitable one to Government in every way, and the time being now favourable we should not be surprised if this or even a more comprehensive conversion scheme were adopted. A general conversion of rupee securities would mean a great annual saving of interest, and where economy is in question the sweet simplicity of India four per cents. would be disregarded, as was that of British Consols.

THE present season at Kashmir has not, says the Pioneer, been without its little "events," and it is well for an officer of Her Majesty's forces that the Penal Code is not in force in the Valley. The dāk bungalow book at Uri contains with charming frankness the following entry:—"Turned out a Babú to make room for two ladies and a nurse," nor does the officer who recorded the entry make any attempt to conceal his name. The Babú not only declined to move out when requested to do so, but demanded to know the law and the section of the Act by which he could be ousted. The unwritten law of chivalry had evidently not formed a part of his legal education, but the gentleman under whose protection the ladies were travelling very soon schooled him into it by first turning out his bedding from the room and then sending the Babú in search after it. The Babú, of course, represented his grievance to the Resident.

THE result is not stated; but here certainly is another "Indian grievance" for Congress to take up, and for Mr. Bradlaugh to bring before Parliament next session.

SCIENCE continues to trouble the weak in mind and in digestion as to what they should eat, drink, and avoid. Dr. Richardson has demonstrated that there is danger, if not death, in imbibing alcohol in any shape or form; Dr. Allinson would have us avoid tea and coffee, and look for exhilaration in water that has been boiled; and other "faddists" repeat their warnings against indulging in any food that is pleasant to the eye or acceptable to the palate, unless its use has been sanctioned by their approval. "A mad world, my masters," indeed, this would be if all of us listened to advice; but, thank Heaven, there are some philosophers remaining who take their own way first and listen to advice afterwards, because it can then do no harm, and of that school of philosophy we are proud to be disciples. We are not prepared, however, to say that the doctors are altogether wrong advisers, especially when they denounce tea dissipation. Sam Slick considered tea in any form as a sinful waste of sugar and water, but the world continues to drink it, and, according to the physicians, to injure its digestion. Ordinary Indian black tea, we are now told, contains fifteen per cent. of tannin, a third more than even oak bark itself, and yet millions of human beings are putting this virulent stuff into their stomachs daily and nightly." Can it be a China enemy who hath penned this?

News has reached Simla that a disturbance has occurred among the Lushais on the Cashar border. Changsil has been attacked, and Captain Herbert Browne, son of Lord Ulick Browne, and personal assistant to the Chief Commissioner in Assam, is killed. Full particulars are not yet to hand, but Mr. Cole, of the police, declares he can hold out for a month, if necessary. Changsil is about seventy-five miles from Thalna Chara, and a reinforcement will probably be sent from that outpost.

CALCUTTA, SEPT. 28.

The Governor of Madras cut the first sod of the Mayavaram-Mutupet Railway on Friday. Replying to an address from the Local Board, he commended the public spirit of the district which was willing to tax itself to make a railway. This was the first instance of a railway constructed by means of local taxation. The Government of Madras would contribute half the cost.

AFGHANISTAN.

CALCUTTA, SEPT. 28.

The families of Sirdars Mahomed Mosan Khan and Mahomed Hasham Khan have arrived at Peshawur from Cabul. These Sirdars, who are younger brothers of Ishak Khan, have been refugees in India for the past two years. The Ameer has now allowed their families to join them, bringing with them all their movable property. He seems to be showing clemency to the families of rebels, and has released all the female prisoners in Cabul Gaol.

It is reported that the Ameer has promised to aid the Khan f Dir against Umra Khan of Jandol.

(Straits Times.)

The subject of Tamil coolie immigration into this Colony aroused at the recent meeting of the Penang and Province Wellesley Planters' Association a debate lively enough to prove that the question at issue has become of immediate concern. The need of change in the present coolie system was admitted by the speakers, but the direction to be taken gave rise to divergence of opinion. The advisability of the Government suggestion to raise the rate of wages was not generally questioned, but the idea of shortening contracts met with opposition on the ground that planters could not afford it. It was pointed out that to work satisfactorily a higher pay scheme, together with a curtailment of contract time, the Government should turn immigrant agent ofent, bear part of the expense, and import labourers for planters. At present the latter say they have all the trouble and bother of introducing labourers, whom the Government engages at high rates when their term runs out. Obviously, the Government in such circumstances ought to import its own labourers, and not to depend for them on the planters; but to hold that the State, by raising the rate of statute wages to immigrants, intends to secure a better class of coolies at the planters' expense is absurd. Equally absurd is the idea of export duties in the ports of the Colony to meet the expense of Government immigration for the behoof of the planters. The latter have done their part in furthering the prosperity of the Colony; but to expect the trade of the Settlements to be trammelled by custom-houses for their profit savours of forgetfulness that the commercial eminence of the Straits arises mainly from the enterprise of Europeans and Chinese merchants. The planters would better consult their interests by giving up the custom-house idea, and by putting their heads together to devise a workable immigration scheme. The latter might aim principally at lessening the abnormally high Tamil death-rate which conceivably might cause the Indian Government to stop further emigration; for, naturally and properly, they set more store by the lives of their own subjects than by the convenience of planters. The latter carry on business not from philanthropic motives, but for gain, and have a right to protest against a system of recruiting which foists upon them bad material that fills the hospitals and brings on them a bad name. Perhaps the Demerara plan of having an experienced Government agent in the South Indian agricultural districts to pick out good material would be an improvement on the present system, but the financial part of the idea calls for alterations to suit local circumstances, which certainly will not admit of a land-tax to work an assisted coolie immigration scheme. The competition of the Native States acts as another disturbing factor in any calculations based on experience in British Guiana. The meeting hence did not commit itself to any extreme expression of opinion on the point raised, but affirmed the necessity for changes in the present system. It is to be hoped that the committee appointed for the purpose will hit upon a practical scheme to conciliate conflicting interests.

MADRAS MILITARY REDUCTIONS.

The 8th Regiment of Cavalry was disbanded for alleged "mutinous symptoms;" but the allegation was not satisfactorily established. Mutiny was in the air, in Bengal at any rate, and the regiment was regarded at the time of its disbandment as the victim of an error of judgment on the part of the authorities that was due to the general uncertainty.

throughout India as to the reliability of any Native troops in the employ of the East India Company. The 18th Madras Infantry was disbanded on account of its "being in an unsatisfactory condition." It was under orders for Burma, and it exhibited reluctance to depart. The 10th, the 12th, and 33rd Infantry were recently disbanded in order that three regiments for Burma might be formed without putting the State to extra expense. All the other regiments indicated were disbanded for "financial reasons," or in order that funds might be saved in the South for expenditure in the North of India. The strength of corps on the Madras Establishment on the dates mentioned was as follows:—

MILITARY CHANGES.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

It has been said that the India Office and the Government of India, between them, could carry out the four army corps scheme in its entirety, except the abolition of the local commands-in-chief, without going to Parliament. However this may be, it is certain that a great many changes in military organisation in India have just been made, or being made, and will be made; all of which need no Act of Parliament, and yet still bear directly on the four army corps scheme. We have now four Inspectors-General of Ordnance, four Controllers of Military Accounts, four Commissaries-General, and two Clothing Depôts which could each supply two army corps. It is true we have only three Surgeons-General in our military organisation, but as they are not heads of departments of supply and accounts, they could, like Generals Commanding, be added to without inconvenience at short notice. We believe that attention is now being drawn to the reduction of the Madras and Bombay head-quarters staff. We hear, and it is no doubt true, that it is proposed to reduce the salary of the local Quartermaster-General, and abolish the two appointments of Deputy Quartermaster-General altogether. This certainly seems to be a drastic measure, for we should imagine that the extra work thrown on the local Quartermasters-General by the abolition of their deputies would be a strong reason for allowing the present salary to remain as it is. In Bombay, too, owing to the trooping work, we think the Quartermaster-General would find his hands pretty full in the season without an assistant of some sort. Of course reform is needed, but it would be bad policy to overdo it. A better plan would be, we think, to amalgamate the local head-quarters staff; that is, let the local Adjutant-General and Quartermaster-General join their offices in such a way as to be able to dispense with the services of one staff officer between them. At present, in each minor Presidency there are an Adjutant-General, a Deputy Adjutant-General, an Assistant Adjutant-General, an Assistant Adjutant-General for Royal Artillery, a Quartermaster-General, and a Deputy Quartermaster-General, or six officers in all on the Head-quarters General Staff. If these were amalgamated under one office it would be feasible, without reducing salaries, to dispense with the services of one of those officers. It will be bad policy to reduce the salaries of any of these officers, for their pay was fixed many years ago, and if considered necessary then to give them a certain amount; that necessity has been considerably strengthened by mere lapse of time and change of financial conditions generally. The argument that the Simla Headquarters has assumed greater control over local presidential military affairs, and that the local headquarters has, therefore, greatly decreased in importance since the salaries were first fixed, is not a good one, and points to centralisation, when our great object should be to decentralise as far as possible with safety. Many opposers of the four army corps scheme have been won over on being assured that each army corps would be almost as distinct in certain respects as each Presidential Army is now. It is not wise to destroy the belief by degrading and lessening the power of the local Headquarters Staff. We hope, then, that if reform in this connection is contemplated, as we believe it is, it will be based on the lines we have indicated, and that the number of officers will be reduced rather than the salaries cut down.

SPECIALLY-RECRUITED REGIMENTS FOR INDIA.

(Pioneer.)

Sir Orfeur Cavenagh has recently delivered a lecture at home in which he strongly advocates a return in a measure to the system in vogue under the East India Company of European regiments which he would have specially recruited for Burma. We cannot reproduce here his arguments in detail: they are sound on the whole, as India unquestionably suffers severely from the effects of short service, and the numerous cantonments in the hills there is no reason why European soldiers should not be kept for fifteen or twenty years in the country, the privilege of home leave being granted under certain conditions. One statement made by General Cavenagh, however, is very remarkable. He holds that very young soldiers should be recruited for his proposed Indian battalions, as men of, say, twenty-five, with fixed habits, are more likely to succumb to climatic diseases than youths who could be gradually acclimatised. He quotes the Company's Army in proof of this contention, the recruits for which were, as a rule, under the age of twenty. He asserts that they stand the climate better than older men, even though they served more in the plains than is now the case. He must, however, have forgotten that typhoid fever, which is now the scourge of our European garrison, was scarcely known forty or fifty years ago. Cholera, sunstroke, and dysentery—the two last generally assisted by intemperance—were the diseases then in vogue. Nowadays the medical returns show that both as regards officers and men typhoid is terribly fatal, and that it is the young arrivals who are peculiarly liable to be attacked. There is another disease, too, which we need not specify, which wrecks the health of the unmarried youths who come out to a frightful extent; and with the mistaken sentimentalism now prevailing in certain circles at home the ravages under this head are not likely to be checked for some time to come. So far, therefore, from agreeing with General Cavenagh on the particular point instanced, we should prefer seeing our age limit fixed, say, at twenty-one, under which no soldier should be shipped to India. Short service and the state of the recruiting market, however, forbid any hope of such a regulation.

A TOBACCO TAX.

(Indian Daily News.)

A tobacco tax is suggested as a substitute for the income-tax. A duty on imported tobacco and cigars, accompanied by a similar impost on Indian-grown tobacco, would yield a considerable revenue, and has been put forward as a more sensible and less objectionable means of raising money than the income-tax is with its hardships and manifold abuses. But, on consideration, the idea of taxing tobacco, which has been often suggested, has been abandoned. So far as imported tobacco is concerned there would be no difficulty; but to tax the home-grown article would probably involve more inquisitorial hardship than the income-tax itself. Tobacco is a plant that every ryot can grow for his own and family consumption; and a tobacco tax would require a body of excise men who would be fully as obnoxious as the Income-tax Collector, and extortion and corruption would be still more widely practised. Then, again, it is objected that tobacco is almost as much a necessary of life to the Native as is salt itself. It is an article of universal consumption by both men and women in India, and even children learn to have a pull at the hookah before they are weaned. To deprive the whole community of this honey-suckle would be a hardship of the most intolerable kind. This has been so clearly expressed that Government have never felt confident in entertaining the idea of a tobacco tax. The finer sorts of manufactured and imported tobacco would perhaps bear the imposition; but in the case of the inferior article which enters into general consumption, the authorities have never seen their way to make of it a fiscal medium, however tempting the prospect may have been of its universal use making it a productive source of revenue. Mr. Gladstone has a theory that no tax is really productive until it reaches the masses. The income-tax in England is probably an exception, though beer and tobacco go a long way in support of the theory. The circumstances of the masses in the two countries are sufficiently diverse to warrant forbearance in the application of the principle.

* Exclusive of officers serving with regiments.

† Exclusive of officers serving with the Sappers and Miners.

‡ Exclusive of the three new Burma Regiments.

THE FINANCES OF BURMA.

(Rangoon Times.)

According to the Budget Estimate for 1890-91 the civil receipts from all Burma for the current year will exceed the civil expenditure by the sum of Rs. 1,50,33,000, say in round numbers a crore and a-half of rupees. To get at the actual profit estimated for the current year it would be necessary to deduct from this the military expenditure in garrisoning the country. Such field operations as those in the Chin-Lushai expedition should not be brought in, as they are in reality part of the work of conquest, and go to swell the cost of the acquisition of the country. This we know, from the statement made in Parliament by Sir J. Gorst, to have been Rs. 4,524,700—that is, in round numbers, four and a-half crores of rupees. If this has been the total cost of the war to date, the mere cost garrisoning the country cannot be anything like a crore and a-half per annum; so that, according to the Budget Estimate, which is more likely to be under than over the mark, as Indian financiers are gloomy and desponding mortals, the province of Burma, taken as a whole, must now be again paying a handsome surplus into the Imperial Treasury. From Lower Burma the total civil receipts for the year are expected to be three crores, and the total civil expenditure something under a crore and a-quarter, leaving a profit of over one and three-quarter crores. Of this, considerably less than one-quarter of a crore accrues under the head of provincial receipts and expenditure, where there would be some chance of its being utilised for the benefit of the province. The great bulk of it, more than a crore and a-half, is the surplus of Imperial Civil receipts over Imperial Civil expenditure, which of course is swept off to India as "Burma's contribution to the Imperial expenses of the Empire," and, so far as the taxpayers of Burma are concerned, nothing more is ever heard of it. In Upper Burma the deficit for the current year is estimated to be 39 lakhs. Of this, about 14 lakhs is covered by odd lakhs left out of our calculation in the case of Lower Burma, in order to have only crores and simple fractions of crores to deal with. This leaves 25 lakhs, or a quarter of a crore, which, deducted from the 1½ crores profit from Lower Burma, leaves one crore and a half as the profit from all Burma. From this has to come military expenditure, and we find that, according to the Administration Report for 1888-89, the troops then cost something under a million pounds sterling. As more than half are Native troops, we presume conventional sterling is meant, in which case the cost was under a crore of rupees. But this expenditure included some forces in the field, which should not be reckoned as part of the garrison properly so-called; and since the beginning of that year the total number of troops in the province has been reduced; so that, if we allow the half crore for military expenditure, we shall probably not be very far off the mark. This leaves a crore of rupees as the net profit from Burma expected during the current year. If one crore of rupees is a fair contribution for Burma now, it cannot be seriously maintained that two crores will be a fair contribution five, ten, or even fifteen years hence. What is urgently required is that the amount of Burma's fair contribution should be fixed. In the absence of defensive wars the legitimate Imperial expenditure cannot vary much from year to year; and if we could only compound for a stated sum per annum, the increase of revenue arising from the growth of the province would remain to fructify in it, instead of being lost to Burma as it practically is now.

THE PURCHASE OF GOVERNMENT STORES.

(Bombay Gazette.)

The recently issued report of the Madras Chamber of Commerce includes a batch of correspondence on a subject which is not new, but which may all the same be with advantage brought persistently to the notice of Government, and, when opportunity offers, of the House of Commons. A few months ago the Karachi Chamber addressed the other Chambers, calling attention to the curtailment of what it described as the legitimate import trade of India by the direct purchases made through the Secretary of State in England of all European goods required by the Government of India. The Chamber, naturally, took up the question primarily from the trade point of view, but they showed that at least as much was to be said upon it in the interest of the taxpayer as in that of the trader. Not only, they contended, do the direct imports of the Government of India—valued at eleven crores in four years hamper—the legitimate Indian import trade, but they entail considerably higher expenditure to the Government. Doubtless a large part of their expenditure is necessarily incurred in England, for, as the Karachi Chamber admit, special engineering and railway work must in many cases be indented for through the Secretary of State, though this necessity has been most unreasonably exaggerated in the recent order against the purchase in India of iron work of local manufacture. But there is a good reason to believe that a large bulk of the material and stores imported by Government could be bought here as advantageously in regard to quality as at home, and at a distinct saving in cost. Articles of Continental manufacture, for example, could be imported direct from the place of manufacture if the local Government were permitted to procure them in the local market. As it is, they are bought by the Stores Department of the India Office in England, and thus the charges of handling them have to be paid twice over, and an additional freight charge is incurred. Amongst other advantages of buying locally which are pointed out by the Karachi Chamber would be the fact that the Government would then buy now and when they wanted, that they would get all the advantage of local competition, and that the rates at which they would be able to buy would often be below those in the home market, particularly below those that rule when the Director of Stores goes there as a buyer. The arguments will serve a double purpose in Bombay, for an endeavour—happily unsuccessful—has recently been made in the Municipal Corporation to introduce the system of buying through an agent in England European stores required for the Municipality. In all probability we should buy worse, and buy more dearly. The representations to the Government appear not to have been without result, since although in writing on the 16th of May the Government spoke of the rules as having been devised in the interest of economy, and expressed their belief that due care is exercised by the Stores Department to procure supplies in the cheapest market, a letter which was written ten days later informed the Karachi Chamber that the question of the advisability of modifying the rules in question was under consideration. Other aspects of the question, which especially affect the Indian manufacturing engineers and iron founders, have, we believe, since then been brought to the notice of Government.

THE SALT DUTY.

(Bombay Gazette.)

Sir John Gorst's announcement, during the discussion of the Indian Budget, that he could hold out no hope of a reduction of the salt duty, has not deterred the Native papers from showing cause for a reduction at the earliest possible moment. Sir David Barbour will be unlucky if, in March next, his surplus is much below three crores. He estimated it at Rs. 270,000; but this was on the basis of exchange at 1s. 4½d., or about fourpence below its present rate. The season prospects are, generally speaking, excellent throughout India; and the only unsatisfactory feature in the financial situation is the railway returns, which, so far as the two great lines leading to Bombay are concerned, continue to be unsatisfactory. Here, there is little doubt, the returns will be below the estimate, and a deduction must, on that account, be made from the gains accruing on exchange. At the same time, it is not improbable that the great breakdown of the Bolan section of the Sind-Pishin Railway will necessitate a large outlay next year, something like eighty lakhs being mentioned as the sum which will be required to provide an alternative route through the Zhob Valley. No calculation, therefore, as to the sum that Sir David Barbour will have at his disposal next year can yet be looked upon as other than tentative, and it is still somewhat too soon to conclude that the Government will be free next March to say whether the salt duty can with advantage be reduced. Up to date the duty has shown satisfactory results, the yield at the end of July having been a little under two crores and three-quarters, or a lakh and a half under the return at the corresponding date last year, but six and a quarter lakhs in excess of the receipts at the end of July, 1880. The consumption of salt has shown no substantial falling-off since the extra eight annas a maund was put on in January, 1888. It was 3,37,72,000 maunds in 1886-87—the last year, in which it was levied at Rs. 2 per maund during the whole year—and last year it was 3,30,86,000. Probably a crore and a half would be lost to the Government if the old rate were reverted to, as the yield in 1886-87 was only Rs. 6,35,84,000, whereas last year it was Rs. 7,93,06,000. If a large surplus is available the remission of the extra eight annas that was imposed in 1888 reluctantly, and to meet an emergency, would be the most righteous and the most widely beneficent way of making use of it, and our Native contemporaries are doing a good service in pressing upon the Government in this connection "the greatest good of the greatest number." Compared with this, the abolition of the income-tax; so long as the salt-tax is at Rs. 2-8 a maund, would look like a piece of class legislation, the work of a mere section of the community working in its own exclusive interest.

COALS OF FIRE.

(Pioneer.)

"It is reported from several districts that societies have been formed to discourage the use of liquor. How much effect these societies may have had it is yet impossible to say, but it is eminently to be desired that the existing combination should prove successful, and that the movement should spread." "If the only result (of the recent discussion of the Indian excise system) in the North-West Provinces should prove to be the formation of temperance societies, even so the prominence lately given to excise matters will not have been without its use." These quotations read like extracts from the speeches of Mr. Caine or Canon Wilberforce. As a matter of fact they are from the review of the Junior Member of the Board of Revenue on the Excise Administration of the North-West Provinces and Oudh for the past year, and may, therefore, be taken to express the sentiments of the Local Government on the subject. If ever there was a case of heaping coals of fire, surely we have it here. If there was one part of India more than another which Mr. Caine singled out for his bitterest attacks and wildest denunciation, it was the North-West Province. The authorities were represented as so many harpies, gloating over a territory to be exploited in the interests of Government revenue, at the expense of the degradation and demoralisation of the inhabitants, official reports were ransacked and tortured to find evidence in support of the accusation; and no misrepresentation was too glaring nor misquotation too disingenuous, provided it added one more touch to the dark picture of a Government deliberately ruining a people in order to replenish a pinched exchequer. There are two ways of meeting an attack of this sort. One is to expose the hollowness of the assailant's arguments and the shakiness of his assertions, his ignorance of facts and his proneness to fiction. All this, as we saw some months ago, the Government of these provinces has already done, and the result has been the augmentative demolition of almost every position of offence which Mr. Caine took up. But if it is possible to disprove charges of vicious acts or inclination by showing that your accuser is wrong in his facts, you may gain even a more signal moral victory over him by actually supporting those very agencies, which aim at restricting the opportunities of vice, and which are the special objects of his admiration and enthusiasm. This is what the excise authorities in the North-West Province have now done. Last year they realised close on a hundred thousand rupees less than in the year preceding from farming licenses and stillhead duty on country liquor. The attitude Government has taken up in regard to these societies ought to convince Mr. Caine that he has been wholly mistaken in his interpretation of its motives and intentions, if, that is to say, argument has not convinced him already.

AFRIDI RECRUITS.

(Pioneer.)

The strengthening of the 27th and 28th Punjab Infantry by the addition of a ninth company to be recruited entirely from Afridis furnishes further proof of the desire of the Government of India to utilise the splendid fighting material available across the Peshawur border. In April last five Native regiments were similarly strengthened, and apparently no difficulty has been found regarding recruits, or the second step would scarcely have been taken. We then noticed how desirable it was to enlist men from among the trans-frontier tribesmen now that the supply from the once warlike races in India itself is falling off; and in course of time no doubt each regiment of the Frontier Force and the Punjab Infantry which have already Pathan companies will be raised to nine companies. This will give us some 2,000 additional men, whose bravery, skill in shooting, and physical excellence cannot be questioned. There will be twenty regiments over 1,000 strong in peace time, every one of which could justifiably claim a place in the first line in case of a great war. The fighting strength of the Afridi clans has been estimated lately at about 30,000 men, and as there are already some 3,000 of these in the Native Army, and another 1,000 are enrolled in the Khyber Rifles, it may be taken that eventually one man in every five will be found in the ranks of our regiments. The political relations with the Afridis have since the Afghan War been most satisfactory, and in the further enlistment of the tribesmen lies a certain guarantee that they will be loyal to the Government of India under all circumstances. Those who remember the frequent alarm in the Khyber and the expeditions into the Bazaar Valley in 1878-79 will be able to appreciate what a great change has come over our old frontier enemies. Their independence has in no way been interfered with, but their confidence has been won by tact and fair dealing, and their anxiety to serve the Sirkar was never better proved than when the Khyber Rifles volunteered for the Black Mountain Expedition.

BENGAL.

(September 9.)

THE Englishman has forwarded another sum of £100 to the London Committee of the Balacava Fund, making a total of £600 for Bengal, Assam, and Northern India.

THE Government of Bengal is in communication with the Collectors of Moorshedabad, Nuddea, and Jessore on the subject of the distress caused by the present flood. The tract in which most suffering is anticipated will be divided into circles, each under a competent officer, charged with the administration of relief. It is seldom possible to give suitable employment during a flood; the assistance to be offered will, therefore, take the form of small loans under the Act, and charitable doles, funds for the latter being, for the present, provided from the surplus in hand from former relief subscriptions, local and general, and by new subscriptions in the districts afflicted. The District Boards in the Presidency Division are worse off for money than elsewhere, and can probably render little aid, but they will be consulted, as also the Municipalities. In Jessore the effect of the flood has not been severely felt as yet, but in Moorshedabad and Nuddea a considerable area is altogether submerged. For about a mile beyond Bogoola station the water was four inches over the rail on the Eastern Bengal Line yesterday, and the train had to push through it slowly. The line has held out excellently, owing to the efficient arrangements made by Mr. Finney, the officiating manager.

MADRAS.

(September 10.)

THE Fort St. George Gazette announces the appointment of Mr. George Hamnett, C.I.E., as an additional Member of the Madras Legislative Council. This gentleman resigned the office of Inspector-General of Registration in September last, after having occupied that office for some nine years, and after having put in forty-three years in the public service.

THE Secunderabad paper believes that it has now been definitely settled by the Nizam's Government that a trained British official is to succeed Moulvie Abdul Karim, the present Postmaster-General, who will shortly be placed on the Retired List. The names of several officials already at Hyderabad have been mentioned in connection with the appointment, but from what our contemporary hears, the Government have asked for the services of a British Postal official from the Supreme Government.

BOMBAY.

(September 12.)

MR. M. MACMILLAN has been promoted to the third grade of the Educational Department.

MR. G. P. MILLETT, Forest Department, has been granted three months' leave.

DR. J. F. CHALLINOR has been appointed to act as Medical Officer for the purpose of granting bills of health to vessels touching at Perim.

MR. N. C. McLEOD has been admitted a member of the Bombay Bar, and made the usual declaration before Mr. Justice Bayley.

MR. J. L. JOHNSTONE, District Judge and Sessions Judge of Dharwar, has been allowed furlough for one year and eight months.

THE Lahore paper hears that the Hon. Mr. Alexander McHinch resigns his membership of the Bombay Legislative Council, owing to the pressure on his time of private and public business. It is considered probable in Karachi that a Native member will be appointed to succeed him.

SERGEANT SMALLWOOD, 7th Hussars, who was mauled by a tiger in a jungle some fifty miles from Kaxipett station on the Nizam's railway, about a fortnight ago, has succumbed to his wounds. The deceased was buried with full military honours in the Trimulgherry cemetery.

TALKING of cricket, writes the sporting correspondent of the Indian Planter's Gazette, "naturally reminds one of the refusal of the Bombay Gymkhana to play the Parsees on the ground that very great ill-feeling exists among some of the Parsee spectators against the Gymkhana. The excuse is puerile, and in our opinion the Bombay Gymkhana have acted in very bad form in this matter."

COLONEL F. H. JACKSON, Assistant Agent to the Governor-General at Baroda, left for Marseilles. At the Apollo Bunder from which place the Colonel proceeded in a steam-launch to the steamer, were present the ex-Dewan; Dr. I. E. Nevins, M.B., Surgeon to H.H. the Gaekwar; the Baroda State Agent; and Captain Jones. Mr. Pitale presented a garland and bouquet to the Colonel. He returns by the end of November, or the beginning of December next.

MAJOR GARDINER, General Manager of the B.G.J.P. Railway, is going on one year's furlough, and in his absence Mr. J. W. White, of the Morvi Railway, will act as Manager of the B.G.J.P. Railway.

MR. HUGH GOUGH, son of Major Percy Gough and Assistant to Colonel Ludlow, C.I.E., met with a severe accident through a fall from his horse, whilst riding at Mulkapett. He sustained a fracture of both bones of the forearm, besides a severe contusion of the eye from a kick of the horse after falling. He was picked up unconscious and taken in a carriage to the residence of Mr. Hodson, where he was attended by Dr. Lawrie. Mr. Gough is doing as well as can be expected, considering the injuries received.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE 19th Punjab Infantry have been ordered to join the Pindi force at the Attock Camp. They accordingly will leave Mian Mir for the rendezvous on Oct. 22.

THE result of the battery shooting in the Madras Presidency is as follows:—R Battery, R.H.A., figure of merit, 769; 21st Battery E Division, 755; 19th Field Battery, 601; and 9th Battery S Division, 558.

THE Rifleman, the regimental paper of the King's Royal Rifles, bears evidence of progress and prosperity. Though only recently started each issue has been a steady improvement on its predecessor, and the last contains much matter which should be of interest to sportsmen. The regiment is on the eve of proceeding to Burma, where its journal, no doubt, will find a great field for itself.

THE total enrolled strength of the Volunteers in the Punjab is now 1,936, as against 1,834 this time last year. The increase, therefore, is 102. The Lahore paper remarks:—"This, though apparently satisfactory, is not what might be expected from the large number of Europeans and Eurasians in the Punjab. If Government would only grant some of the concessions which we have urged from time to time in these columns, and which it might well do if it really placed that high value on the movement which the public utterances of its officials, both military and civil, vouch for, the increase would be far greater."

THE following appointments in the Zhob Field Force have been sanctioned by the Commander-in-Chief of India:—To Command: Sir George White; A.D.C., Lieutenant S. Jackson; Assistant Adjutant-General, Colonel P. D. Jeffreys; Deputy Assistant Adjutant-General, Captain J. Lamb; commanding Royal Engineers, Major J. F. Garwood; Baggage-Master, Captain John Monteith; Assistant Superintendent, Army Signalling, Lieutenant C. Luard; Commissariat Officer, Lieutenant Tullock; Transport Officer, Lieutenant H. B. Murray; and Principal Medical Officer, Deputy Surgeon-General Lithgow. Under instruction from Army Headquarters the 2nd Native Infantry battalion detailed for Zhob will be the 30th Bombay Infantry (3rd Baluch Battalion), which arrives at Khanie by rail on the 28th instant, and proceeds by march route to Hindu Bagh, arriving there on the 1st proximo.

IT having been brought to the notice of H.E. the Commander-in-Chief that small parties of soldiers when travelling by rail frequently suffer considerable hardship owing to their inability to obtain suitable refreshments en route, a scheme has now been introduced which most of the railway authorities and refreshment contractors have already signified their willingness to adopt. It is as follows:—When a soldier or small party of soldiers are ordered to travel by rail the officer who issues the railway warrant will also attach coupons thereto, at the rate of two coupons for each day the man travels. They will be of the value of six annas each, and upon presentation at any refreshment-room will entitle the man to a plate of meat, a pound of bread, and a pint of tea or coffee. The railway authorities will take over the coupons and deal with them in audit as cash vouchers. This arrangement will prevent soldiers being starved while travelling, or from having to purchase trashy food from the Native vendors at stations.

IT is satisfactory to learn, in the interests of practical soldiering, that the Government of India have been able to allot a lakh of rupees this year for camps of exercise and divisional manoeuvres.

THE Camp of Exercise in the neighbourhood of Attock will be on an unusually large scale. The Northern or Peshawur force, which will play the part of an enemy advancing from Afghanistan, will be composed of a battery of horse artillery, two field and three mountain batteries, 1,500 Native cavalry, two battalions of British infantry, seven Native infantry regiments, and a company of sappers. The total strength of this force will be about 9,000 men. The Rawal pindi or defending force will be made up of one horse, one field, and two mountain batteries, one British and two Native cavalry regiments, three and a-half battalions of British infantry, four Native infantry regiments, and a company of sappers. Its strength should be about 8,000 men. The forcing of the passage of the Indus at Attock is a problem which would tax the resources of a General with a force far outnumbering the defenders, and there will be ample opportunity for the display of strategical ability during the operations next November. The cavalry and horse artillery will have plenty of work to do in the open, while the infantry, with the field and mountain batteries, are busy in the rocky country west of the railway bridge; and the operations should be far more instructive and useful than those which are usually carried out in Camps of Exercise. The concentration of some 17,000 men about Attock should not be without its effect on the trans-frontier tribes in the Kohat direction, for news travels fast, and the Orakzais and their neighbours would soon learn what an imposing military spectacle is being gone through. The weak points of the Attock position, if such there be, will no doubt be revealed during the operations, more particularly as regards the safety of the railway bridge. It is to be regretted that the supply of machine-guns, particularly those of the Maxim pattern, is still so deficient in India, for in the defence of the passage of a river like the Indus the effectiveness of their fire could be fully realised.

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS.

SWARIES—Sept. 3, at Calcutta, Sarah Annie, widow of the late P. Swaries, senior, aged 63.

At an extraordinary general meeting of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China on the 15th prox., the directors will recommend an interim dividend for the half-year ended June 30 last at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum, free of income-tax.

RECENT inquiries into the number of lepers in India give the following results:—There are 71,287 lepers in the Bengal Presidency, 13,944 in Madras, and 13,842 in Bombay. This does not include the Native States, and it gives an average of 54 lepers for every 100,000 of the inhabitants.

The report on the operations of the two columns which proceeded in December last against the Tonhon Kachins, a tribe inhabiting the hills on the N.E. border of Burma, has been submitted to H.E. the Commander-in-Chief in India. In it the names of several officers have been mentioned for the excellent services rendered by them, and it is anticipated that the Burma medal with clasp will be granted to the troops that took part in the expedition.

As the rise in the exchange will probably affect the soldier's pay, the Lahore paper would be glad to see a clear notification by the Government, for the future guidance of the rank and file. A sudden decrease in the pay of the soldier would cause much grumbling, and service in India would not be so popular as at the present time. Some time ago, writes our contemporary, we advocated a rate above which the soldier's pay should not be allowed to rise, and it is questionable if it would be politic to allow it to fall below Rs. 20 per month. At this point it would perhaps be possible to suit everybody in the present as well as in the future. With the soldier's pay at Rs. 20, he would have no reason to complain, considering that it is not many years since it was fixed at the modest figure of Rs. 14-8-9.

THE CIVIL ENGINEERS' GRIEVANCES.

The Civil Engineers of the P.W. Department, resident in Simla, held a meeting on the 2nd inst., and passed the following resolutions:—

1. The meeting notes that the scope of the recent Parliamentary inquiry did not embrace the special case of the Civil Engineers. The report of the Committee is, however, considered satisfactory in so far as it recommends the removal of some of the invidious distinctions which were drawn between the different civil sections of the department.

2. The meeting is of opinion that the Civil Engineers' Association should press the claims of Civil Engineers as heretofore, and urges all sections of the department to continue to support the Central Committee.

3. The meeting accords its appreciation of the services rendered by Mr. Greig, the London agent of the Association.

The above resolutions were carried nem. con. During the meeting the report of the Committee, as officially published as a Parliamentary paper, was read, and attention called to the fact that the statement originally communicated to the Press by the Pall-mall Committee of the Uncovenanted Service Association was misleading as regarded (1) the assertion that Civil Engineers were not considered to have a special case, and (2) that the furlough allowances issued should be paid at the official rate of exchange.

DELIGHTS OF DINAPORE.

"D." writes to the Pioneer:—"For sale, horses, polo ponies, dogcarts, &c., &c. Owners ordered to Dinapore." Such is the pith of several advertisements lately in the Pioneer. "Owners" evidently know what they may expect in this benighted station, and truly "owners" ordered to Dinapore might well leave all ideas of "riding and driving" behind them. It does seem a pity, to say the least of it, that a military station cannot boast of even one good road to drive on; but such is the case. "Roads" indeed—you can't get them! There are, so to speak, three. One to Bankipore, full of holes, and passing through odoriferous bazaars; one towards Manair, with more bazaars, and under repair, generally full of ruts and holes; one to Khagole Station, a "metalled" road—very much so—requiring India-rubber wheels to drive on with any degree of comfort. Altogether this is a lively place; and, while congratulating regiments and "owners" leaving for home and elsewhere, one cannot help pitying those whose fate it is to be "ordered to Dinapore."

WATER SUPPLY OF HILL STATIONS.

As at Simla, so at Mussoorie, the question of water supply has become a serious one; and on comparison of the cases the needs of the North-West station would appear to be the more urgent of the two. The population of Mussoorie was reckoned ten years ago at 8,000 souls, and it cannot now be less than 10,000. As the greater part—say about 7,000—of the residents are dependent for water practically on two springs (Chalmer's Khud and Khattapani), whose minimum yield in the dry season is about 14,000 gallons, the result is that the daily allowance comes, during the hot months, to about two gallons a head, and this without any deduction for what is required for horses, cattle, and other purposes. It cannot be wondered at, then, that attention has turned to the means of increasing a supply so lamentably deficient, and it has recently been brought to notice that close to Chalmer's Khud there is a third spring, named the John Mackinon, which gives a daily discharge of more than twice the other two combined—viz., 36,000 gallons the water being, moreover, of excellent quality. It is estimated that to pump this water up to the level of the Mussoorie ridge and distribute it east and west by pipes, a distance of some two and a-half miles in all, would cost at the most Rs. 36,000, and probably not more than Rs. 30,000. And this supply, together with the other springs mentioned, would make an available total of, say, 48,000 gallons daily, or from five to six gallons per head of the population—a respectable, but by no means extravagant, supply for the hot weather. Happy would Simla be if the difficulty there could be got over so cheaply and easily. Unfortunately for Mussoorie the local Municipality does not appreciate its good fortune. At the meeting of the 14th of August the Committee decided that they could not contemplate an expenditure that went beyond Rs. 18,000. As our local correspondent has explained, the decision is to pump up the water to the ridge level near the Library, and there leave it for any one to fetch it who can from distances varying up to two miles, east and west. This remarkable resolution appears to have been passed by a majority of 5 to 1, and we regret that the account of the proceedings does not give us the name of the gentleman who formed the minority. With a supply of two gallons per head, with a water famine staring them in the face of each returning hot weather, with cholera putting in an appearance at their doors, the Municipality cannot be brought to face its manifest obligations, but for the sake of an economy of less than Rs. 20,000 stops short with a makeshift which is apparently little better than nothing. It is an edifying example truly for a European Municipality to set when Native towns all over the country have received the gospel of water-supply, and are setting to work to act up to it, in many places on the largest scale, and at a really heavy expense. We take it, however, that the Provincial Government has not created a Sanitary Board and a Municipal Engineer for nothing, and that if the Mussoorie Committee do not right of their own accord they will find the matter removed from their hands and put into those of Mr. Hughes.—Pioneer.

MEDICAL REGISTRATION IN INDIA

In the current number of the Medical Record Surgeon-Major G. S. H. Evatt, Medical Staff, Quetta, formulates a scheme for the registration of medical practitioners in India. The subject is dealt with very comprehensively. Everyone will agree with Dr. Evatt that such a register is much wanted, although the necessity is, perhaps, not so pressing in the Punjab as it is in the older provinces, Bengal particularly. It is suggested that the duty of registration, on the same system as that which obtains in England, should devolve on the Surgeon-General with the Government of India, from whose office the future "Imperial Medical Register for India" would issue, stamped with official authority. The publication, if Dr. Evatt's scheme be adopted, will be subdivided into provincial, divisional, and district groups, for facility of reference. The register will be compiled somewhat on the following lines:—In the first place, it will be necessary, by means of an Act of the Legislature, to compel every medical practitioner to register himself "in the province in which he resides, and the Local Government will be compelled to enter his name in the local register, on his producing his diploma and satisfactory proof of identity. Eventually this information will be transmitted to the Surgeon-General with the Government of India by the Inspectors-General of Civil Hospitals, who will be provincial registrars. Dr. Evatt thinks that an essential part of his scheme is the necessity for enlisting the assistance of municipal committees and district boards, which should demand registration powers over medical men practising within their limits. This is, perhaps, the weakest part of the scheme. Perfect reliance could not be placed on the accuracy of lists emanating from such bodies. They at present take such a small amount of interest in medical matters, even the affording of medical relief to their countrymen, that it is hopeless, in the present condition of committees and boards, to expect them to be useful in carrying out a scheme in which perfect accuracy and completeness are so necessary. Another rather impracticable suggestion appears to be the constitution of commissions of from nine to thirteen members to inquire into alleged malpractices or infamous professional conduct on the part of practitioners, whose names it may be proposed to remove from the register. This, we believe, would be found an unwieldy arrangement, and, in most cases, uncalled for. What would be easier in practice would be to provide for inquiry according to the status of the alleged delinquent. For instance, it would never do to assemble a commission to try a hakim or baid, although, for a practitioner holding an English or Indian degree, or for a Licentiate of Medicine, something of the kind would be necessary. These are, however, matters of detail which could be satisfactorily settled in formulating the scheme. It has much to recommend it, and, perhaps, the time has come when inquiry at least could be made as to its feasibility or necessity. The scheme is one which, Dr. Evatt rightly points out, can be taken up by each province independently of the others, in the first stages at least.—Civil and Military Gazette.

The Englishman writes:—"While Bombay has just furnished an instance of the exasperating manner in which the income-tax is worked, and which the Government appears to be unable to check, another case is reported from Rangoon, which shows, at all events, that the favours of the fiscal authorities are pretty evenly distributed. It seems that a Rangoon police constable lost several fingers from an accident while in the discharge of his duty. His superior officers recommended him for a gratuity, which was granted, the sum being Rs. 200. From this sum five rupees three annas and two pies were deducted for income-tax! It is not an edifying sight to see the Imperial Government stooping to deprive the widow of savings taken from her husband's previously taxed income, and "pouncing" on the wretched subsistence grant of the policeman who has lost his fingers in the public service

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

The Illustrated Naval and Military Review for October is altogether a capital number—containing several most able and interesting articles and some excellent illustrations. If the French army had possessed many "daughters of the regiment" as beautiful as Ayesha, the daughter of the Russian Kexholm Regiment of Grenadiers, judging from her portrait, which forms the frontispiece of the Review, it may be doubted if the recent order for the abolition of Vivandiers would have been issued. The story of Ayesha, as told in a brief editorial notice, is a curious "Episode of war time." Mr. N. O'Connor Morris's monograph on Wellington is written with his usual critical care and discriminative judgment, and is a paper which deserves the leading place it gets in the Review. The paper will be read with interest generally, but some of his opinions regarding the great Captain will not be allowed to pass without criticism. "As a strategist on the offensive," he says, "he stands low for strategy in this aspect must see into the unknown, and requires a fiery energy he did not possess. In defensive strategy, however, he has never been excelled, for here the elements of the problem are easier to ascertain, and sagacity and firmness are most effective." This is clever, but will court criticism. Again: "As a tactician he was admirable in attack and defence, for when the field was before him his promptness, his coolness, his constancy, stood him in good stead; but he was, on the whole, better in defence than attack; his Salamanca falls short of his Waterloo; and he was inferior to some tacticians in his arrangements on the ground, and conspicuously in following up a victory."

There will perhaps be less questioning of the correctness of the following, although some may be inclined to smile at Mr. Morris's reference to the "aristocratic caste of Ireland" in the reason he gives for the Duke's coldness of manner:—

"In one quality of a chief he was no doubt deficient. He was respected, but not beloved by his officers and men; he could not command their hearts like Napoleon or Condé, and this was largely due to the Spartan turn of character which distinguishes the aristocratic caste of Ireland."

In the article which asks the question, "Why not enlist as a soldier?" a corporal of the Dragon Guards contributes a most intelligent and interesting paper. It is pleasant to read the following opinion from the "ranks" to-day:—

"The British soldier is too often looked upon as an unmitigated blackguard, or, at best, an arrant humbug, sprung from the dregs of the population—the loafer of the village ale-house or the brawler of the town. It may come as a surprise to many to learn that there are doing duty in the ranks a by no means small percentage of men of good birth and education, and that the general character which the private soldier bears is one for steadiness and goodwill. There are unfortunately black sheep—and some very black sheep indeed—in the army, and as these obtain often a very wide advertisement through the medium of newspaper reports they are looked upon by unthinking people as a specimen of the army at large; just as some say that the whole Church of England is rotten to the core owing to the evil doings of some defaulting minister.

Old "Crimeans" will appreciate the charming paper on "The Palace of Baghchi Serai," although all of them may not be able to recognise the place they once visited in the charming picture which faces the article. We have not space to-day to notice other articles which deserve to be so, especially Major Broadfoot's "Remarks on General Sale-Hill's article on the Defence of Jellalabad," a paper which will be read with mingled feelings by many Anglo-Indians, who must regret that such a controversy should now be taking place over the graves of brave and honourable men.

The Gentlewoman.—The first autumn fashion number of this new ladies' paper was issued on Thursday, 25th inst. It was a double number, with thirteen full-page fashion plates and an Art supplement, but sold at the usual price of 6d. In every respect it kept up the high reputation for art and literary excellence with which this paper (The Gentlewoman) started with.

The projected Volunteer Reserve for Bombay—projected five years ago—has come to nothing. A notification appeared in the volunteer orders inviting gentlemen resident in Bombay, who might wish to join the reserve, to send in their names to the Adjutant, on or before Saturday, the 6th instant. When the list was closed on Saturday it was found that only six names had been sent in, and two of these were not eligible, according to the rules of the corps, one being a Parsee, and the other a Beni-Israelite.

THE GOLD MANIA IN CALCUTTA.

It may be difficult for those who have only experience of the stagnation of business and of the commercial dulness which for many years past has characterised the City of Palaces, to imagine Calcutta in a fever of speculation and gambling widely in shares of any kind, much less those of gold companies. But there are some Anglo-Indians still on this side of the Styx who may be able to call to recollection the time when the Port Canning Reclamation Scheme was brought out, and how everybody went mad for the moment, indeed, for many moments, with the horrible thirst for wealth—wealth to be won not by hard and honest labour, but wealth to be got at in a moment by being able to get the grasp of a bit of paper called a Port Canning scrip. Those were the days when Ferdinand Schiller was a “god,” and all who were covetous—and who were not?—were his worshippers. And what grovelling worshippers some of us were! What struggles, what intrigues, what pleadings were made to obtain the coveted scrip which, rising hourly by leaps and bounds to increasing premium, was to bring us all “wealth beyond the dreams of avarice.” And the collapse of the whole thing—the bursting of the bubble—the terrible reaction which followed! What gave cause to the fever which then was in all our veins? Was an excuse to be found for our greed—in the fact that the dreams of sudden wealth were made brighter by the thought that the coming wealth would free us from “the land of regrets,” and allow some of us who had been passing years of exile there, to return to the English home for which we had been longing with the sickness of hopes deferred? Let those of us who felt the fever take this excuse for our delirium, for it is difficult to find another. The Roman poet, referring to his experiences of certain matters past, has said, Hæc olim meminisse juvabit; but the Anglo-Indian, recalling the days we refer to, cannot have even this satisfaction. They were days to be thought of with shame and remembered with regret, but regret for the folly which they brought.

Is Indian history repeating itself, and is Calcutta now in the crisis of a similar fever, and mad with the thirst for gold?

The leading journal of that city says:—“The spirit of gambling is in the air. Staid European investors of all classes vie with impetuous Marwaris in the race for wealth. Ordinary business in the share market is at a standstill. Jute, tea, and indigo are neglected. Nothing is thought of or spoken of but the extraordinary ‘boom’ in gold; and what it signifies or how it arose nobody will take the trouble to consider. Sufficient for the day is the gamble thereof; and as for any possible morrow of dire destruction of the golden dream, no fear of such a catastrophe seems to daunt the eager herd of speculators.”

The same journal goes on to say that the fever, indeed, has reached such a pitch that it is vain to offer any precautionary advice, for men are gambling with their eyes open, and with a full knowledge of the possible consequences. It points out, however, that the fact has not yet been practically demonstrated whether gold exists in paying quantities in Bengal at all. But, wild statements having been made public, of the number of ounces to the ton of quartz that have been found in certain districts, no one has paused to inquire into the truth of such assertions, and as they are followed by reports of large sums having been made in a few hours or days, the mob of speculators continues to rush in where wise men would not only fear, but refuse to tread.

It is to the credit of the Press in India that it has come forward early and boldly to warn and to try to save. But it is difficult to save foolish people against their own will. If they choose to invest in shares of companies on whose properties not a pick has been struck or a sod turned to ascertain whether there is any substance whatever worth paying for—they will not listen to the voice of the warner, warn he never so wisely. Englishmen at home have committed the same folly, and can give their experience as a warning too. But it will not be attended to. The fever must run its course. But when the delirium is over the awakening to reason and reflection will be painful and sad indeed.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"Those whom the matter concerns will find a faithful and fertile source of information."—SATURDAY REVIEW.

"Contains a fresh recipe for every day of the year, is clearly printed, and of a handy size. The recipes are clearly set forth, and likely to be of practical assistance to cooks and housewives, since they have all been approved by experience."—THE CATERER.

"A useful little cooking book."—HOME NEWS.

"Miss Lucy Jones' 365 receipts are admirable for their terseness and for the ease with which they can be understood. This handy book is a veritable treasure to young housekeepers."—PUBLIC OPINION.

"The collection as a whole in this handy and useful volume will be highly prized."—BRITISH WEEKLY.

"We could not recommend a better work."—ARMY AND NAVY MAGAZINE.

"A considerable number of the recipes are out of the ordinary run, and those which we have examined in detail appear to be constructed on sound principles."—MANCHESTER GUARDIAN.

"Will be found extremely serviceable."—METROPOLITAN.

THE PRESIDENTIAL ARMIES OF INDIA.

BY THE LATE

Colonel S. RIVETT - CARNAC.

(Formerly 11th Hussars)

WITH A CONTINUATION AND GENERAL
REMARKS ON INDIA.

By the Author of "Our Burmese Wars and Relations with Burma," "Distinguished Anglo-Indians," &c.

"The volume is a graphic, stirring record of the English in India, as shown in the achievement of the armies of the three Presidencies. It is a book that deserves wide popularity."—ECHO.

"An interesting book."—DAILY NEWS.

"It is one of the best historical narratives of the real conquest of India that has ever been written. This is a book with which every Anglo-Indian should be pleased. Page after page it gives us some information we had not before. It lets us see far more, as it were, of the military operations of the Company—of its strength and its ambition—than almost any book of its size has hitherto done."—GLASGOW HERALD.

"A valuable contribution to the history of India, by the late Colonel S. Rivett-Carnac. The book has been edited and completed by the accomplished author of 'Our Burmese Wars and Relations with Burma,' and is very interesting."—THE FREEMAN'S JOURNAL.

"Colonel Laurie has done his part thoroughly and well, and we can cordially recommend this most interesting volume to the consideration of the reading public."—DAILY EXPRESS (Dublin).

"Colonel Carnac's share of the book is confined to the first six chapters, the remainder being furnished by Colonel Laurie. . . . It is the sort of book that every man in India ought to possess, for a reference to its pages would decide many points that are constantly cropping up. . . . The book is worthy of Colonel Carnac's reputation."—TIMES OF INDIA.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness; of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

"Earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy sees his justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

What higher aim can man attain, than conquest over human patriot?

JEOPARDY OF LIFE, THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset!! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm. The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—
J. G. ENO.

CAUTION.—Examine each Bottle, and see that the Capsule is marked ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." Without it you have been imposed on by worthless imitation.

OLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS, POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S PATENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.,

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced life they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1890.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 19th September; from Allahabad and Madras to the 17th September; and from Calcutta to the 16th September.

THE mail steamer which sails to-day, Sept. 19th, will be the last to leave on Friday. Commencing from Sept. 27th the English mail will be closed at the General Post Office at 12.30 P.M. on Saturday, and the steamer conveying it will be dispatched at two o'clock in the afternoon.

THE Masonic Ball at Simla on Sept. 12th was a brilliant success. The Viceroy, the Commander-in-Chief, and the Lieutenant-Governor were present.

A DISTURBANCE has occurred among the Lushais on the Cachar border. Changsil has been attacked, and Captain Herbert Browne, son of Lord Ulick Browne and personal assistant to the Chief Commissioner in Assam, killed.

MR. QUINTON is arranging to send a reinforcement of 200 military police with six weeks' rations, and recommends that the garrison of Silchar be increased by either troops of Calcutta or by 500 men from the 43rd Regiment.

A MEMORIAL is to be sent from the women of India to Her Majesty the Queen-Empress, praying for legislation in the interest of child-wives and other female minors. The remedy they seek is that the criminal law in India may be so altered as to protect at least girls under fourteen from their husbands as well as from strangers.

It is under consideration to convert the Allahabad Division into a Second Class Command, and make the Calcutta Presidency a First Class Division.

ONE of the reasons, it is stated, why the Government of India refused to countenance the establishment of an Indian Sandhurst was that money would not be forthcoming from the promoters of the memorial.

MAN-EATING tigers have made a sudden inroad on the Koracha and Palasgarh zemindaris in the Chanda District, Central Provinces. Ten persons have been killed in a fortnight, besides a little child, carried off by a leopard while sleeping between its father and mother. The district authorities will charge no forest fees, and will give full information to any experienced sportsman who will try a fall with these pests.

THE Government of India have sanctioned the withdrawal of the detachment of the Native Infantry garrisoning Fort Phillour to the regimental headquarters at Jullundur, as proposed by the Commander-in-Chief.

IN connection with the Indian police reform it is announced that the Government of India is considering the desirability of getting out from England the best possible men in place of the failures from the several examinations for other services.

PERMISSION has been given to all civil officers who can be spared from their districts to spend a week in Agra during the Viceroy's visit, and attend the levee. Proposals are on foot for the organisation of a Civil Service Camp and Mess to meet the convenience of the large number of officers who will probably take advantage of this opportunity.

LANCE-CORPORAL RIGNEY was tried at Delhi on the 15th for causing the death of a punkha coolie, whom he kicked to waken the man up. The coolie died almost immediately of rupture of the spleen. Rigney, who expressed the deepest regret, gave Rs. 200 to the deceased's relatives as a solatium. Taking these facts into consideration, and also the medical evidence that the deceased man's spleen was immensely enlarged, the Sessions Judge inflicted on him a fine of Rs. 25.

THE States of Junagar and Bhavnagar have made offers of troops to assist in the scheme of Imperial defence. Their offers have been accepted by the Government of India.

CHOLERA is raging violently in the Moradabad district of the N.W. Provinces. Over 100 deaths are occurring daily.

SIR CHARLES ARBUTHNOT is now at Coonoor. Miss Arbuthnot has completely recovered from her recent accident, and rode at the Gymkhana at Ooty on Saturday.

THE Polo Cup won by the staff of Lord Connemara at the recent polo tournament at Bangalore has been presented by the staff to the Governor.

BARRISTER A. J. READ, of Rangoon, has been suspended and charged with being intoxicated in court when defending a client.

JAMSETJEE MUNCHERJEE HAKEEM, a Parsee, has been sentenced to three years' rigorous imprisonment at the Bombay Criminal Sessions for embezzling the Bombay Municipality in the sum of Rs. 32,000.

THE Khojak Tunnel will be completed by April next.

REGARDING the Chartered Bank frauds, at the Criminal Sessions held at Calcutta, Sept. 17th, before Mr. Justice Prinsep, Mr. Jackson asked his lordship to rule that the prisoner's letters and confession were inadmissible as evidence. His lordship, however, declined to express any opinion at this stage of the proceedings, but made a note of Mr. Jackson's objection. The Advocate-General then reviewed the evidence for the prosecution, and in doing so warned the jury not to be allured by the charms and influence of Mr. Jackson's reasoning, or led away by his eloquence or his rhetoric. He then went over the whole ground connecting Shama Charan with the alleged defalcations. The fact that European officers of the bank being lax in their management, of which the accused took advantage, went to strengthen the case for the prosecution, but did not extenuate the prisoner's conduct. The former might have given facilities for committing fraud, but they were not under any obligation to him nor under his influence. With regard to Mr. Marshall's debt to the Bank it was an irregularity, and nothing more. The learned counsel then went into the question of 122 notes of one thousand each being changed into four, and asked the jury to say what was the motive. The accused's confession to Marshall was voluntary, owing to the latter invariably treating Shama Charan kindly. There was, therefore, no inducement on the part of the prosecution to make him confess. Counsel further stated that the prisoner's referring in his letters to his probable prosecution was an admission of his guilt. He cited English cases showing that a confession by the accused was enough to convict without corroboration. After lunch the point whether Shama Charan's letters and confession should go before the jury was argued. After the Advocate-General had concluded Mr. Jackson addressed the Court, but had not finished when the Court rose for the day.

MR. BYRAMJEE JEEJEEBHoy, C.S.I., one of the leading members of the Parsee community, died in Bombay on September 12th. He was a well-known philanthropist, and few Native gentlemen have done so much for the promotion and advancement of education in Bombay as he did. He was the youngest son of the late Mr. Jeejeebhoy Dadabhoy, and commenced life as a godown keeper, on a salary of Rs. 20 per month, in the firm of Messrs. Leckey and Malcolm, afterwards known as Messrs. Shattan, Malcolm and Co., Bombay.

MR. E. F. T. ATKINSON, C.L.E., B.C.S., who had been suffering from dysentery for some time past, died in Calcutta on Sept. 15th. Mr. Atkinson was educated at Trinity College, Dublin, and entered the Bengal Civil Service in 1862. He was successively Judge of the Small Cause Court, Director of Agriculture, Accountant-General and Compiler of District Memoirs on the N.W. Provinces, Comptroller-General of India and Financial Secretary to the Government of India; formerly President of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Chairman of the Trustees of the Indian Museum and Foreign member of the Royal Academy at Buda Pesth. He officiated for some time as Accountant-General in Madras, and at the time of his death was Accountant-General at Bengal.

THE Right Rev. Dr. J. M. Coadou, Bishop of Mysore, died at St. Martha's Hospital, Bangalore, on Sept. 15th. His Lordship had been ailing for the past two and a half months, and on Saturday all hopes of his recovery were abandoned. Dr. Coadou was a Native of the Diocese of Quimper, Brittany, and was born in January, 1819. He left Paris in 1845 for missionary work in the East, and was attached to the Vicariate Apostolic of Mysore, the scene of his labours being Bangalore, Sathally, Shimoga, Veerajendrapet, Coorg, and Mysore, and was for twenty years Chaplain to the convent of the Good Shepherd. In 1880 he was consecrated Bishop of Mysore, and on the proclamation of the Ecclesiastical Hierarchy in 1887 he was proclaimed Bishop of Chrysopolis and Vicar Apostolic of Mysore. It is probable that Dr. Klenier, who has been nominated Bishop Co-adjutor of Mysore with right of succession, will succeed to the vacant Bishopric.

OBITUARY.—Mr. Byramjee Jeejeebhoy, C.S.I.; Captain Herbert Browne, Lushai country; Mr. William Hugh Cumming, Revenue Survey, Poona; Dr. Cotter, of Lucknow; Mr. Atkinson, Accountant-General, Bengal; and Surgeon D. M. Jack, Indian Medical Service.

NOTES.

THE news from India by telegram is short, but somewhat serious. There has been another Lushai outbreak, and another valuable English life lost, Lieut. Swinton, of the Frontier Police, having been killed whilst he with his relieving party were moving up the Dalleswary River.

THE latest news before this was from Lieut. Cole at Changsee, mentioning the advance of the Frontier Police under Lieut. Swinton, and the expected arrival of the 44th Gurkhas. Four posts of the Lushai frontier were occupied by the 40th Bengal Infantry, and there were no signs of any attack against the British side of the border. But the Lushais have always been treacherous, troublesome neighbours, and they will have to be dealt with in a very summary manner indeed before they take the lesson to heart that British lives are valuable, and when taken have to be dearly paid for.

LAST week we had to record the death of Captain Browne, who, with his party, was attacked about four miles out from Changsee, where they were engaged in building a new stockade. He had only a few men with him, as it was his habit to go among the Lushai villages with an escort of only five or six men, fearing that a larger number would frighten the people, whose confidence he was anxious to win. The two posts of Aijal and Changsee, or Changsil, which were attacked simultaneously, are the outlying posts which were established in the Northern Lushai hills on the withdrawal of the troops last spring. Lieutenant Cole is in charge of the latter post, and Dr. Melville (why are military doctors called non-combatants?) of the former.

THE Pioneer, writing, we presume, from official information, says that special interest will attach to General White's operations in the coming cold weather through the country north-east of the Pishin plateau. The force will move over the hills bounding the Zhob Valley on the north; but General White has then to find his way through a terra incognita, no survey party having ever penetrated it. Working to the eastward General White will pass through the heart of Seistan, and enter the eastern end of the valley near Apozai. This will bring the first part of his operations to a close; he will then turn his attention to the gentlemen who hold the Takt-i-Suleiman and its approaches, and it is considered that he should have no difficulty in compelling the tribesmen to submission, as they will be taken in rear. The return march to Peshin will be through the Zhob Valley after the Suleiman range has been explored.

"THERE will," says the same authority, "be hard marching and probably no fighting for the troops, but the survey officers will have a grand opportunity of filling in the blanks on the existing maps. The presence of 2,000 men marching completely round Zhob should have a good effect upon all the tribes, and their operations should simplify the work of the Zhob Valley Railway Survey party, which, however, will be provided with an adequate escort. Sir Robert Sandeman, it may be added, has the tribesmen so thoroughly under control that, apart from any military display, it would be quite possible to make the survey without risk of any attack. But the Ghazi is always abroad, for fanaticism is endemic in the hinterland beyond the Suleimans, and it is just as well that military precautions should be taken."

How news is telegraphed to India. "Nothing could be more dramatic," says the Englishman, "than the manner in which the Southampton Dock Strike is now presented to our notice in India. It had not previously been stated that any such strike had occurred. We knew of the recent struggle of the London and India Docks Joint Committee, ending, as it did, in an ignominious surrender to the demands of the Unionists. But the first we hear of the Southampton strike is that the Dockers are fighting with the Blacklegs, and that troops are clearing the streets at the point of the bayonet. Repeated bayonet charges were made, we are told, and one lieutenant and two private soldiers are hors de combat. But what is the strike about? What do the men want, and how long have they been out? Information on these points should be forthcoming before the report of bayonet charges."

"Worcestershire Sauce, prepared and sold by Gladstone, Disraeli and Co." is the attractive label of an article largely held by bazaar dealers in India. That such an article, if genuine, should be piquant and stimulating in a high degree goes without saying. A compound in whose concoction these great authorities have agreed must be good for the constitution. In a word, Harvey and Lea and Perrin may disappear before the Bombay importation. If, however, the get-up and label are an impudent sham, designed to deceive the public into buying an unwholesome bazaar-made imitation of English sauce, a local paper thinks that the Bombay authorities should see to it.

THE following, if true, will be read with regret by some who knew the officer referred to under happier auspices. The Rast Goftar remarks:—"The account of the sudden disappearance of Captain Charles Norman, which appeared in the Times of India, is very interesting reading. From the way in which he inveigled Native traders into selling him jewellery on credit, one might suppose that, like a brother military officer of romance, Captain Rawdon Crawley, he was not quite a novice in the art—How to live upon nothing a-year. With insinuating manners, fine clothes, and a general air of high living, one may find dupes to accommodate him with loans. Even the butcher and the baker will give him almost unlimited credit, fondly believing, till the occurrence of the final catastrophe, that their money was as safe as in a bank. Captain Norman inspired confidence in the traders, who have now obtained a warrant against him, by talking of his good connections. Sirdar Abdul Huq employed his services for writing a book (the public will await the appearance of the book, if it is to be an autobiography, with much interest), and the Captain went about saying that he was private secretary to the Sirdar. But Captain Norman might have impressed people with his births and connections without resorting to falsehoods, for he is said to be a brother of Sir Henry Norman and General Sir Frank Norman. It is sad to think that a person so well connected and endowed with literary abilities which had once gained him employment as special war correspondent of the Times, and one of its leader writers for several years, will have his adventurous career cut short at Port Said, where the warrant awaits him. He is now on the high seas on his way to England. But the telegraph has anticipated the arrival at Port Said of the good ship which carries the precious burden—precious by reason of the diamonds and rubies which are supposed to be part and parcel of it. When apprehended Captain Norman, alias Nelson, may exclaim with pardonable personal feeling, 'To what base uses may the telegraph be put!'

MESSRS. W. H. ALLEN AND Co.'s special announcement of books for the season 1890-91 is particularly rich in literature connected with the East, containing several works which will be interesting reading to Orientalists. Amongst these may be mentioned "The Bustan of Sadi" (Persian text), photo-lithographed from a MS., with notes in English by A. Rogers, late Bombay Civil Service, and "Three Persian Plays," with Persian text and literal English translation, by the same author; "Japanese Plays Versified," by the late Thomas R. H. McClatchie, edited by his brother, with illustrations by Japanese artists; "A Chinese Delectus," by Professor Douglas, and Fung Yee, late Secretary Chinese Legation; a "Manual of Colloquial Arabic," by the Rev. Anton Tien; "The First Five Chapters of the Taubatu-n-nasikh (of M. Nazir Ahmed)," a second edition, with marginal analysis and additional annotations, by M. Kempson, M.A.; and by the same compiler a "Key to the Translation Exercises of Kempson's Syntax and Idioms of Hindustani"; "The Life and Teachings of Mohammed," with a history of the early caliphate, by Syed Ameer Ali, C.I.E., Judge of the High Court, Calcutta; "Some Aspects of the Hindu Religions," by James Kerr; "The Cultivated Mangoes of India," comprising descriptions and coloured figures of the best one hundred varieties of mangoes cultivated in India, by Charles Marius, F.L.S.; and last, but not least in interest and importance, "Old Records of the India Office," by Sir George Birdwood, K.C.I.E., with coloured illustrations by G. Griggs. This last work is one which should find a place in many libraries, telling, as it does, much of the wondrous story of England's first relations with the East carefully arranged by the clever and care-taking compiler, and illustrated by the talented hand which has contributed such beautiful workmanship to the Magazine of Indian Art, edited also by Sir George Birdwood.

(Times Correspondents.)
INDIA.

CALCUTTA, OCT. 5.

Further news from Lushai shows that the outbreak was not a mere raid, but a deliberate rising. Lieut. Swinton's relieving party was persistently opposed while passing up the Dalleswary River. Flanking parties were sent up both banks to clear them, but in some places the steepness of the banks compelled them to return to their boats. It was in one of these gorges that the enemy fired a volley which killed Lieut. Swinton.

The Southern Lushais still remain quiet.

TIBET.

CALCUTTA, OCT. 5.

About three months ago rumours reached India that the Chinese Amban had been murdered by his coolies during his return journey to Tibet. These are now proved to be ground less. Letters dated August 15th announce his safe arrival at Lhasa, and his promotion to the post of Chief Resident.

BURMA.

RANGOON, OCT. 4.

The latest news from Fort White is satisfactory; the health of the troops is improving. The Siyin Chins are carrying timber to the site of the new fort, which is 2,000ft. higher than the present post. The Kanhows have made overtures for peace. When the cold weather comes, political officers with military escorts will visit the Bounshe villages, and, if possible, the Kahaw villages. Resistance is probably only at Thetta. A mule road is to be constructed from Haka to Fort White, through the Tashon Ywama.

Some rain has fallen in Upper Burma, and in all the districts, except Mandalay, crop prospects have slightly improved.

It is reported that the Local Government have recommended the creation of the post of Chief Secretary, with a salary of Rs. 2,500 per month. This exceeds the pay of the Chief Secretaries of the other Indian provinces and of the Financial Commissioner for Burma. This post, on such pay, is quite uncalled for.

For the financial year 1889-90 the excise revenue of Lower Burma increased 7 per cent., and of Upper Burma 21 per cent. The feature of the excise administration of the past year was the abolition of out-stills in Lower and Upper Burma and their replacement by central distilleries. The result of this measure was a considerable loss of revenue. The liquor licenses that were put up to auction last year in Upper Burma fetched Rs. 35,000 less than in the previous year. The loss was balanced by an increased revenue from opium. Twenty-two illicit stills were seized in Upper Burma last year; fifteen was the number in the previous year. The prohibition of the sale of intoxicating liquors in Upper Burma is apparently stricter now than under Burman rule.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

THE PUNJAB FRONTIER.

(Times of India.)

The news that the Zhob Valley Expedition is to be punitive, and not a camp-of-exercise, reminds us that the Punjab frontier will be very lively this cold weather. The old custom was to have one expedition a year or every other year, though things were quieter immediately after the Afghan War. Now almost every station on the frontier proper will be a basis of operations. From Abbotabad will start what is called the "Military promenade" through the Black Mountain, which may or may not result in fighting, for no one can guarantee what may be done by a force that once crosses the border. Anyway, it will occupy a small brigade for a month or so. The Survey in Beluchistan will also occupy a small force, for it would be unsafe to send any unprotected party into the hills just now. The frontier tribes, though not owing any real allegiance to the Ameer, are only too ready to attack the British on the very slightest encouragement, and the mere idea that the Ameer was hostile to us would be quite enough. There is a slight feeling of this kind now extant, sufficient to give any tribe an excuse to wipe off old scores against the Indian Government. The Zhob Valley Expedition and the Mahsud Waziri Expeditions will involve real expeditions in the military sense. In 1881 an expedition was sent out from Edwardesabad to punish the Mahsud Waziris for their raid on Tank Fort during the Cabul War. Generals Kennedy and Gordon commanded the two columns that, moving by different routes, converged on "Kanigorum," the chief village of the Waziris, and captured it. Nothing was done in the way of serious damage, but a fine was levied on the clan, the leader was ordered in over the border, and a strict blockade instituted all along the frontier. The blockade was effective, for the Waziris could neither buy cloth nor sell potatoes, and were ruined as long as the passes were closed. Now, however, they seem to have forgotten the very gentle lesson of 1881, and by a murderous raid have drawn vengeance down on them. They must this time have the fact impressed on them that England is not to be trifled with. In 1883 a survey party was sent up the Takht-i-Suleiman, and to overcome the slight resistance expected, a force of some fifteen hundred men was sent. After a very slight skirmish, the survey was effected, but the Takht was found to be a waterless ridge, so the party retired in a week or so. Probably the two expeditions this year will be united, as the Takht-i-Suleiman lies close to the Mahsud Waziri country, and the Gomal Pass dividing them offering a road to attack either side. We may be thankful the Afridis proper have not yet given cause for an expedition. When that day comes we shall be in for a serious campaign. The Afridis swarm into our regiments, and are splendid shots and hardy soldiers. They are all armed with breechloaders, and are said to have hidden stores of ammunition. They themselves speak openly of never having been conquered by us—which is in a sense true, as we have never come in direct conflict with the whole clan—and say that it will be the hardest nut for us to crack on the whole frontier.

THE CONGRESS AND THE RADICALS.

(Indian Spectator.)

Mr. Sourenda Nath Banerjee was reported the other day to have remarked in one of his speeches, delivered at one of the Mofussil towns in Bengal, that the country would have to lose many lives and show much self-sacrifice before it could expect "deliverance." And now we have Mr. Eardley Norton, another Congress delegate just returned from England, telling a Madras gathering that the Conservatives are "stupid," that they would be swept away at the next General Election, and that India's salvation lay in the hands of the British Radicals. Now, tall talk of this kind—and it is, at its best, nothing more than tall talk—perhaps does well in a platform speech; but our Congress friends should take care that their spokesmen do not use language likely to do more harm than good to their cause. There are many difficulties which have to be encountered before the Congress can hope to have its demands granted; and these difficulties are not likely to be diminished by the adoption of what looks like a spirit of bravado by Congress "orators." Moderation of language is in all matters useful, and we are not sure the Congress agitation has arrived at that stage when it can dispense with it. As to Mr. Norton's faith in the Radicals giving him all he wants for India, we have yet to see what the Radicals will do when in power. They had a chance in 1886 when they could have made England bear a share of costs of the conquest of Upper Burma; but we all know how the chance was thrown away. It is idle, therefore, to speculate on the future. The Congress can only hope to succeed by carrying on its agitation in a more reasonable and moderate spirit than it has, of late evinced; but speeches of the kind that have recently been made by some of its most ardent supporters are sure to minimise its influence both in England and in India. Even assuming for a moment that Mr. Norton is right in thinking that the salvation of India lies in the hands of Radicals, and that, therefore, the Congress should cast in its lot with them, is it fair to the Congress that this step, which, in our opinion, is not dictated by prudence, should be determined upon by a few members of the Congress party without and before consulting that body, as a whole? We are not sure that the Congress will sanction the step, but whether it sanctions it or not, why should a few of the gentlemen connected with it undertake to commit it to a course of action regarding which it has not been consulted at all? It is unfortunate for the Congress that some of its supporters cannot restrain themselves a little, but give vent to language which can do no good to their cause. The Congress party ought to remember that the impartial public will judge of it by the light of the utterances of those whom it sends forth as its spokesmen; and if the Congressionists are anxious that their cause should win, they should have for their spokesmen men who are careful of what they say and how they say it.

AFGHAN IMPOSTS.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

The heavy duties levied by the Amir on British Indian goods passing into and through his territory have been often complained of. A report lately issued by the Foreign Office enables us to learn what the amounts of some of the imposts are, and, knowing them, the maxim ex uno disce omnes will explain the nature of the rest. The shortest and best route for Indian goods going to Meshed is by way of Kandahar and Herat, a journey of about 800 miles, or thirty stages from our own railway terminus, and on this route the duties levied by the Amir or his officers amount to £2 2s. a hundredweight. The hire per camel load is only a trifle more. Turning to the trade with Trans-Caspia from India, by way of Kabul, we find the same restrictive policy in force, since on every camel load of goods, no matter what their nature, passing through Kabul to Bokhara, the Amir levies a sum of £5 13s. 4d. Thus a pound of tea, of which the cost price in India is twelve annas, costs sixteen annas when it reaches Meshed, eighteen annas when it reaches Bokhara from Meshed, and twenty-one annas when it reaches Bokhara from Kabul. It follows that the Persian route is cheaper than the Kabul route, yet Indian merchants, curiously enough, send by far the larger portion of their tea consignments by way of Kabul. Besides the Amir's imposts, there are the 2½ per cent. ad valorem dues levied by Russia on all goods imported into Trans-Caspia from Europe, India, and Persia, and the further tolls, which are reported to be extremely heavy, on British tea and indigo arriving in Samarkhand. From the report which General Maclean, Consul-General at Meshed, has drawn up, there would seem to be no trade in British piece-goods with Russian Trans-Caspia. It is to be hoped that in the next agreement Great Britain makes with Afghanistan some provisions will be found regarding the commercial relations of the two countries.

THE BEER QUESTION.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

The "beer question," which has long been under the consideration of Government, has been lately revived by a memorial from certain commercial men in Madras to the Government of India, protesting against the contracts for supply of beer to the Army in India given to the Murree Brewery Company at Ootacamund. The question resolves itself into a kind of triangular balance of the principle of free trade, as represented by the memorialists, the welfare of the Army, for which the Government is responsible, and vested interests represented by the Murree Brewery Company. The first-named ought of course to triumph, if it does not, in this matter, impair the second, nor interfere with the just claims of the third. Now, so far as the Army is concerned, there is no doubt about the wholesomeness of country beer; and though we were once of opinion that Thomas Atkins disliked it, his taste appears to have become as much reconciled to it as a person of his miscellaneous tastes can be unanimously reconciled to anything which he suspects the authorities of specially providing for him. At the same time, we have no reason to doubt that the firms who have memorialised Government are quite able to give Thomas a wholesome beer at a reasonable price, and he might appreciate the additional liberty of choice allowed to him. Contracts, however, are contracts, whether express or implied, and the Murree Brewery Company expended a large sum in building a brewery at Ootacamund to furnish Government supplies. The company, therefore, stands upon a special footing in relation to these Government contracts; and it is for the Government, which is pledged to abide by the spirit of its agreements, to decide how conflicting interests can be reconciled. Of one thing we are sure, however, and that is that the Government of India have never, as has been stated, for one moment considered the advisability of allowing the Murree Brewery Company to import beer free of duty. It was, indeed, stated in our columns upon one occasion that a proposal had been made by which a certain low price for beer to the troops should never be exceeded, if beer was imported free of duty; but the arrangement would have been so obviously liable to protest that the Government never gave the proposal an atom of countenance, although it was considerably more favourable to the troops than any other proposal which is ever likely to be made. For this reason we expressly approved of it; but Government acted wisely, perhaps, in refusing to take it into consideration. This side-issue may, therefore, now be eliminated from the controversy, which Government will have to decide on its merits.

THE PROPOSED INDIAN SANDHURST.

(Pioneer.)

The conclusion arrived at by the Government of India in the matter of the proposed Native Military College at Poona may be disappointing to the Mahratta moralists who fathered the scheme; but the public will probably consider the decision a just and reasonable one. An Indian Sandhurst on the lines suggested would do more harm than good so long as the Native Army is constituted on its present basis. There is no other army in the world where the system of promotion by merit is so consistently carried out, and where the chances of the soldier who loves his profession and conscientiously performs his duties are so good. The commissioned ranks are open to every man who enlists, whatever his position in life may be. There is not in the whole country a more contented and loyal class than the Native officers of our army, and, whatever their shortcomings may be in the eyes of the modern scientific school, their fine soldierly qualities command the respect and admiration of those most closely associated with them. They are standing examples to the rank and file of successful merit, and their advancement gives them also that higher social position which is so acceptable to them. They are the outcome of a system which has been worked well for nearly a century, and it would be a dangerous experiment to cast the machine of which they form so important a part suddenly out of gear. Given the establishment of an Indian Sandhurst, and there is at once the danger that it would be crowded with men able to pass certain educational tests, but otherwise totally unfitted for the rough-and-ready life of a soldier. Commissions would of necessity have to be provided for all who could qualify for them by examination, and the prospects of the men serving in the ranks and looking forward to promotion would be seriously injured. They would have to submit to the bringing in of inexperienced youths of their own race—of a very different type to the British subaltern, who is at once acknowledged as a leader, however few his years of service may be—and discontent would inevitably follow upon this procedure among the veterans from whom Native officers are now chosen. If they desire to be on an equality with British officers, there are no obstacles to their passing through Sandhurst or Woolwich. They can follow in the footsteps of the sons of King Theodore or Dhulip Singh, receive a thorough military education on the European model, and take their place in Her Majesty's army among the commissioned ranks.

THE INDIAN RAILWAYS.

(Bombay Gazette.)

It is a pity that when Sir John Gorst was questioned during the Indian Budget debate upon the railway intentions of the Government of India he was not asked to state what was meant to be done with the scheme for continuing the Delhi-Kalka Railway to Simla. The report now is that the line is to be begun as soon as possible after arrangements have been completed with the Delhi-Kalka Company, and it would have been well if Sir John Gorst had been asked what the line is to cost, what the monthly cost upon it will be, even while it is carrying a maximum of traffic, and finally what need there is for making this line until every railway in India for which necessity can be pleaded has been made. Those who declaim against the exodus to Simla may have reasons of their own for condemning the project, amongst them, no doubt, being that the Simla Railway will constitute one more reason why the annual migration should continue. As, however, we have never joined in the cry against the "exodus," that is not an argument that in any degree weighs with us. The chief objection to a Simla railway being constructed now is that it would mean an expenditure of money that is much urgently wanted on railway extension elsewhere—on railway extension that would pay, which this scheme will certainly not. It will have an inappreciable goods traffic, its passenger traffic will be concentrated within two months of the year, and though no statement has been made upon the subject, it is difficult to see how an excuse could be found for keeping the line open between seasons. A railway whose chief function would be to carry the official population of Simla to the hill-top in March and bring it down again in October has no raison d'être that will satisfy anyone who looks for a return for money spent—and it seems to us that the inopportune and wastefulness of the project demand a strong protest. Only recently the advocates of a project of undoubted utility in Western India have had almost to go on their knees to the Government to get even a miserable ten thousand rupees for the revision of a survey; and yet this scheme, which, so far as trade and public convenience are concerned, will be almost as useful as a switchback railway, is to be pushed through without anyone having asked for it, and without any proof of its necessity being furnished.

REGISTRATION IN BENGAL.

(Englishman.)

Registration appears to be more popular in Bengal than in the Punjab, and except for fluctuations due to the introduction of the Transfer of Property Act, both compulsory and optional registration have progressed pari passu of late years. There has been a steady increase in the operations of the Registration Department, and its financial position is excellent, the surplus at the close of 1889-90 being nearly six lakhs of rupees, which is more than it has been at the close of any previous year. Several new offices have been opened since the close of the year, when the total number was 307, and the demand for an extension of registration operations still continues. There are two great classes of perpetual leases—those given by zemindars to their tenants, and those sub-let by tenants to others. In many districts there has been going on during the past two or three years a regular permanent settlement between zemindars and ryots, and this has a tendency to increase registration until a maximum has been reached, the amount of land being limited, after which there must be a decline. The stereotyped explanation given of these permanent leases, is that owing to bad harvests the zemindars find themselves in strained circumstances. It is only, however, in particular districts like those in the Dacca and Chittagong divisions, where the ryots are prosperous and insist on obtaining some certainty of tenure, that these settlements are at all general. A more likely explanation, therefore, appears to be that the zemindars find it difficult to make arbitrary enhancements or ejections under the new law. The only other feature of particular interest in connection with last year's registration is the Mohamedan marriage registrars, which have encountered a certain amount of opposition, but are said to be gaining ground in the majority of districts. The Lieut.-Governor remarks: "Some practical reforms suggested by Nawab Abdul Latif Bahadur, in a valuable minute on the working of the Act, have been adopted by the Permanent Committee and approved by Government, and they will be immediately introduced." The Act is at the same time to be extended to the town of Calcutta and the districts of 24-Pergunnahs, Jessore, and Murshidabad. The Kazis Act does not seem to gain ground, though wherever the Kazis are energetic enough to establish Naib Kazis, and get hold of the professional persons who arrange marriages, there is said to be a marked increase in their operations.

THE VISIT OF THE CZAREWITCH.

(Bombay Gazette.)

The Czarewitch, if he comes, will most assuredly be the most distinguished of our cold-weather visitors, and, despite traditional suspicions, the most welcome. He is a young prince of whom little is known beyond what the Almanach de Gotha, in its dry, parish register way, has to tell of him. But the heir to the throne of All the Russias will represent the power that may some day be the next-door neighbour of the Indian Empire, and his presence in our midst will help us to accustom ourselves to the possibility of a contiguity of the Indian and the Russian frontiers, though it need not prevent us from praying that the approach may not be in our time. There is nothing in India—unless it be the still deficient defences of Bombay—that we need conceal from the Czarewitch. If he comes to India with the belief that there is a population here ready to respond to the first provocation to disaffection he will return to Russia with at least one delusion the less. The Russian papers, we know, have for some time past endeavoured to find in some of the political activities of the country a proof that the devotion of the people to the British rule is waning. They have been ingeniously inventive and perverted in regard to these matters, and perhaps even an intelligent Russian prince would have a good deal to unlearn there anent during his tour in India. Even a visit to the Congress, to which, we are told, the Russian papers have paid wonderful attention, would have its uses, for the Czarewitch would find that the occasional indiscretions of that body abate in no degree from its loyalty. If, again, acting on Sir Edward Watkin's suggestion, he asks where the Congress agitators are who have received Russian gold for their pains, he will have another delusion to part with. The Czarewitch may be sure that though Professor Vamberg promises us a visit in the winter there will be abundant room for him, as well as for that distinguished and not always reasonable Russophile. On the whole, it may be supposed that the cause of peace and goodwill between neighbours will be more effectually advanced by the presence in our midst of the heir to the throne of Russia than by that of the learned denouncer of all Russia's designs. The Czarewitch will in all probability travel in such a manner as will invite no public demonstration of goodwill towards him; but we shall take care, if the opportunity arises, that he is treated with the goodwill and respect that so distinguished a visitor will deserve.

THE SHORT SERVICE SYSTEM.

(Statesman.)

A military correspondent writes to us objecting to the opinion that the short service system is expensive to India and prejudicial to the military interests of the country. He states that it is not the short service system which has demoralised the Army in England and disorganised it in India, but the early age of enlistment, which fills the ranks with immature youths who collapse on the first strain in war time, and are unfit for service in India. In the report of Lord Airey's Committee, when attention was pointedly drawn to the weakness of our Army from this cause, the uselessness and extravagance of enlisting boys, even for home service, was clearly demonstrated by facts and figures. It was assumed that it took at least a year to train a man for the ordinary duties of an infantry soldier, though this was too short a time for the purpose in other branches of the service. If he enlisted at 18 years of age, and did not break down in the meantime, he would cost the country £135 before he could be considered a trained soldier fit for the ordinary duties for which he was engaged; but if he enlisted at 19 or 20 years of age he would cost but £96 and £67 respectively. The same report showed also that a recruit joining the cavalry at the age of 20 would be fit for duty on attaining his 21st year, at a cost to the country of about £58, whereas if he enlisted at 18 he would have cost the country £144, or £86 more than if he had enlisted at 20. But this calculation, it was said, took no account of the loss of those who broke down during training, and who, if their numbers could be ascertained, would add materially to the cost of the remainder. From these facts it can easily be calculated what India has to pay annually for what the Hindoo Patriot calls "young soldiers who have not been long enough in the country to become either properly trained or properly acclimatised." Our correspondent is right, we believe, in stating that the primary cause of the inefficiency and expensiveness of our Army is the enlistment of boys or immature men whom the great Napoleon was wont to style as "food for the hospital." But the original complaint still holds good, and it is this—that after the survival of the fittest, when the soldier has become trained and seasoned, he is withdrawn from India, under the short service system, just when he is becoming useful, and his place generally taken by a soldier who, if not young and of poor physique, is not yet acclimatised or fit to bear the burden of service in India. There can be no doubt that the drafts for the Indian and Colonial services are composed in many instances of weak, immature, weedy men, who cannot withstand a tropical climate, and whose physique—an essential to the efficiency of any army—leaves much to be desired. These defects, which are among the worst results of the present Army economy, may not be wholly due to the short service system; but, nevertheless, that system, we believe, acts most detrimentally on the efficiency of the army in India, increasing the waste and useless expenditure so much complained of.

BIRTH REGISTRATION.

(Indian Daily News.)

From cases that come before the Courts and others that come to our knowledge in the course of daily duty, it appears that one of the most important requirements of this country is a good system of birth registration. In common life in India, it is difficult to ascertain correctly the ages of individuals, and we need not say that this uncertainty has an important bearing upon questions of inheritance and relations as to property and otherwise. The utility of a system of registration is so self-evident and obvious that it is a matter for surprise that people are so indifferent or so slow as not to take advantage of such provision as the law has already made. They depend upon horoscopes and similar quasi-scientific records which may be real or spurious, and are mostly in private custody, and may be abstracted, tampered with, or destroyed. This method of keeping—or losing—important family records is clearly much inferior to a system which compiles, duplicates, and preserves them as a high official duty, wherein personal or family interests can have no antagonistic play. The Government four years ago passed an Act concerning registers of births, baptisms, namings, dedications, deaths, or burials so as to make these records after being scrutinised by Commissioners available as evidence in courts of law. Some delay took place in putting the Act into operation, and this delay has been accentuated by the neglect of parties interested to avail themselves of its provisions. The bad example of not putting the Act into operation after it had been before the public may perhaps be accountable for this neglect, on the principle of out of sight out of mind. Whatever the cause, the Government have thought proper to extend the time for giving effect to the law. This was the object of an amending Bill introduced into the Legislative Council by the Hon. Mr. Hutchings on the 28th ult. It is the object of the Bill to allow an extension of the time for proving old registers, &c., so as to give them the validity the first Act was intended to confer upon them. The advantages of the Act are so obvious that it is matter of surprise that extension of time should be needed to induce people to avail themselves of its provisions.

THE "PRAYASCHITA" CEREMONY

(Statesman.)

Native Indian society has been roused to some of excitement by the performance of the prayaschita ceremony on the part of an "England-returned" Bengalee gentleman who is well-known to his countrymen. The incident has apparently given rise to a conflict of opinion among different sections of the Native community. The Brahmo organs of opinion, such as the Sanjibani and the Unity, denounce the ceremony in unmeasured terms; while, on the other hand, the great organs of the Hindoo community, such as the Hindoo Patriot and the Amrita Bazaar Patrika, regard it as an act of high moral courage on the part of the gentleman concerned. The Indian Mirror writes in cautious and guarded terms, but apparently would have preferred that the ceremony had not been performed. The Bengalee is silent, and we too shall be silent about the attitude of the Bengalee; for the editor is himself an English-returned Bengalee, and may naturally be expected to say nothing about a matter in which his own personal interests and those of his class might be said to be involved. In the midst of this conflict of opinion an English journalist might be expected to hold his peace. But, sometimes, the spectator sees more of the game than even the players concerned. Evidently, Native society is unwilling that these England-returned gentlemen, representing, in many cases, the flower of their community, should be treated as outcasts. The intelligent Indian must perceive that nature and common-sense rise in revolt against a proceeding which would place them outside the pale of their community. What have they done that they should be outcasted? For the thin, shadowy line which separates forbidden food from food upon which no ban is placed, is fast disappearing. Fifty, or even twenty years ago, no Hindoo who had been to England would have been admitted back to his caste even though he had performed prayaschita. That Hindoo society should now be prepared to make this concession represent a distinct advance. Yet we confess we should have been pleased if the prayaschita would have been dispensed with altogether. Prayaschita is penance for some wrong done. No wrong that we are aware of is committed by a Hindoo who travels to England for the sake of education, or for the purpose of serving his country. There is no section of the Hindoo community more orthodox than the Mahrattas of Bombay; and yet it has been publicly announced that Mr. Mudholkar, the delegate to England who has just returned home, has been received with open arms by the men of his caste and of his community. He was not called upon to perform any expiatory rite. We have no wish to make any invidious comparisons; but the province which is admittedly foremost, in point of intelligence and culture, might be expected to set an example to the rest of the country. No community can really profit by any act which can be construed as involving a sacrifice of principle.

A NEW TRADE FOR INDIA

(Madras Times.)

In commenting on some curious specimens of Indian opinion the other day, we had occasion to draw the attention of a contemporary to the axiomatic circumstance that India is mainly an agricultural country, and that in her exports lies most of her wealth. In proportion as she finds a profitable market for the products of her soil, by so much will she gain in affluence, and it is in this direction mainly that efforts should be made to improve her trade. India is continually developing new possibilities, and the establishment of a lucrative trade with Europe in the podophyllin product of the species of may-apple plant so largely found in the Himalayas is not the least of these. The fact that this Indian species of the plant from which America supplies Europe with podophyllin, is far superior to the American variety was first pointed out by Dr. Watts, the compiler of the "Dictionary of Economic Products," over a year ago; and Dr. Hooper, Quinologist to Government at Ootacamund, reported that the root of this plant yielded 12 per cent. of podophyllin rosin. These results have since been satisfactorily confirmed by experiments made in America with some samples of the rosin procured in the rough from Bombay, the results of which were published in an American Pharmaceutical journal. The experiments went to prove that the Indian plant yields more than twice the quantity of the active principle that the American root will give, and is, therefore, twice as valuable. The preparation chiefly used in the practice of medicine is the podophyllin rosin, which is quoted in London at 12s. to 13s. per lb. and the principal agent required in the extracting process is rectified spirit, which is easily procured in this country at a cheap rate. Podophyllin is a cathartic principle, and is very largely used in medicine both in India and in Europe; and, as the plant from which it is procured grows very largely in this country, there seems to be no reason why, with cultivation and special attention, India should not develop an industry which will supply all her local wants of this valuable drug, and establish a trade with Europe which will amply repay her for the small amount of labour and expense it appears it would entail.

SEPOY COMMISSIONAIRES.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

There are many subordinate appointments under Government which could be better filled by pensioner Sepoys than anyone else. Look, for instance, at the army of red chuprassis spread over the country, men trained merely to those duties, and accustomed to an atmosphere of bribery and corruption which they revel in, and the onus of which they throw on their masters. How much better would their work be done by men who had spent half their lives under military discipline, than by those who had been brought up in the chuprassi atmosphere? At every Court and Treasury in India there are peons; and how could men for these appointments be found better than from the ranks of our pensioned Sepoys? To increase the attractions of the service recruits must be made to understand that the civil appointments are open to them on obtaining their pensions in addition to their pension, or to reservists without pension, the former having the prior claim. Of course there would be no absolute claim to such appointments, but if once the idea of thus filling up the vacancies was adopted, and the men saw it was adhered to, those with the best characters being appointed first, they would swarm into the ranks on the off chance. Above all, if some attempt was made to provide for the men as far as possible in or near their native districts, the effect would be enormously increased. To carry out this plan thoroughly, it would be necessary to create a regular corps of commissionaires, not necessarily on the English system, the more so that it would have to be a State corps ruled by Government officials, and not a private enterprise as at Home. The late Colonel Rivett-Carnac, Military Secretary to Sir Richard Temple, was an ardent advocate of this system, and his authority in the matter was weighty. In considering the best means to adapt such a corps to Indian requirements, we may leave Madras out of the question for the present, as it has a separate and special staff of its own for the purpose in the Superintendent of Pensions at Madras and its Pension Paymasters all over the Presidency. These officers could organise and carry out a commissionaires system for the Southern Presidency without difficulty. Colonel Leigh Hunt, the Superintendent of Pensions, has already done much towards providing the retired sepoy with civil employment, and his activity it is that has raised the question afresh. To carry out a commissionaire corps system for the rest of India, three British officers would be required, viz., two for Bengal and one for Bombay; those for Bengal being stationed at, say, Allahabad and Lahore, to divide military Bengal between them. They would keep a roster of all Sepoys about to retire on pension or otherwise, who wished to join the corps, and were recommended for it, such men proceeding once to the headquarters of their pension circle, if necessary, a form that need not be repeated. Arrived there they would produce their discharge papers, including the colonel's recommendation; and having been identified, and stated the particular kind of work they wished to go in for, whether that of a Government peon, a permanent peon in a civil firm, or occasional employment such as that performed by many of the London commissionaires, stating also the limits, if any, within which they wished to serve, they would then proceed to their homes, reporting themselves to the Native officer of their district, and giving him their address. These Native officers, who might be selected from pensioned Native officers desirous of further employment, would be the real agents through which the circle officer would work. That something ought to be done for our pensioner Sepoys is a fact that must soon be recognised if we are to fill our army, and the way we have proposed appears better than leaving the matter in the hands of already overworked civilian officials, who could not look into the matter properly, and would have to delegate their power to Native subordinates.

BENGAL.

(September 16.)

THE meeting of importers lately held at Calcutta has resulted in an almost unanimous agreement to stop arrival sales till the Durga Poojas, to adopt a uniform contract, and to establish a Piece-Goods Association. A committee has been appointed to give effect to these proposals.

THE Amrita Bazaar Patrika persists in maintaining that circulars were actually issued by the Agent to the Governor-General for Central India to several of the Native States, boycotting that paper and ostracising Bengalis. It says:—"We believe them to be true, having in possession direct testimony of their genuineness, and cannot disbelieve them at the instance of anonymous correspondents. Only those who are too willing can be influenced by such baseless testimony."

MADRAS.

(September 17.)

WE quote from the Madras Mail.—On Thursday, at the Bangalore Chief Court, while the presiding judges were engaged in hearing the arguments of Mr. Norton, who appeared as the counsel in a case, there was an unusually large gathering of people present, "drawn together by curiosity to hear the eloquent Congress orator." So says a paper. A swarm of bees "that overhung the doors of the Court room in a hive, thinking that the premises were unwarrantably intruded on by Congress men or no Congress men, emerged from the hive, and attacking those present, cleared the court in a very short time. The judges and counsel secured themselves in the room by closing the glass doors against their antagonists!"

ON Sept. 12 his lordship the Chief Justice had once more to refer to the irregular and by no means satisfactory practice which has of late obtained among vakeels and other legal gentlemen anent cases coming up in appeal from the Original Side before the Appellate Court, by which the counsel who appeared for the parties in the Lower Court ceased to represent their respective clients in the Appellate Court, and had their places taken by men by no means inferior in ability, &c., perhaps, but yet new to the subjects under consideration. By this system his lordship the Chief Justice remarked much of the valuable time of the Court was wasted, as in many cases these latter gentlemen were unable to give information on certain points on which information was required. His lordship considered this a practice not to be encouraged, and observed that he would as regards himself disallow this procedure as much as possible. There was no objection to new vakeels or barristers appearing so long as they appeared with the original men. The remarks arose to-day in appeal from the Original Side, in which Mr. Ananta Charlu, who had not represented the Appellants on the Original Side, appeared for them now.

BOMBAY.

(September 19.)

DR. T. S. WEIR, Health Officer, Bombay Municipality, having obtained privilege leave for three months, proceeded to England by last week's mail steamer.

MR. W. A. BOULTON, Assistant Superintendent, Sind Revenue Survey, has been allowed by Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India eight months' extraordinary leave without pay.

THE Dosabhoj Hormasjee Kama prize of the local University has been year for the fourth time been awarded to Dr. L. P. Gomes, B.A., for the best essay by a graduate in medicine on the subject of "Adulteration of Food in Bombay."

THE Bombay Municipal Corporation on September 11th unanimously agreed to appoint Sir Henry Morland representative of the Corporation on the committee appointed by Government to consider Mr. Baldwin Latham's proposal for carrying the sewage outfall at Colaba. The Corporation were of opinion that the Municipal Commissioner should also serve on the committee. It was further resolved that it was necessary that two other Councillors should be appointed on the committee, and in the event of the Government agreeing to their request, the president of the Corporation be authorised to suggest the names of Dr. Blaney and the Hon. Mr. Javerilal.

THE following in a summary of the Bombay Presidency season reports for the past week:—Slight rain in all the districts of the Presidency proper, except Kattywar and Baroda. Total fall generally insufficient, except in Surat and the Konkan; and more rain urgently wanted, especially over the greater part of the Deccan and Southern Mahratta Country and in Kattywar. Standing crops suffering from drought in parts of Shikarpur, Hyderabad, and Upper Sind Frontier, and in all the districts of the Deccan and Kattywar; damaged by floods in two talukas of Kurrachee, and by rats and other insects in parts of Kurrachee Hyderabad, Shikarpur, Upper Sind Frontier, Ahmedabad, Panch Mahals, Nassik and Dharwar. Sowing of late crops retarded for want of rain in parts of Ahmednuggar, Sholapore, Bijapur, and Belgaum. Reaping of early crops commenced in parts of Rutnagherry and Sholapore. Fodder scarce in Sholapore, and in parts of Khandesh, Nassik, Poona, Ahmednuggar, Bijapur, Dharwar and Baroda. Agricultural stock generally healthy, except in parts of Nassik. Water scarce in parts of Nassik, Dharwar, and Kattywar. Prices rising in two talukas of Nassik and one of Sholapore.

WE quote from the Pioneer.—The London correspondent of one of our contemporaries has noticed that Lord Harris is likely (dreadful anticipation) to forfeit the favour of the Congress leaders in England by his behaviour towards Mr. Namjoshi. The majority of our readers are probably ignorant of the existence of this gentleman; but the little incident which has made him famous was so characteristic a one that it deserves to be recalled to remembrance. Early in the present year the Congress wire-pullers decreed a Bombay Provincial Conference. The vakils on leave and the school-boys on holiday assembled themselves, and after the usual discussion and the usual resolutions they separated. But a certain Gehazi of the party was seized with the idea that here was an opportunity for making his name conspicuous, and he therefore asked Lord Harris, who had just arrived, in the name of the Conference to receive an address. The Governor agreed to do so, but at the time for the reception of the Committee all that was forthcoming was a suggestion from Mr. Namjoshi that he should meet his Excellency to talk over the points of the address. Lord Harris upon this replied that he was under the impression he was to receive the address of the lately sitting Conference, but as it appeared there was no address the engagement to his regret could not be kept. The position was unpleasant for the Provincial Conference. The self-elected members were back at their lessons or in court; and all that could be done was for the members resident in Poona to call a meeting and solemnly, in the name of the scattered Provincial Conference, accept the resignation of Mr. Namjoshi. To complete the humour of the episode, the Congress chiefs think it necessary to be indignant, not at their Provincial Conference having been made ridiculous by Mr. Namjoshi, but with Lord Harris for declining to be duped.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES AND PUNJAB.

(Sept. 17.)

THE Bill giving effect to the administrative changes proposed in the North-West Provinces and Oudh will probably come up for disposal in the Legislative Council on October 9. The local Government will not make any further suggestions regarding it except in matters of detail.

An elderly European lady, named Mrs. Murphy, arrived at Gujar Khan Station on the N. W. Railway on Wednesday night, and reported that she had been thrown out of her carriage attached to the down-mail by a European who had entered her compartment when the train was in motion. She received some injuries to her forehead. Accused has not been apprehended, nor was he recognised by the lady.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL WOLSELEY is furnishing a special report to the military authorities regarding the unhealthiness of Fort White and the desirability of selecting a new site for headquarters in the Chin hills.

GENERAL THORNTON, under instructions from the Commander-in-Chief, is taking steps by circular to ascertain if it is possible to raise a naval Volunteer Corps in Bombay. It is not believed that the proposition will be received with much favour, as, if established, the corps would drain the others now in existence, especially the newly-formed artillery.

As will have been seen from the annual relief, it is not intended to withdraw the small garrison now stationed in Sikkim. One company of British Infantry will still be posted at Gnatong, with two companies of Native troops in support at Guntok and Pedong. Their presence will give confidence to the people of Sikkim, and effectually prevent any revival of Tibetan intrigues, if the Lamas should be inclined to go behind the treaty recently ratified between England and China.

THE field-firing which will take place at the conclusion of the manoeuvres about Attock will be on a larger scale than has ever before been tried in India, where in spite of much waste land there is always difficulty experienced in the neighbourhood of Camps of Exercise in getting a wide enough front for troops to use ball-cartridge freely. The firing will include volleys at long ranges, and particular attention will be paid to exercising the men in fire-discipline. The tests to be applied will be of the most practical kind, and the operations generally will be of a very different order from those generally performed in Divisional Camps.

THE following extract from a letter written to the Standard Life Office by a soldier in the Ordnance Department is of interest, now that the position of "Tommy Atkins" is being discussed:—"I think, however, that I will let the paper stand as before 'without profits' not because I think the sum chargeable to be large, for this reason—Government will (in the event of my death) grant my widow a pension, providing she can declare my estate to be under Rs. 7,000, so that unless I could insure my estate being sufficiently over that amount to compensate for loss of pension it would not be safe to approach too near to it, and the adding of profits to the policy might do this. By the way, I think that powerful companies like the Standard should endeavour to get Government to rescind this rule, which only encourages thriftlessness." This ruling would appear to handicap a soldier who was inclined to save and make an extra provision for his widow.

THE ZHOB FIELD FORCE.

The full Staff of the Zhob Field Force is as follows:—

To command the Force, Major-General Sir G. S. White, V.C., K.C.B., K.C.I.E.; Aide-de-Camp, Lieutenant S. C. F. Jackson, D.S.O., Hampshire Regiment; Assistant Adjutant-General, Lieut.-Colonel P. D. Jeffreys, h.p.; Deputy Assistant Adjutant-General, Captain J. Lamb, Bengal Staff Corps; Deputy Assistant Quartermaster General for Intelligence, Captain A. H. Mason, R.E.; Field Intelligence Officer, Lieut. R. Southey, Bombay Staff Corps; Commanding Engineer, Major F. J. Garwood, R.E.; Assistant Superintendent, Army Signaling, Lieutenant C. C. Luard, Durham Light Infantry; Baggage Master, Captain J. Montieth, Bombay Staff Corps; Principal Medical Officer, Deputy Surgeon-General S. A. Lithgow, M.D., C.B., D.S.O., Medical Staff; Chief Commissariat Officer, Lieut.-Colonel J. R. Burlton-Bennet, Bengal Staff Corps; Commissariat Officer, Lieutenant J. W. G. Tulloch, Bengal Staff Corps; Transport Officer, Lieutenant H. B. Murray, B.S.C.; Survey Officer, Lieut.-Colonel T. H. Holdich, R.E.; Assistant Survey Officer, Lieut.-Colonel R. J. H. L. Mackenzie, R.E.

It is notified that the following field hospitals will accompany the Zhob Field Force:—

Sections A and B of No. 23 British field hospital, from Quetta; Sections A and B of No. 24 Native field hospital, from Quetta; and Sections A, B and C of No. 25 Native field hospital from Mian Mir.

The following medical postings have been made to corps units:—

Surgeon J. C. Morgan, M.S., to medical charge, and Assistant Apothecary W. Sherrington to sub-medical charge of the Mountain Battery; Surgeon M. W. H. Russell, M.S., to medical charge, and Assistant Apothecary G. Haines, to sub-charge of the 2nd Battalion Yorkshire Regiment; Surgeon W. A. Sykes, I.M.S., to the charge, with one hospital assistant, of the 18th Bengal Lancers; Surgeon-Major H. Adey, I.M.S., to the charge, with one hospital assistant, of the 29th Bombay Infantry; Surgeon R. M. Masoni, I.M.S., to the charge, with one hospital assistant, of the 30th Bombay Infantry; and one third-grade hospital assistant to the charge of No. 1 Company Bombay Sappers and Miners. There will also be attached three ward orderlies, two ward servants, six hospital servants, two cooks, two water carriers and four ward sweepers.

Section A of No. 24 Native field-hospital, under Surgeon G. R. Cones, with one hospital assistant, will accompany the detachment of the 13th Bombay Infantry to Lorelai, and thence accompany the troops proceeding from there to join the Zhob Field Force at Kazhi. Section B of No. 24 Native field-hospital, under Surgeon C. B. Hunter, with one hospital assistant, will meet the 30th Bombay Infantry at Kanai, and march with it to Hindu Bagh.

The following further medical appointment has been made to the Field Hospital of the Zhob Field Force:—Surgeon-Major Evat and Surgeon Branigan to British Sections, and Surgeon-Major Patterson and Surgeon Hunter to Native Sections.

The following troops composing the Force will march from their respective stations, and arrive at their destinations on the dates noted:—No. 7 Mountain Battery, R.A., and Yorkshire Regiment, leave Quetta on the 25th, and arrive at Hindu Bagh on the 30th inst.; No. 1 Company Bombay Sappers and Miners leave Quetta on the 26th, and arrive at Hindu Bagh on Oct. 1; the 30th Bombay Infantry leave Hyderabad on the 24th inst., and going via Khanai arrive at Hindu Bagh on Oct. 1; and Head-Quarters and three troops of the 18th Bengal Lancers and the 29th Bombay Infantry leave Lorelai on the 27th inst., and arrive at Khaza on Oct. 2. The colours of the corps proceeding with the force will be left at their depôts.

The Sujawi post has been taken over by the Political Agent, Zhob, and occupied by the Levies.

IN order to assist the development of the iron industry in Mysore, the Maharaja has granted a liberal concession to Dr. Dhanakoti Raja, an experienced and enterprising capitalist. The concession gives a right to prospect for and obtain iron ores from any part of the province for fifty years, and to build factories and workshops on unoccupied Government lands, with an abatement of all taxes for long periods and a liberal allowance of forest land for fuel.

ANOTHER REPENTANT NOBLE.—The Hindu Patriot says:—"Mahtabara Begum, wife of Prince Birjes Kader, of the Oudh family, is one of the recent visitors of Calcutta. After the late King Wajid Ali was dethroned and removed from Oudh his wife, Hazrut Begum, acting under the ill advice of one Mammu Khan, raised, it will be remembered, the standard of revolt against the British Government and placed her son Birjes Kader, who was then almost a child, on the throne. When the Mutiny was suppressed she had to fly, and took refuge in Nepal with her son. The late Sir Jung Bahadur received the fugitives with some consideration, and took an interest in bringing up the boy. It is now about twelve years ago that Hazrut Begum died in Nepal, and the Prince has now sent his wife to plead his cause, and to seek forgiveness at the hands of the British Government."

A REAL GOLD MINING SPECULATION.

A Calcutta paper publishes the following:—

Private-confidential.

THE PURNO CHAND AND CHOTA BURSAT GOLD EXTRACTING AND MINING COMPANY, LIMITED.

Capital: Rs. 3,00,00,000 in 12,00,00,000 shares of 4 annas each. Payable 1 anna on allotment. Calls not exceeding 2 pice at intervals of 3 months, and Rs. 50,00,000 in Founders' Shares.

Directors.—A. Damson, Esq. (Cheatem and Co.), Grunts Grease, Esq. (MacSkelly and Co.), S. Solomon, Esq.,* Chairman of King Solomon's Mines Co.

*Will join the Board on his emerging from retirement.

Bankers.—M. T. Coffers and Co.

Solicitors.—Grabham, Gammon and Snap.

Scientist and Concessionaire.—Count Fosco, Member of the Order Chevaliers d'Industrie.

Managing Agents.—Cheatem and Co., Office Thieves Bazar.

This Company is formed to extract gold or any other metal from the pockets of the public, its professed object being to make money—honestly, if it can, but to make money.

With this view it will always be ready to float shady concerns by doubtful concessions, and do any kind of business of a lucrative nature.

The Company will start with a valuable concession in Perunnah Purna Chand, known as the Chota Bursat, of which holds the pottahs. There is an abundant water supply. Hence the same.

The Company would draw attention to the advantage it enjoys in having secured as Solicitors Messrs. Grabham and Co., who having been struck off the rolls in consequence of certain incidents in their career, are absolutely untrammelled by the ridiculous scruples which so sadly cramp the action of most members of their profession.

The price to be paid for this valuable concession is Rs. 3,00,00,000, of which the Concessionaire will take as much as he can in cash, and the balance in shares or the debentures, which will be issued immediately for 25 lacs, to provide working capital and the necessary expenses.

Several contracts have been entered into, of which the shareholders should have notice; but as neither the Directors, Bankers, Solicitors, Agents, or Concessionaires are responsible to anybody or for anything, it is unnecessary to specify them, and the shareholders' responsibility will cease with the payment of the final call.

The founders' shares will be entitled to all the profit until 4,000 per cent. has been paid.

Subscriptions are to be accompanied by cash, for which a receipt will be given by the office boy. Allotments will be made as the shares are applied for. If no allotment is made, nothing more will be called up, and the applicant will incur no further liability.

MRS. HAYES AND MR. JUSTICE PRINSEP.

Captain Hayes and Mr. Justice Prinsep are having a warm passage-at-arms over the Calcutta Leper Asylum, a paragraph having appeared in Truth regarding the control of the asylum to which Mr. Justice Prinsep took exception. Mr. Labouchere inserted the following statement with regard to it:—

"On May 15th reference was made in Truth to a deplorable account of the condition of the Leper Asylum, Calcutta, given by Mrs. Alice Hayes in a local paper called Hayes' Sporting News. I have now received from Mr. Justice Prinsep, President of the District Charitable Society, which has control of the Asylum in question, a letter in which the writer states that the statements in Hayes' Sporting News 'are absolutely without foundation, and are merely the careless and inaccurate reports of a hysterical, irresponsible woman seeking for notoriety.'"

Captain Hayes protested against Mr. Justice Prinsep's allegations through his solicitors, and not receiving a satisfactory reply, gives vent to his indignation in the following terms:—

My readers will note that Mr. Prinsep, with the cowardice natural to man who is capable of uttering libellous lies against a woman, takes refuge behind his position as President of the District Charitable Society. He must, however, have known that, although the duty of such an official might possibly be to style all reports adverse to his institution as "absolutely without foundation," "careless," and "inaccurate," it does not extend to saying that a lady is "a hysterical, irresponsible woman seeking for notoriety." It is needless to say that no one possessing a particle of gentlemanly, or, indeed, manly feeling, would have been capable of such language, let alone being guilty of the despicable meanness of claiming authority for doing so. Having received Mr. Prinsep's reply, I consulted my lawyers with respect to commencing an action for libel. But I found that the cost would be so great that it was beyond my means, for it was our counsel's opinion that the suit should be brought in the English Courts and not in India, the reason for this being the question of publication. I therefore found myself unable by legal means to obtain redress from a man who not alone uttered a false libel against my wife but had also refused to apologise for doing so. I was therefore obliged to take the matter out of the hands of my legal advisers. The only course then left was to give the fellow the "hiding" which he most richly deserved. I must confess that the instrument I had desired to employ was a horsewhip; but it was pointed out to me that the purchase of such a pleasure would be imprisonment without option of fine. My readers must remember that Mr. Prinsep is a Judge of the High Court, and is consequently a representative of Her Majesty, and that he has a large following of influential admirers, who no doubt would strain their authority to the utmost to please their friend. "Having got you under lock and key," remarked a friend of mine, who is an official of very long Calcutta experience, "every one, from the coolie attending the prisoners to the head man, would do his best to curry favour with Mr. Prinsep by annoying you and worrying the life out of you as long as you are within the walls. Seeing then the folly of thus playing into the hands of Mr. Justice Prinsep, I took the advice of my friends, not to do the castigation with whip or stick, but with the pen.

INDIA OF TO-DAY.

The Paternoster Review, the first number of which has just been issued, announces that it will take care never to help those who are at war with the common ideas of right and wrong. Several of its contributors are Catholics, among them the Marquis of Ripon, who thus writes on the "India of To-Day":—"We have to deal with a movement resulting from our own past policy, and growing in volume and in force every year. Our task, the greatest task of the Indian Government to-day, is to guide and control this stream of progress, so that, moving on with steady and regulated advance, it may fertilise and not destroy, may enrich and not uproot. No one will deny that such an undertaking is attended with many and grave difficulties, and that it will test the skill and the wisdom of those to whom it is entrusted. But those difficulties are inherent in the position which we have taken up in India. History records for us no other attempt to combine a free Press and the free right of public meeting, to say nothing of a complete system of the highest education, with an administration practically despotic. That so large a measure of success should have attended such an attempt is highly honourable to the British Government in India and to its officers. We deliberately placed before us fifty years ago a high ideal, unprecedented in its character, and beset, as it might have been thought, with obstacles of the most serious kind. We have pursued it, with brief exceptions, ever since, and that we should have been able to accomplish a task so arduous, and to reconcile conditions of Government apparently so contradictory, is a result of which, as a nation, we may well be proud. To draw back now from this policy, or to hesitate to accept its necessary and foreseen consequences, would be to acknowledge that the aim which we had set before us had been too high and too noble, and that we were unable to attain it. We must consent to do nothing of the kind. We must walk firmly forward along the path of justice and of honour with an unshaken confidence in the great principles which have guided the best and worthiest of our representatives in India."

A RESOLUTION is published in the Gazette of India regarding Indian rainfall deviations. The rainfall is to be registered at a common hour all over India, viz., 8 A.M., and a common week ending at 8 A.M. on Saturday is adopted. The year is to be divided into four periods corresponding with the season:—viz., January 1 to February 28 (winter or cold weather rains); March 1 to May 31 (hot weather or spring rains of Bengal and Assam); June 1 to October 15 (south-west monsoon rains); October 16 to December 31 (retreating south-west monsoon rains of the Peninsula).

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1890.

DISCHARGED SOLDIERS IN INDIA.

WHY should the Government of India continue to throw difficulties in the way of British soldiers settling in India on obtaining their discharge? We refer to men who have purchased their discharge, and to men who are discharged on pension. The former, if desirous of residing in India, must furnish a guarantee of return passage to England, or lodge Rs. 400 in one of the Government banks in lien thereof, and show also a certificate of having obtained employment in the country on leaving the Army. The latter need not lodge the return passage-money or give a guarantee for it, but must furnish the certificate of employment. There was a time when these regulations were framed as much, no doubt, in the interests of the soldier himself as of the State. In the days of long service it was a cruel kindness to permit an old soldier with, perhaps, at the moment, a little more money than he knew what to do with, to declare his intention of settling in India with a view to obtaining employment there. Shortly after the Mutiny there were a number of time-expired men who were anxious to do this, especially as some of them had contracted marriages with Native or half-caste women, and had given hostages to fortune. The wives and mothers of this kind dreaded, of course, crossing the Kala pani, and it would have been a harsh measure indeed either to have forced them to do so with their husbands or to have forced the husbands to go without them. The military authorities were at that time often put to their wit's end how to deal with individual cases, but those were the days when the Civil Government was still prejudiced against the idea of Europeans away from the service settling in India—a prejudice which the old East India Company carried out often in a very practical manner. The Civil authorities therefore came, in the difficulties which we are referring to as occurring after the Mutinies, to the aid of the military authorities, and some very clearly-defined rules were laid down as to the conditions under which discharged soldiers might continue to reside in India. The rule which insisted upon the soldier desirous of so doing, showing that he had obtained respectable employment if allowed to remain in the country, was a sensible and kind one, and one which Sir Hugh Rose, when Commander-in-Chief, approved of. For in those days the European loafer had settled in India, and had commenced to spread and multiply. It was, therefore, well that the authorities should do all in their power to prevent the old soldier and his savings, or his "loot," from joining the brotherhood of vagabondism, which was always on the look-out for such prey. Even as it was, many a good old soldier who gave the necessary certificate of employment and obtained the required permission to remain in the country, came afterwards to grief and loafism, not having the strength to withstand temptations when no longer under the curb of military discipline. But times have changed, and the question is whether, in these days of short service, it is advisable to retain the preventive regulations which were made for the British soldier in India under altogether different conditions. The Civil and Military Gazette thinks not. In a very thoughtful article on this subject it says:—

"Purchase discharges, after three months' service, are all indulgence discharges, and the authorities can hem the indulgence in with as many restrictions as they choose to consider necessary, so far as the law is concerned. But, in these modern days, seeing that all soldiers of under twelve years' service have to pay £18 and forfeit all deferred pay before they can obtain a free discharge, and, moreover, must have served three years in India if they are stationed here, we think even the guarantee of passage in their case might be dispensed with. One condition might be imposed, and that in connection with Indian service. The short service man, as a rule, serves from five to six years in this country before transfer to the Reserve. It would seem, therefore, a fair thing that when a soldier has served five years in India the guarantee of passage home should be dispensed with if he wishes to purchase his discharge and settle in this country, seeing that he must still pay £18 and forfeit all deferred pay. What we particularly wish to bring to notice is that the Government would be put to no actual loss by placing no checks on the soldier residing in India on discharge—that is, by dispensing with guarantee of passage and certificate of employment.”

The above seems sound and sensible enough, and the suggestion that such discharged soldiers should consent to be enrolled in the Volunteer Force is not a bad one. But, after allowing that greater latitude should now be given than formerly, the difficulty will remain of finding employment in India for any number of respectable Europeans who might thus be induced to leave the Army and settle there. It is impossible for Government to hold out inducements of such employment, and the railways and other public employers can only help to a limited extent. The subject of hill colonisation by discharged soldiers has been discussed over and over again, and the fallacies of its supporters fully exposed. Our contemporary, from whom we have quoted, owns that it would never do for Government, by its own act, to create a growing population of the lower classes of Europeans in the country, seeing that they can never find suitable employment to any extent in competition with the Natives of India. But, recognising the difficulty, our Lahore friend sees how it might be met, or minimised. The soldier permitted to take his discharge and settle in India fails—as very likely he will—to get employment. Then comes our contemporary's remedy for the Government:—“It is highly probable, then, that he would seek to re-enlist, which is just what the military authorities would like.” Very likely; but it may be open to question whether this circumlocutory way of adding to the strength of the British Army in India would be a very respectable way of recruiting.

A BRIEF announcement which appears in the Times and leading financial papers on Saturday last to the effect that “Messrs. W. H. Allen and Co., English and Oriental publishers, have converted their firm into a limited liability company,” may have been passed over by the general reader as a mere business notice, taking its place amongst others which are daily being advertised in the Press. But many old Indians and Anglo-Indians, to whom the name of the firm has been “familiar as a household word” for years, will not have read without some interest the paragraph telling of the change which the “whirligig of time” has brought about. For Time and the firm have long been acquainted with each other—indeed, the business has been in existence for close upon 200 years. When Alderman Allen succeeded to it in 1837, on the death of his father, it then had a venerable history, going back into the mists of the past, but still connected with the then East India Company, as it is to-day with the India Office. The Alderman lived to see the old Company die, and with the new order of things he, too, had to leave the old buildings in Leadenhall-street and migrate westward, as the India Office did. The story of the long connection of the firm with the great Company which so long ruled “the Monarch of the East” would be a strange, eventful history of striking events and changes if time and opportunity were afforded to search some of the dusty records put away on the shelves of some of the rooms in 13, Waterloo-place. Vigorous to-day as ever, in spite of all Time's changes, the firm is taking a new departure from the old form of partnership only, and makes no other change, it being announced that the shares will not be offered to the public, but will be taken by Messrs. W. H. Allen and their friends.

It has been satisfactorily settled on the experimental plantation at Mergui, in Burma, that Liberian coffee will grow and bear fruit freely in that part of the country. The plant has established itself, and has fruited abundantly for the past four years.

A MEMORIAL from representative manufacturing engineers and ironfounders has been sent through Messrs. Richardson and Cruddas, of Bombay, to the Government of India, complaining that the Public Works Department routine, by which all material is ordered from England through the Secretary of State, seriously handicaps and retards the development of the industry in which they are interested.

MR. ARCHIBALD R. COLQUHOUN, whose last employment was as a Deputy Commissioner in British Burma, has been appointed Administrator of Mashonaland, holding the office under the British South Africa Company, at a salary of £1,500 a year. In his new capacity Mr. Colquhoun will, no doubt, find time for the compilation of a history of the recent expedition into the new districts and their development, and should prove a valuable contributor to the Royal Geographical Society, which has already profited by his adventurous journey from Canton to Mandalay, and his experiences among the Shan tribes in the Malay Peninsula. The British South Africa Company have done wisely in securing the services of Mr. Colquhoun, who is essentially the right man in the right place.

THE Englishman says:—Last year's total imports of cotton goods into Bengal show a heavy decline in comparison with those of 1888-89. Grey yarn declined by nearly 1½ million lbs., turkey red and alizarine yarn by over two million lbs., and other coloured yarn to a smaller extent. Grey cotton piece-goods fell off by over 69½ million yards, white piece-goods by about 39½ million yards, and coloured, printed or dyed, goods by over 6½ million yards. In total value there was a fall of about one crore 69½ lakhs of rupees. There was no decline in the lower or the higher counts of grey yarn, the falling off being almost entirely in the principal counts imported, viz., 40's. The most noticeable decline was in turkey red and alizarine yarn, which fell by 44½ per cent. This is attributed to a new dyeing trade having sprung up in Cawnpore. Yarn that is dyed there with cheap aniline dyes now competes with the imported article. It is inferior, but at the same time cheaper, and is found to answer the purpose for which it is required. It would be natural to suppose that this new trade has increased the imports of grey yarn, but as there was, on the contrary, a decrease, the yarn required for dyeing must have been sent from Bombay. The fall in grey cotton piece-goods was very heavy in comparison with 1888-89, but not in comparison with the average of previous years. The cotton trade in Lancashire followed much the same course as in the year before. Spinners did fairly well until it was seen that supplies of cotton would probably be short when the price of the raw material advanced, the rise being further increased by the operations of speculators in Liverpool. Short time was then resorted to, and after a while the cotton "corner" collapsed, and price fell heavily.

FOR COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS. DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED A REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false. This Caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR OF CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—See The Times, July 13th, 1884.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DIARRHCEA, DYSENTERY, GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH, LONDON, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME OF DIARRHCEA." From SYMES & CO., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla. Jan. 5, 1880.

To J. T. DAVENPORT, London. DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhoea and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhoea, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power. We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescribe and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, Life Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEAD-ACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists, 1s. 1d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d.

THE PRESIDENTIAL ARMIES OF INDIA.

BY THE LATE

Colonel S. RIVETT - CARNAC.

(Formerly 11th Hussars)

WITH A CONTINUATION AND GENERAL
REMARKS ON INDIA.

By the Author of "Our Burmese Wars and Relations with Burma," "Distinguished Anglo-Indians," &c.

"The volume is a graphic, stirring record of the English in India, as shown in the achievement of the armies of the three Presidencies. It is a book that deserves wide popularity."—ECHO.

"An interesting book."—DAILY NEWS.

"It is one of the best historical narratives of the real conquest of India that has ever been written. This is a book with which every Anglo-Indian should be pleased. Page after page it gives us some information we had not before. It lets us see far more, as it were, of the military operations of the Company—of its strength and its ambition—than almost any book of its size has hitherto done."—GLASGOW HERALD.

"A valuable contribution to the history of India, by the late Colonel S. Rivett-Carnac. The book has been edited and completed by the accomplished author of 'Our Burmese Wars and Relations with Burma,' and is very interesting."—THE FREEMAN'S JOURNAL.

"Colonel Laurie has done his part thoroughly and well, and we can cordially recommend this most interesting volume to the consideration of the reading public."—DAILY EXPRESS (Dublin).

"Colonel Carnac's share of the book is confined to the first six chapters, the remainder being furnished by Colonel Laurie. . . . It is the sort of book that every man in India ought to possess, for a reference to its pages would decide many points that are constantly cropping up. . . . The book is worthy of Colonel Carnac's reputation."—TIMES OF INDIA.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"Those whom the matter concerns will find a faithful and fertile source of information."—SATURDAY REVIEW.

"Contains a fresh recipe for every day of the year, is clearly printed, and of a handy size. The recipes are clearly set forth, and likely to be of practical assistance to cooks and housewives, since they have all been approved by experience."—THE CATERER.

"A useful little cooking book."—HOME NEWS.

"Miss 'Lucy Jones' 365 receipts are admirable for their terseness and for the ease with which they can be understood. This handy book is a veritable treasure to young housekeepers."—PUBLIC OPINION.

"The collection as a whole in this handy and useful volume will be highly prized."—BRITISH WEEKLY.

"We could not recommend a better work."—ARMY AND NAVY MAGAZINE.

"A considerable number of the recipes are out of the ordinary run, and those which we have examined in detail appear to be constructed on sound principles."—MANCHESTER GUARDIAN.

"Will be found extremely serviceable."—METROPOLITAN.

BROAD ARROWNAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE.

ESTABLISHED 1838.

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

(The only Quarterly Review in India.)

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it has long held, and there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

"The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name—J. W. KATE, Athenaeum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophecy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

"The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

JEOPARDY OF LIFE, THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset!! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm. The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—J. C. ENO.

CAUTION.—Examine each Bottle, and see that the Capsule is marked ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." Without it you have been imposed on by worthless imitation.

OLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS, POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S PATENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.,

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced Life they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 14, 1890.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 27th September; from Allahabad and Madras to the 25th September; and from Calcutta to the 24th September.

H.E. THE VICEROY proceeds on tour on Oct. 21st.

H.E. SIR GEORGE GREAVES, Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay Forces, was to go on tour on October 1st, reaching Bombay on the 18th to join Sir Frederick Roberts in the inspection of the Bombay Defences.

AT the Municipal Election at Margao on Sept 21st a disturbance occurred. The soldiers fired upon the populace, killing seventeen, and wounding many others.

MEETINGS of Portuguese subjects have been held in Bombay, Poona, Karachi, and Sholapur, protesting against the action of Government at Margao.

A REVOLT against the authority of the Nawab has occurred at Cambay. In its suppression thirteen of the populace were killed, twenty wounded, and two hundred taken prisoners. Many of the soldiers were wounded with arrows and stones.

THE Simla Committee of the Uncovenanted Service have passed resolutions condemning the manner in which the inquiry has been carried out in London.

A REVOLUTION broke out in Manipur on Sept. 21st, when the palace, the magazine, and four seven-pounder guns were seized by the Maharajah's brothers. The Maharajah abdicated in favour of his brother the Jubaraj.

THE first result of the agitation for the extension of the Bengal Railway system will probably be the construction of a line to Daltongunge Coalfield, the projects for an alternative through line to Calcutta being kept in abeyance.

DACOITS in the neighbourhood of Halitpur, in the Central Provinces, have been giving great trouble, so much so that the Government have had to order the disarmament of the district.

MR. RICE, C.S., who has been tried at Rangoon for embezzlement, has been discharged, being found not guilty by the jury by a large majority.

A DRAFT memorial to Government is being signed, complaining of the insanitary condition of Madras.

THE Government of India have replied to the Calcutta Chamber of Commerce in regard to the income-tax, saying their policy were to effect a more equal distribution of the tax.

THE Gurkha regiments and the police will, in all probability, be entrusted with the punishment of Lunpunga.

THE Southern Lushai country is now reported to be absolutely quiet.

LORD HARRIS opened the Poona Fine Arts Exhibition on September 22nd.

MAHOMED YAKUB KHAN, of Kadanai, who is believed to have instigated the outrage at New Chaman, has been dismissed by the Afghan Governor of Kandahar.

IN the Chanda District, Central Provinces, ten persons were killed within a fortnight by man-eating tigers.

AN attempt is about to be made by the East Indian Railway to establish an agency for house-to-house delivery of goods conveyed by train, on the principle of the Parcel Carrying Company in England.

BOH AGA, the last of the dacoit leaders of Rangoon, has surrendered.

FORT WILLIAM is to be raised to a first-class district, with a Chief Commissariat Officer and a Deputy Surgeon-General.

LORD FRANKFORT, BRIGADIER-GENERALS AUCHINLECK AND KINLOCK assume their new commands at Calcutta, Umballa, and Allahabad, respectively, on October 15th.

GENERAL GALBRAITH was to arrive at Simla on October 12th, and take over the Adjutant-Generalship three days later.

SMALL-POX has broken out in the bazaar at Simla.

A SURVEY is about to be made for a new railway line from Madras to Gudur and Nellore.

THE dacoits in the neighbourhood of Lalitpur, down in the direction of the Central Provinces, have been giving trouble of late, so much so that Government have had to order the disarmament of the district. An additional Superintendent of Police, as well as extra forces of men from Jhansi and elsewhere, are being brought to the station; and four separate bodies of sowars and armed police are to scour the country round. Colonel Ollivant, the Inspector-General of Police, is at present on the spot.

THE tribal jirgahs of the Black Mountain will be called in before the promenade along the frontier is made. The maliks have been on their best behaviour since the punitive expedition of two years ago, and no difficulty will be experienced in dealing with them.

MR. READ, the barrister, who was suspended on Sept. 10th by the Judicial Commissioner for appearing in Court in an objectionable state, put in, through counsel, a full apology, promising that he would not offend again. His Honour said that he could not pass such an offence unnoticed, and suspended Mr. Read from practising in the Judicial Commissioner's and the Courts subordinate thereto, for thirty days, warning him that, if the offence were repeated, the punishment would be more severe.

FIVE Burmans were charged in Rangoon before the Deputy Commissioner for Hanthawady with practising as advocates in Upper Burma without licenses. The Registrar to the Judicial Commissioner deposed that the certificates held by the prisoners were forgeries. The prisoners were remanded. These cases are probably the first of a series of prosecutions for similar offences.

AT Tanjore, on September 25th, the Governor of Madras cut the first sod of the Mayavaram-Mutput Railway in the presence of a large concourse of officials and people of the district. Answering the address of the local Board, his Excellency commended the public spirit the district had manifested, and their willingness to tax themselves for the construction of the railway. It was the first instance of a railway constructed from local taxation, and the Government of Madras was anxious to acknowledge such public spirit, and was glad to contribute half the cost. He regretted the absence of Mr. Stokes, Member of Council and late Collector, who had greatly interested himself in the scheme.

A LONG resolution by the Chief Commissioner has been published on the charges made against Mr. Buckle, Commissioner of the Eastern Division; Mr. Walton, Superintendent of Police; Mr. Wall, the Sub-Divisional Officer; and Captain Johnson, the Deputy Commissioner, by Mr. Moylan and Mr. Eddis, counsel for Mr. Fforde, the police inspector, recently sentenced to three years' imprisonment for extortion and oppression. Mr. Crosthwaite holds that the charges of partiality and grave irregularities against

Mr. Buckle are unsupported, and he entirely disbelieves them. Similarly Messrs. Johnson and Walton are commended for bringing to light Mr. Fforde's corruption and villainy, but his zeal led Mr. Walton to commit irregularities which were sanctioned by Mr. Wall. The charges of scandalous oppression by the police for the purposes of concocting evidence against Mr. Fforde are without foundation, except one case, where there is some suspicion that the witness had been tampered with by the police subordinates.

MR. L. A. HILL, Professor Physical Science, Muir Central College, Allahabad, died on September 23rd, from fever.

NOTES.

THE news from India by wire is quiet enough, but that which comes to hand by the Overland Mail is anything but that. There has been a revolt at Cambay, an electoral affray at Goa, and a revolution in Manipur, all with loss of life, which is pretty sensational for one week's news.

THE outbreak in Cambay was, according to the Times of India, "one of those unhappy incidents which no wisdom can foresee, and no diplomacy avert." The ryots deemed that they were labouring under a very serious grievance, and they declined to listen to the representations of the Nawab, to the Resident, or to any mediator. They seem to have had a grudge of some kind against the Dewan, and they made the allegation that that official effected oppressive changes in the incidence of taxation under the new Revenue Survey the excuse for a sort of general rising. The Dewan had really no hand in the resolution that this impost should be paid in cash instead of in kind, for the same regulation applies to every Presidency under the new Survey. They seem to have needed an excuse for a disturbance, however, and accordingly they assembled in Cambay city in constantly increasing numbers, and assumed an unpleasantly threatening attitude. Pacification by simple means was attempted in vain, and at length, after the local sowars and police had been utterly routed, the aid of a company of Native troops had to be called, with the result, after the Resident had five times called upon the men to surrender peacefully, that a charge was ordered, and in the mêlée thirteen of the rioters were most unfortunately killed. The rioters outnumbered the troops by ten to one, but not a shot, it seems, was fired by the latter.

THE same journal says of the Goa riot:—"Very grave news has come to hand during the week from Portuguese India. Goa has for some time past been deep in election intrigues, and it was at first stated that the Government without provocation had ordered the troops to fire on the electors of what is known as the 'popular' or anti-gubernatorial party, and had killed seventeen and wounded fifty. On Monday we received news confirmatory of our correspondent's telegrams of Sunday, and representing the situation in a very serious light; while, on the other hand, the President of the Municipality of Salsette, telegraphed that the disturbance was begun, not by the Government, but by the 'popular party,' and the editor of the Portuguez Britannico has handed us a wire stating that Dr. Loyola's party, under the influence of drink, attacked the Municipal building, and were not dispersed till after they had killed and wounded several. Amid this conflict of testimony the truth is somewhat difficult to arrive at."

WITH praiseworthy anxiety, however, to get at the truth, the Bombay paper sent a representative to Goa; but truth seems a very difficult article to get hold of at Goa, and so the editor is obliged to comment thus on his representative's despatches:—"The net result of our representative's investigation it is difficult to characterise. The first impression that is left on the mind after reading his despatches rather tends to remind one of the summing-up of the Western judge: 'The plaintiff's been lying, gentlemen of the jury, and the defendant's been lying, and as for me, I don't care a red cent about the case one way or the other; and now, gentlemen, consider your verdict.' At any rate, even after our representative's patient inquiries, it is simply a matter of impossibility to judge who is in the right and who is in the wrong."

THE indignation in Bombay, where there is a numerous Goanese population, at the news of this Goa affair was very great, and a meeting of the Portuguese community was held on the Wednesday before the English Mail left, to protest against the action of the Government in Margo in ordering the people to be fired on. Resolutions were passed protesting against the atrocities committed on the people; agreeing to send a telegram to H.M. the King of Portugal, asking for redress; and appointing a committee for the purpose of carrying out all that may be necessary to attain the object of the meeting. The meeting was a most enthusiastic one; about a thousand people were unable to gain admission, and all the resolutions were carried amid loud cheering. Telegrams were received from meetings at Poona, Karachi, and Sholapur, expressing sympathy with the Bombay meeting. A subscription list was opened at the close of the meeting to defray the expenses connected with the movement.

THE revolution at Manipur is explained by the Pioneer. The Maharaja has four brothers, all sons, by different mothers. They hold between them all the offices of the State, and are all thoroughly jealous of each other and of the Maharaja. The third son, who is Commander-in-Chief of the Manipur troops, led the revolt. It was not much of a revolution, for we read that "after some desultory firing on the side of both parties, in which a casualty or two occurred, the Maharaja decided to abdicate in favour of the heir apparent." All is now quiet in Manipur.

THIS does not conclude all the sensational news, for if the Cabul correspondents of the Civil and Military Gazette are to be believed (which we are far from saying or suggesting) there is trouble brewing for us across the Afghan frontier:—

"It is stated that the Amir's durbar at Cabul, which was held on Sept. 1st, was the scene of much talk and abuse of the British Government. The principal subject of discussion was the proposed Cabul River Railway, to consider which the durbar was actually convened. 'Almost the whole of the Afghan Chiefs held in favour by the Amir were invited to attend, and there also appeared among them a political Moulvi of Muskat, who took a prominent part in the discussion. The chiefs congratulated the Amir on his success in hindering the progress of British influence in Afghanistan. The Amir then expressed his indignation at the aggressive measures adopted by the British Government in India in trying to construct a railway in his territory without obtaining his sanction. The Moulvi of Muskat thereupon denounced the British in rather harsh terms, and warned the Amir against British influence. The former history of Cabul and its rebellion, together with the recent Kashmir incident, were all brought forth as evidencing British dishonesty, in the course of which Muhammad Yakub Khan's capture was made the subject of much comment. The Chiefs advised the Amir to keep the British as far out of his territory as possible, and, in conclusion, the Amir consented to do so.' Having had some experience ourselves of Cabul Press correspondents we make bold to add that we do not believe a word of the above."

THE Calcutta public are perplexed, as well they may be, at the result of the Chartered Bank case. The accused individual, Shama Churn Sen, had for twenty years had charge of all the money of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China. It was established, unfortunately beyond a doubt, that upwards of twelve lakhs of rupees had been substracted from the bank's treasury. The prisoner had actually given a written confession of his offence; and yet, after a protracted trial, a Special Jury, acting under the instructions of a learned Judge, acquitted him, first, on the charge of embezzlement, and, secondly, on the charge of cheating. He left the Court after thanking his counsel for their excellent services; was loudly and enthusiastically cheered by his Native friends outside; and had the satisfaction of seeing the prison van that was waiting hard by go empty away. Shama Churn Sen is now a free man, and the shareholders of the bank, having no further means of redress, are left to bemoan the loss of their twelve lakhs of rupees.

SIR STEUART BAYLEY'S appointment in the India Office leads the Indian Mirror to criticism in a novel direction:—"We have no doubt that Sir Steuart Bayley has himself sought the appointment, or otherwise it would not have been offered to him. But that our present Lieutenant-Governor should leave India before his time strikes us as rather curious. As we have said, however, we were not unprepared for the event. Sir Steuart Bayley's retirement before the expiration of the full term of his office means a revolution for Bengal. It means confusion in the camp of the Bengal Secretaries. It means confusion to such men as Sir Henry Harrison and Sir Alfred Croft, who have, for a considerable time past, been carrying things with a high hand, and who, flushed with arrogance and conceit, look down upon all, excepting their personal friends and satellites."

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, OCT. 12.

The Zhoib Valley Expedition is expected to reach Fort Sandeman by the 30th inst. It will move thence against the Shiranis. A small force from the Dera Ismail Khan and Dera Ghazi Khan garrisons will assemble at Daraban at the end of the month to co-operate with General White and enter the Shirani country from the east. Mr. Oldham, of the Geological Survey, accompanies the expedition to examine the oil deposits that are reported to exist in the Shirani country.

It is definitely settled that the Delhi-Kalka Railway will be opened for public traffic on the 1st of January.

CALCUTTA, OCT. 13.

The Agricultural Conference at Simla finishes its sittings to-day. It is understood that it will recommend the adoption of Dr. Voelcker's suggestions—namely, that an expert be sent from England, and that the system of education be modified to enable the agricultural classes to improve themselves, and to raise the standard of agriculture throughout the country.

The Factory Commission continues its sittings at Bombay, taking the evidence of a number of witnesses. It proceeds next to the North West, and then to Calcutta.

BURMA.

RANGOON, OCT. 13.

The Chief Commissioner has ordered the withdrawal of the new charges against Yanyun. They arose out of a brutal murder committed nearly four years ago. The Rangoon Times asserts that the local Government had official reports before them showing that the crime was really committed by Bocho, a yet uncaptured dacoit chief. It says that the recent proceedings are an attempt to prejudice public opinion against Yanyun, and to justify the action of the local Government in refusing him the promised amnesty.

THE Englishman says:—Mr. C. E. Vansittart, Assistant Accountant-General, Bengal, whose name has been prominently before the public of late in connection with various Gold Mining Companies, has tendered his resignation of Government service.

THE Madras Public Health Committee has appointed a sub-committee of six of its members to draw up a memorial to Government, expressive of the wishes of the public meeting of last Friday. The Madras Mail thinks that if five of the Municipal Commissioners were selected by the ratepayers to work with the executive officers they should be paid for their time and experience, and thus the town would gain in all directions—in improved sanitation, better tax collections, checking of abuses, and power to keep subordinate officers of the Municipality up to the mark.

RIVER COMMUNICATION IN BURMA.

(Rangoon Gazette.)

In an interesting letter from Burma, appearing in Indian Engineering of Saturday last, occurs the following passage, in which there are several inaccuracies:—

"In river communication the improvement has also been marked. The Irrawaddy flotilla company had for many years kept a fleet of steamers plying on the Irrawaddy, and although the subsidy of this company has been reduced 30 per cent. it has done more for the country during this period. Express steamers have been put on the run once a week either way, between Rangoon and Mandalay, and also weekly steamers to and from Bhamo, instead of fortnightly, as stipulated in their contract. They are also plying regularly on the Myitnge River and during the rains on the Chindwin. This company has also borne their share of expense in clearing the channels and otherwise securing the safe navigation of the river. The result of these measures is that trade by Native boat traffic is rapidly increasing and merchants feel safe on the waterway, formerly invested with river dacoits."

Express steamers run not once, but twice a week either way between Rangoon and Mandalay, besides two ordinary steamers either way. Steamers run twice a week, not once, to and from Bhamo, including one express steamer either way. The contract stipulation is not for a fortnightly service to Bhamo, but for a monthly one. The steamers of the Flotilla Company ply the whole year round on the Chindwin, and not merely during the rains. With regard to the clearing of the channels, the company bear all the expenses, and not part, as the correspondent of Indian Engineering says. The operations during the last dry season at Kyangin, north of Myanaung, were most successful, and the river was kept open without a hitch, notwithstanding the fact that the river was several feet lower than it had been in any previous year. These operations were conducted on the principle adopted on the Mississippi, where the Flotilla Company sent a special agent to study the mode of working.

PROGRESS OR PURIFICATION?

(Madras Times.)

In Bengal, more than in Madras, it appears to be now a moot point on what lines "reform" should proceed. There are ardent Radicals who wish to revert to chaos, in the hope of thence moulding a new order better than the old. There are staunch Conservatives, of the old school, whose opinion is that what served their fathers and their grandfathers will also suffice for themselves. And in between the two extremes come those who have been truly educated, whether in English or a vernacular, and who have assimilated the knowledge that they have acquired. This party says, let us retain what is good, casting out what is evil, and replacing it, where necessary, with something more satisfactory. But even this party is subdivided. There are differences of opinion as to the source whence the replacements referred to should be made. The one section advocates drawing from the West what is good in itself and applicable to the conditions of life and society in the East; the other prefers to go back to a time when it is considered that there were fewer impurities and incongruities in Hindu laws, judicial and social; and urges that by returning to the ways of the distant past all that is needed can be readily effected. For the settlement of future plans it is essential that these two sections should come to some sort of an agreement; that they should discuss matters fairly; and, if need be, effect compromises. Three evils have to be avoided—(1) the belief that whatever is in social and political rules must be good; (2) the belief that it must be bad; (3) the belief that the further back research is made the purer the laws found will be, and the more appropriate for adoption now. Tendencies to be misled in each of these directions have been manifested during the last few months. In Bengal a writer asks, "Is Bengal going back?" and the question is not answerable entirely in the negative. Allowing that it is not fair to judge ex pede Herculem, we must, nevertheless, note the ideas of individuals, and whenever one man urges that a return to the most primitive method of striking a light be resorted to, it becomes easy to imagine another suggesting primitive clothing—or want of clothing—and yet a third semi-enlightened individual exclaiming, "Once men were monkeys, we are told; let us be monkeys once again. We will solve the problem of prehensile or nonprehensile for ourselves; and, at the worst, if any Hindus are left, they will regard us as something holy."

How to revert to only what is good of the past and to select only what is good in the present and future, is a task that may reasonably be deemed impracticable, for were it performed we should have a Utopia indeed. But it is nevertheless worth considering, how each step towards reform should be taken, that is whether in the light of information from the West alone, or from the ancient teachings of Hindustan alone, or from the latter compared with the former, and then adapted to the requirements of the present day. For our own part, we have no hesitation in urging Hindus to cling steadfastly to all that is good in their own system, but it can hardly do harm if they gauge the various branches with the aid of knowledge derived from Western education. There are two direct dangers. The one is, the fancy that the system of the past, however purified, can meet all the requirements of modern times; the other, that semi-digested knowledge of Western modes of thought and systems of administration may be brought too much into play by those who have a preference for what is thought to be new. There is a risk, in short, of progress and purification contending for the victory, instead of co-operating to bring about a general improvement of social and general affairs in this country. Without commenting upon this at any length, we allude to it in the hope that the attention of reformers may be given to guarding against the delay and the difficulties that must result from the want of a definite plan of action. There are many who speak of reform in general; there are few who decide for themselves or in consultation with others, what is a desirable reform and who then set themselves to do what in them lies to carry it out. Strivings after reform in the abstract are heard of every day; efforts to bring about reforms in the concrete are rare, and the general body of reformers appear disinclined to give much support to those few individuals who form the exception to the general rule of verba non facta. More good would probably result were various reforms discussed one by one, and the schemes of amelioration decided upon pushed steadily forward, whether as separate and distinct measures, or as factors in a well-developed plan of operations in regard to the broad subject of socio-political reform, as a whole.

THE MANIPUR REVOLT.

(Times of India.)

News has reached Assam of a revolution having taken place in Manipur on the night of the 21st. The Maharajah's brothers have apparently seized the palace, the magazine, and the four seven-pounder mountain guns which were presented to him by the Government of India. The Maharajah has fled to the Residency, where there are two companies of the 44th Light Infantry. This force is sufficient to cope with any difficulties that may arise. In the meantime, the troops at Kohima are ready to march down the instant their services are needed. The Maharajah of Manipur has four brothers, all sons of Kerti Singh by different mothers. They hold between them all the important offices of the State, and are jealous of one another, as well as of the Maharajah. The eldest son, who is entitled to senapati or commander-in-chief of the Manipur troops, has on more occasions than one shown open disloyalty to his brother, and it is believed he is the leading spirit in the present rebellion.

ALLAHABAD, SEPTEMBER 24.

Further information from Manipur confirms the news given of the revolt there after some desultory firing of both parties, in which a casualty or two occurred. The Maharajah to-day decided to abdicate in favour of his brother, the Jubaraj, or heir apparent. All is now quiet in Manipur, and order has been restored. The services of 200 men, 44th G.L.I., at Kohima, who were under orders to march to Manipur, will not now be required. The ex-Maharajah will leave the country immediately, and goes on an extended pilgrimage to Mathura. The Maharajah never took a serious interest in the government of his State, being devoted entirely to the practice of religious rites and ceremonies, and was thoroughly priest-ridden. His subjects, therefore, have calmly acquiesced in the turn affairs have taken.

Latest reports from Manipur state that the Maharajah, who is said to be half imbecile, has resigned in favour of his mother, and insists on going to Brindaban, near Muttra, as a fakir.

BENGAL.

(September 24.)

SIR STEWART BAYLEY, Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, who succeeds Sir Edward Bradford in the India Office, is not likely to leave Bengal for a couple of months at least, and it is uncertain as yet who will succeed. Sir David Barbour and Mr. Mackenzie, Central Provinces, are freely mentioned. It is, however, believed that Sir David Barbour will refuse the Lieutenant-Governorship of Bengal, and that Mr. Mackenzie will be appointed. If so, Mr. A. P. MacDonnell is likely to be Chief Commissioner, Central Provinces.

SIR CHARLES ELLIOTT is now freely mentioned as likely to get Bengal.

THE Englishman, in an article "Is the Income Tax to be Permanent?" says:—Government is adopting a course which is neither sagacious nor dignified in closing its eyes to the storm that is brewing, and sneering at those who would warn it in time. Such a flippant and cynical remark as that "the question is not whether the tax is popular with those who pay it" shows how entirely Government is ignorant of the state of feeling on this important subject. No other direct tax is objected to in the similar manner, for the simple reason that with other taxes people see the justness of the demand, and if hard pressed at any time can avoid payment by sacrificing the special advantage they are enjoying by paying it. But with the Income-tax there is no escape, however hard may be the circumstances, and whatever sacrifices may be made. The warrant is always ready. In postponing the levy of the tax on profits on consignments, the Government can only be congratulated on having done the least it could do. We doubt, in fact, whether a tax on consignors' profits can ever be believed, for even the Government's inquisitorial powers will fail to extort a confession as to profits. In its anxiety to enforce a principle Government may seek "to obtain information from England," but the attempt is doomed to failure. As for the general question, Government will find that it is greatly mistaken if it expects to dismiss the subject in this manner. The revelation which is now made that the tax is practically never to be removed is something entirely new, and marks an individual policy that is in no sense a continuation of the policy of the previous administration.

MADRAS.

(September 25.)

M. CLEMENT THOMAS is named as the next Governor of the French Settlements in India, vice Novelt, who has been appointed to Martinique. M. Thomas is a Franco-Indian, with many years' active experience in this country. He served different times as Chef de Service at Karrikal, Mahé, and Chandernagore, his reputation being good in administration. He is now in France, and will probably arrive in India next month.

COLONEL BEGBIE, Commandant Bangalore Rifle Volunteers, has, it is reported, been appointed Assistant Adjutant-General, Burma Division.

At a largely-attended meeting of the ratepayers, held on Sept. 19, the following resolutions were unanimously carried:—That having regard to the existing or recent cholera epidemic, the generally insanitary condition of this city and the unusual mortality prevailing or lately prevalent in it, the Governor in Council be respectfully asked—firstly, to appoint a special sanitary officer or committee, under section 41 of the Madras Municipal Act, for the purpose of investigating the causes of such epidemic and mortality, and advising the Commissioners and the Governor in Council as to the measures to be taken for the removal or abatement thereof; and, secondly, to allot, out of provincial funds, such moneys as may be necessary for improving the general sanitary condition of the city.

BOMBAY.

(September 27.)

MR. A. SHEWAN, C.S., Administrator, Rajpipla State, has been granted furlough for one year from Oct. 24.

MR. H. F. SILCOCK, C.S., has been re-appointed to do duty as First Assistant Collector, Nassik, on completion of his special duty in the Political Department.

THE Kurrachee Chamber of Commerce has elected Mr. T. L. F. Beaumont a member of the Board of Trustees of the Port of Kurrachee during the absence of Mr. August Thöle.

THE REV. F. N. HILL, B.A., Garrison Chaplain at the Presidency, has been appointed Domestic Chaplain to the Lord Bishop of Bombay during his lordship's visitation tour, with effect from the 26th ult.

THE Bombay Municipal Corporation devoted the whole of the 19th inst. to the consideration of Dr. Blaney's motion regarding the water supply from the Pawai reservoir. He proposed among other things that in future, whenever it was practicable to do so, the Municipal Commissioner should take the orders from the Corporation when he thought it desirable to shut off or deliver the water supply from the Pawai reservoir before making such changes. The motion was strongly opposed by members, and it was therefore rejected by a large majority.

DR. GREENHALGH having unconditionally withdrawn his suit against the Western India Turf Club, a full meeting of the stewards of the Club took place at Poona on the 17th inst., to consider Greenhalgh's application for a return of his license. It was decided to restore the license. The stewards of the Calcutta Turf Club have warned Dunn, the jockey, off the Calcutta course, and all other places working under its rules for life.

THE Rast Gofar has been calling the attention of the Native community to the benefits conferred on the Sir J. J. Hospital by the Sisters of All Saints, who have undertaken the superintendence of the nursing. The Rast Gofar has asked for subscriptions up to Rs. 1,200 from Native gentlemen to provide the nurses with a carriage and horse to enable them to take the air after their long hours of work—7 A.M. to 7 P.M.—with only two hours of leisure. Already two nurses have broken down, and living in a crowded part of the town.

THE following is a summary of the Bombay season reports for the past week:—Rain during week fair throughout the Konkan and Deccan; slight in two districts of Guzerat and in parts of Kattywar and the Southern Mahratta Country. More rain wanted in parts of Ahmedabad, Panch Mahals, Kaira, Nassik, Ahmednugger, Satara, and urgently throughout Kattywar and the Southern Mahratta Country, in parts whereof crops are withering. Standing crops otherwise flourishing except in parts of Kurrachee, Hyderabad, Panch Mahals, and Dharwar, where they are injured by blight, rats, locusts, or other insects. Reaping of early crops progressing in several districts of Sind and Guzerat, and in Khandeish, Rutnagherry, and Kanara. Preparations for late-crops continue in parts of Hyderabad, Upper Sind Frontier, and in most districts of the Deccan and Southern Mahratta Country. Fodder insufficient in parts of Nasik, Poona, Ahmednugger, and Dharwar. Agricultural stock healthy, except in parts of Nassik.

A RETURN which has just been issued by the Bombay Mill-owners' Association, regarding the position of cotton mills in Jarora, clearly sets forth the remarkable progress which has been made in textile industry during the last few years, and the pre-eminence of the Bombay Presidency in the development of such undertakings. Twelve years ago there were fifty-six mills in India, with 1,452,794 spindles and 13,018 looms, employing 42,914 hands, and consuming 936,547 cwts. of cotton. Now there are considerably more mills in the Island of Bombay alone, namely, 70 mills with 1,895,660 spindles, 13,785 looms, giving employment to 59,139 workpeople, and consuming 2,226,819 cwts. of raw material. As far as the whole country is concerned, the number of mills has more than doubled within the last decade, there now being 137 mills (including a dozen in course of construction), working 3,274,196 spindles, and 23,412 looms, which give employment to 102,721 hands, and consume 3,529,617 cwts. of cotton. The capital embarked in these enterprises is Rs. 9,13,91,655, of which Rs. 5,28,15,112 is invested in mills in the Island of Bombay. The former sum does not include the capital of sixteen mills privately owned.

REVOLT IN CAMBAY.

There has been a serious revolt in Cambay against the authority of the Nawab. In the suppression of the rising thirteen persons lost their lives, twenty were wounded, and 200 prisoners taken. The ostensible cause of the disturbance was the attempt to apply to the Cambay territory the Bombay land revenue system.

Mr. H. H. Summars, C.S., Revenue Survey Officer at Cambay, sends the following to the Bombay Gazette, Sept. 2, as an authentic account of the revolt:—

For the past fortnight or three weeks the rural population of Cambay got up an agitation in consequence of the intended introduction of a jamabandi on the revenue survey principles. The agitation was commenced by the Kasba cultivators. There are two divisions into which the villages of Cambay are divided—one is called "bahra" (black soil) villages, the other "chalotar" (light-soil) villages. Each division comprises about an equal number of villages. The bahra cultivators used to pay to the durbar in kind, and that amounted to about half their produce. The chalotar cultivators used to pay in cash a certain sum on the assumed areas of their fields. The survey areas of all the villages except five were obtained in May, 1889, and of the remaining five in May, 1890. The bahra cultivators have now to pay from this year not in kind, but in cash. In fact, the Bhagvati system is changed into the Vigoti one to secure uniformity. This change of system is more beneficial to the ryots than the State, since the maximum amount they have now to pay on each biga is not more than two and a-half rupees, Cambay coin (equal to about two rupees British). The Chalotar cultivators are now required to pay the same rate they used to pay on their former assumed areas, but on the areas as ascertained by the survey. Those whose areas have increased have to pay more, those whose areas have diminished by the survey have to pay less than formerly. Kasba, Nagra, and Oondel—three chalotar villages—have not yet been touched. Another change introduced is with respect to cesses. The cultivators had formerly to pay various cesses. All the various cesses are now entirely done away with, and in their stead the cultivators have now to pay only about two annas per biga. In fact, the unknown quantity paid as cesses is now reduced to a known amount, and is attached to the land. Each cultivator now has a receipt-book, on the first page of which is entered his holding, showing the survey numbers, the areas, and the assessment he has to pay on each field. So that he now exactly knows what he has to pay to the Durbar, whereas, formerly, if you were to ask him what he had to pay, he would say, "I don't know, I will pay what the Talati asks me to pay."

The agitation now made is to get rid of all these changes. It appears very strange that the chief agitators are the Kasba, Nagra, and Oondel people, who are not yet touched in the least. These agitators sent messages to the various villages, asking the villagers to come down to Cambay city in large numbers, and as their number increased little by little they passed resolutions to outcast and ill-treat any of the ryots who would not join them, so that their number swelled to about two thousand. They sent a petition to his Highness the Nawab, asking him to reduce these taxes and instantly dismiss the Dewan, and as a means of reducing these taxes, they suggested that there should be survey classification and assessment. Eight of the principal inhabitants of this place were deputed to hear what the people had to say, and to report the same to his Highness. But they would not listen, and would not come to any terms. At last his Highness the Nawab gave them a written reply that so long as survey classification and settlement were not completed, the ryots could pay their dues according to the former system. But though this was their own original demand, which was acceded to by his Highness, they were not satisfied, but became more unruly and began parading about the streets in large numbers with dangs and vasis in their hands, and they stuck up a notification, saying they would not disperse unless the Dewan was dismissed. They also presented a petition to the Political Agent at Kara; but the reply they received was that mere general allegations against the Dewan could not be paid attention to, but that they must state something specific against him. This they failed to do. The Nagarseth (chief shethia) was asked by the rioters to cause all the shops to be closed under threat of a general loot. Notices were sent to the different judicial officers of the State not to execute any process against them. They even issued notices that they would not pay the assessment. In fact, every one of their notices was decidedly of a seditious and rebellious nature. It was threatened that they would attack the Khothi, where the Dewan resides.

His Highness the Nawab left Cambay with his Dewan early on the morning of the 16th inst., with the object of seeing the Political Agent at Kaira on the subject. The Political Agent was apprised of all these occurrences, and on obtaining the sanction of the Bombay Government he came to Cambay with a military party on the 19th inst. The ryots were asked to disperse often and often, and notices to the same effect were posted on the walls. All the shops were closed, and business was at a standstill. The Political Agent himself issued a notice to the rioters on the 19th inst., asking them to disperse by the morning of the 20th, at the same time informing them that he would personally attend to the jamabandi when the Durbar papers were ready. But notwithstanding this intimation of the Political Agent and the presence of the military force, the rioters continued to parade the streets with dangs and vasis. It seems they had made preparations to oppose and fight with the authorities if any attempts were made to disperse them.

When every attempt to disperse them by persuasion failed it became very necessary to disperse them by force. They had all collected at Sajan Falia, a street in the city of Cambay. The Cambay police force, backed by the military force, was taken to the place on the morning of the 20th. The Political Agent, the Dewan, and a few officers of the State accompanied them. The Cambay police force first tried to disperse them, but as they offered a determined resistance, the military force attacked them. Fourteen of the rioters were killed, about twenty-five of them wounded, and some sixteen were hurt, and 180 taken prisoners. About seventeen men of the police force also received some injuries. It was only then that the ryots dispersed to their respective villages. It will be seen from the above account that it was the rebellious and uncompromising nature of the ryots themselves which forced the Durbar into measures which it would never have been adopted, but for their conduct, and that these measures were essentially necessary to obtain the peace and security of the city. It is a great pity that, excepting one or two of the real agitators, the others are not yet reached. It was well for the Durbar that the Political Agent was on the spot and witnessed the whole proceedings for himself, and, convinced that extreme measures were necessary, he himself took the measures at the request of the Durbar, and thus spared the Durbar the great disadvantage of misrepresentation at the hands of others. If the Political Agent with a military force had not been on the spot, and the Durbar had attempted single-handed to disperse the rioters, perhaps few Durbar people would have been spared to tell the tale, and any explanation the Durbar would have offered would not have given satisfaction to the Government or the public.

SERIOUS ELECTION AFFRAY AT GOA.

(Pioneer Correspondent.)

SEPT. 22.

Sensational reports of election disturbances come from Goa. A short time ago two deputies were appointed to represent Portuguese India in the Chamber at Lisbon, and the Government quashed the elections. Yesterday new elections were conducted, and a large number of people assembled at the house of Senor Salvador Felipe Alvares at Salsette to record their votes. One telegram says these were fired on by the military by the orders of Government, and seventeen killed and many wounded.

A Marmagao correspondent, telegraphing late at night, says:—"At the municipal elections to-day at Marmagao the troops fired on the mob, killing fourteen and wounding fifty. Senor Da Costa Ultramar, a candidate, was seized by the Government party, and removed to Chinchin. The uproar still continues, and excitement is intense, as it is believed a general disturbance will take place to-night."

Another correspondent telegraphs:—"Serious disturbances have occurred at the election at Salsette to-day. Seventeen electors were shot dead and many others wounded by order of the Governor. Sixty additional troops, besides police sepoys, were sent in a steam-launch with three cases of cartridges, and express orders were received to shoot dead any electors of the popular party who made resistance."

LATER.

Further telegrams as to the Goa disturbances show that the Administrator rode to the place of election yesterday morning and struck several supporters of the popular candidate with a whip. They offered no resistance till fired on. Additional troops are being taken into Marmagao, where, according to the last telegram received, the friends of the popular candidate are preparing to resist the troops.

The Portuguese subjects here hold a meeting to-day, when a resolution will be submitted urging the King of Portugal to redress their grievances, failing which they will request England to take over Portuguese India.

SEPTEMBER 23RD.

Conflicting versions of affairs at Goa continue to reach Bombay, and it is impossible to arrive at a definite conclusion as to the exact situation. The most satisfactory method seems to be to take half of each and combine them. Here is a batch which may be taken as a sample of the whole:—

(a) The Administrator provoked the people by striking them with a whip. Thousands of popular electors who were expelled from the Municipal Hall stoned the premises and broke the door. Rifles and bayonets were snatched away from soldiers who were wounded. The Administrator fled. A cordon was formed to prevent the entry of other voters.

(b) After protesting against expulsion from the Municipal Hall an immense number of people assembled at the church. The troops fired on them, many being killed and wounded.

(c) Partisans of Senor Loyola, under the influence of drink, attacked the Municipal Hall, and obstructed the entrance of the President and Administrator. They were dispersed, but not all, and several killed and wounded.

THE UNCOVENANTED SERVICE.

SIMLA, SEPT. 25.

The following resolutions have been passed by the Simla Committee of the Uncovenanted Service:—(1st.) This committee wishes to express its strong condemnation of the action of the London committee in declining to put forward the evidence of Mr. Ribbentrop, an accredited witness of the Indian committees and a member of the Simla committee, simply on the ground that he intended to urge that men appointed by the Secretary of State were entitled to better terms than those appointed in India. (2nd.) This committee is of opinion that the London committee, notwithstanding the representations which have frequently been made by the Simla committee, has persistently kept the service in India inadequately informed of the progress of affairs. That its action throughout the inquiry has been far too independent, and that the London Association has failed to utilise the services and assistance of the Indian committees and representatives in the manner and to the extent it ought to have done. (3rd.) This committee without wishing in any way to interfere with the amount of money spent in connection with the Special Committee, thinks that in this matter also the London committee should have acted in greater unison with the Indian committees. This committee is further of opinion that, considering the relative proportions of the amount of subscriptions collected in England and India, respectively, which were in the ratio of 1 to 14, as given by the official account, the London committee ought, before incurring any expenditure over and above what was absolutely necessary, to have obtained the approval and concurrence of the committees in India. (4th.) This committee considers that the organisation should be continued, but on a different basis. That the headquarters of the association should be in India instead of in London, but that an efficient representative should be appointed in London, who should refer in all matters of importance to the central committee in India; and resolves to issue a circular to all local committees, explaining its views as to the form which the organisation should take. Fifth.—This committee is of opinion that the cordial thanks of the association are due to Mr. H. S. King, M.P., C.I.E., for the valuable services he has rendered during the course of the movement. Sixth.—This committee resolves that these proceedings be printed and forwarded to Calcutta and London, and to all local committees in India.

THE INDIAN FACTORIES AMENDMENT ACT.

SIMLA, SEPT. 26.

It is proposed to proceed with consideration with the Indian Factories Act Amendment Bill during the approaching session. The Viceroy appoints a Commission to determine the restrictions required by the Indian operatives themselves as to restrictions on their labour. The Commissioners are:—Surgeon Major Lethbridge, Raja Piyari Mohan Mukharji, Mr. Sorabji Shapurji Bengali, and Mr. Mir Mohammed Hussien, and the Director of Agriculture, North-West Provinces. These Commissioners will be assisted in Bombay by Mr. Narayan Meghaji Lakhanday; in Bengal by Babu Rasik Lal Ghose; in the North-West Provinces by Mr. Framji Manakji, of the Cawnpore Woollen Mills. The points for determination are:—(1) Limitation of hours of work for women to be eleven hours each day proper, and if women desire it. (2) Should any distinction be drawn between young persons and adults. If so, define young persons, and state the proper hours of labour to nine hours each day proper. (3) Does the proposed Bill, clause 5, provide sufficiently for holidays? (4) Do the operatives deserve, or the conditions of labour demand fixed working day? (5) Do male operatives desire compulsory stoppage of work at any fixed time of the day. The report of the Commissions are required to be submitted by the middle of November. The inquiry commences in Bombay at the beginning of October.

THE Times of India, September 27th, says:—We take advantage of the change in the departure of the English mail to improve the "make up" of our Overland Weekly Edition, which will henceforth appear in the larger and more convenient form of the Weekly Edition of the London Times. This change will give us more room for news, and more room, too, for the advertisements which have been gradually encroaching upon the news columns. To-day is the first of our Saturday mail days. The P. and O. steamer Pekin will sail at 2 P.M. The passengers will find a steam-launch waiting them at noon at the Apollo Bunder, at 12.30 the General Post Office will be closed for ordinary letters, and after that the good people of Bombay will be free to enjoy their usual Saturday half-holiday. The departure of the first Saturday mail steamer can hardly help reminding all of us of the "touch-and-go" escape we had from a Sunday mail, which would have meant the loss of Sunday as a day of rest, as well as the loss of our Saturday half-holiday. That we escaped this disaster was due mainly to ourselves, and it is pleasant to recall how stoutly all sections of the community, whether concerned or not, took part in the agitation. To English business men it was, of course, a matter of vital importance. They were loyally aided by their professional brethren, to whom a Sunday mail meant little or nothing, while the leaders of all the different Native communities hasten to take their part in preparing a protest that was primarily intended to secure for English people their immemorial right to an English Sunday. No agitation we remember in Bombay has ever been so successful as the great Anti-Sunday Mail meeting in the Town Hall; none had better reasons behind it; and we can recollect nothing that shows so admirably the good feeling that obtains in Bombay when anything important is at stake between all the diverse sections of our very varied community. We are reaping the fruits of our victory now in the final establishment of a mail departure at 2 P.M. on Saturday. Most of us would have preferred the old Friday arrangement. That was impossible, and the present compromise is the happiest and least inconvenient that could have been suggested. In writing on this matter for the last time we should not forget the good assistance given to Bombay by the officials of the P. and O. Company, both in London and locally. The Australian Press, too, deserves a word of thanks for frankly acknowledging the justice of a protest which to a large number of Australians could hardly have been acceptable.

OBITUARY.

COLONEL E. P. LLOYD-HERRIES, Retired List, late Bengal S.C., died at Llandrindad Wells on the 26th ult., aged sixty-seven years.

MAJOR G. CAMPBELL, Reserve of Officers, late 77th and 65th Regiments, died at 2, Borough Villas, Weymouth, on the 1st inst. Deceased, who was the only son of the late General G. Campbell, C.B., Royal (Bombay) Artillery, joined the army Nov. 2, 1866; became lieutenant Sept. 2, 1868; captain, Nov. 11, 1876; and major, July 1, 1881. He retired from the service, receiving a gratuity.

2ND LIEUTENANT W. L. HUTT, 2nd Battalion Seaforth Highlanders, died at Murree Hills, E.I., on the 24th ult., from the effects of a fall, aged twenty-one years. He joined the army Jan. 30, 1889.

SURGEON-MAJOR D. M. JACK, M.D., Indian Medical Service, died at Seetapore, E.I., on the 1st inst., aged thirty-six years. He was the son of the late Rev. M. Jack, of Gatehouse, Kirkcudbright. He joined the service March 31, 1877, and became surgeon-major March 31, 1889.

CHARLES EDMUND, LORD ELLENBOROUGH, died at his residence, Buckingham Gate, on the 9th inst., after a severe illness of some months' duration. He was a son of the Right Hon. Charles Ewan Low, Recorder of the City of London and M.P. for the University of Cambridge, and was born in 1820. Entering the Army in 1844 as a cornet in the 9th Light Dragoons (Lancers), he served throughout the Sutlej Campaign of 1846, including the battle of Sobraon. He subsequently exchanged into the 57th Regiment, and on attaining the rank of lieutenant-colonel in the Army was appointed to the command of the 66th Regiment, which he held until his retirement from the service as a colonel. He inherited the barony on the death, in 1871, of his uncle, the Earl of Ellenborough, the well-known Governor-General of India, and is now succeeded by his son, Charles Towry Law, born in 1856. Lord Ellenborough was in former years well known and much respected in the Army for his high military qualifications. Of a quick and generous temperament, he was at the same time a strict disciplinarian, and earned frequent commendation from the military authorities in India when serving there in command of his regiment for the perfect order and discipline in which it was invariably found. In the later years of his life he was assiduous in his duties in the House of Lords, taking a keen interest, and frequently an active and valuable part in debates and questions affecting the interests of the country and of the Army.

MR. A. I. HOME, Conservator of Forests, Bengal, proceeds on furlough for two years early next month, and will be succeeded by Mr. E. Dansey, officiating Conservator in Berar. Mr. F. B. Dickinson, Deputy Conservator of Forests, Central Provinces, will replace Mr. Dansey, and take charge on the 1st October.

THE Government of India have sanctioned the withdrawal of the detachment of Native infantry garrisoning Fort Philour to regimental headquarters at Jullundur, as proposed by the Commander-in-Chief. The fort and buildings will be made over to the Government of the Punjab to be utilised by the civil authorities as may be found convenient. The fort will be maintained in a proper state of repair, so as to admit of its reoccupation by troops in case of an emergency.

An experiment was made not long ago in Assam to cultivate eri silk, the caterpillar of which feeds on the castor oil plant. The Government entered into an arrangement with the manager of one of the tea gardens to carry out the experiment, the Government sharing half the expenditure up to a limit of Rs. 1,500. About twenty acres were planted with castor oil plants, and appeared to be prospering admirably, when another variety of caterpillar, which does not yield silk, came on the scene, and in three days stripped every tree of its leaves. The silkworm crop therefore failed, and the cost to Government of the experiment was Rs. 1,100. A detailed account of the experiment is being written, and will shortly be published. This is the fourth occasion on which large crops of castor oil plants are known to have been destroyed by caterpillars in Assam. It would almost seem as if the plant could not grow except in small patches, for while these four attempts to grow it on a large scale have failed there is hardly a village in the Assam valley which does not cultivate the eri-worm, and small patches of castor oil are to be seen in all directions. Another suggestion is that it has been the proximity of jungle which has hitherto proved fatal to the plant. It is probable that the experiment will be persevered with, as it would be a great benefit to the province if some system for rearing eri-worms on a large scale would be established.

PARSEE CHARITIES.

The New Year of the Parsees commenced from Wednesday, September 24, and the progress made by them during their last year in a variety of ways is noted in a memorandum by Mr. Bomonjee Behramjee Patel, from which it appears that the fountain of Parsee charity and philanthropy is never dry; on the contrary, it gathers force as it rolls on from year to year. In 1888-89, the aggregate value of their benefactions amounted to Rs. 4,55,000; whereas the total sum bestowed by them for philanthropic purposes during the period under review came up to Rs. 9,95,040, a sum most creditable to this small section of the Native community of Bombay. The characteristic nature of their charities is that they are directed for the benefit of all nationalities. The largest sum given this year was the one recently set apart by the late Mr. Byramjee Jeejeebhoy, namely, Rs. 3,75,000, for establishing an Anglo-Vernacular School for the poorer classes of the Parsees. Next in importance is Rs. 100,000 bestowed by Sir Dinshaw Manockjee Petit, Bart., for a Leper's Asylum at Trombay, in addition to his other benefactions. Mr. M. M. Bhownuggri's "Awabai Bhownuggri Hall for Nurses," Sir Dinshaw Petit Gymnasium, and his free gift of a large piece of land near the Poona Science College for erecting a "Bacteriological Laboratory." To these may be added Mr. Nusservanji Petit's Charitable Dispensary at Wada, and his late son Mr. Jamsetjee's "Female Ward," attached to the Civil Hospital at Sadra, the Bomonji Allbless Obstetric Hospital, Mr. Pestonji Cama's Rs. 20,000 for a scholarship, in connection with the Bombay University, and Rs. 5,000 for a gold medal in the name of his wife, Mr. Byramjee Jeejeebhoy's Rs. 8,000 for a schoolhouse in Bhowndy, Mr. Framjee Rustumjee Khandalavala's Rs. 10,000 for enabling poor Parsees to invest their children with the sacred thread and shirt. In other spheres of life the Parsees have shone conspicuously during the last year. Sir Dinshaw Petit has been honoured by the Queen-Empress with the honourable title of a Baronet; the Dustoor of the Deccan with that of Shums-ool-Olma; 3 Parsees were promoted to the rank of Surgeon-Major, 14 were made Justices of the Peace, 1 was raised to the acting appointment of the First Judge of the Court of Small Causes, and 1 to be the Fourth Judge; 1 has recently been appointed to act as First Assistant Collector and Superintendent of Factories. In educational advancement 2 Parsees were made M.D. at Brussels, 2 B.A. at Oxford, 2 M.A. at Bombay, 19 B.A., 16 Medical Graduates, 5 Vakils, 3 Solicitors, and 2 Barristers; and two Parsee girls have successfully passed their medical examination at the Grant Medical College.

THE TRADE OF BURMA.

In the official report on the trade between Burma and the adjoining foreign country for the three years ending March 31st, 1890, it is said that some alterations have been made in the system of registration, and in June last year registering stations were established at Bhamo, Maymyo, and Hlaingdet. The registration is confined chiefly to land routes, with the exception of the import timber trade from Chiangmai and Karenni, via the Salween. The total value of the trade for the year was Rs. 87,85,177, of which Lower Burma contributed two-thirds and Upper Burma one-third (for ten months of the year).

For the three years 1884-7 the total value of the trade with the foreign States adjacent to Lower Burma was Rs. 2,67,41,187, and for the three years 1887-90 Rs. 2,85,23,144. The trade for 1889-90 is the smallest on record, but, when the figures of the three years are taken together they give a better result compared with those of the previous triennial period. This is due, according to the report, to the merchants and importers declaring much of their timber before March 31st, 1889, after which date the higher rate of duty at 7 per cent. ad valorem was charged.

The average quantity of teak floated down the Salween during the three years 1884-7 was about 130,900 tons. For the three succeeding years the average was very little less, that is, about 111,400 tons. During the past year, however, the total quantity was only 36,903 tons, or just one-third of the lowest previous year on record, that is in 1881-2.

The imports for the last three years from Karenni show a decrease of nearly 19½ lakhs over the preceding three years. The imports from Zimme show an increase of nearly 31 lakhs, and from Siam an increase of Rs. 3,83,863. The exports to Siam show a decrease of Rs. 4,67,896, those to Karenni an increase of Rs. 3,84,955, and to Zimme an increase of Rs. 8,29,500. No comparison can be instituted as to some of the countries, for registration was not begun until last year; it therefore follows that a comparison of the total trade is quite deceptive. For instance, the trade with the Northern Shan States is returned as showing an increase of nearly 22 lakhs, but when it is remembered that the figures were available from the 1st of June, 1889, only, it will be seen that comparison is impossible, or, at the best, very misleading.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

It is proposed to introduce bicycles into the Bangalore Cantonment for the use of military orderlies doing duty in the several military offices in that station.

THE garrison at Neemuch will furnish half a battery, two companies of British Infantry, and a troop of Native Cavalry to do duty at Ajmere during the Viceroy's visit.

SURGEON SYKES is appointed Staff Surgeon to the Zhob Field Force, and Surgeon Hunter Assistant Principal Medical Officer. They will carry out sanitary details in addition to their other duties.

THE Ghazipur Volunteers are going to have a camp at Benares during the Viceroy's visit in November, and the annual inspection of the corps, foot and horse, will be probably timed so as to take advantage of the gathering.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL KEENE will command the attacking force at the Attock Camp, with Brigadier-General Auchinleck as Divisional General of Infantry. The defending force will be under the command of General Elles, with Brigadier-General Lockhart as Divisional General.

THE following officers belonging to infantry regiments have been detailed for duty with the Zhob Valley Railway Survey:—Captain Powell, 1st Gurkhas; Lieutenants Markham, 60th Rifles; W. W. Cookson, Royal Artillery; Hulke, the Buffs; and Gloster, Royal Irish. Five Staff Corps officers will also be detailed.

THE 39th Bengal Infantry at Jhansi, who have been warned for service in Lushailand in the autumn, will go to Chittagong and Demagiri, whence they will furnish escorts for the reconnoitring and survey parties that are to be sent out. The punishment of Lienpunga will probably be entrusted to the Assam Gurkha regiments and police.

LANCE-CORPORAL PRICKETT, who was charged with shooting a Native cart-driver, has been acquitted by the magistrate to whom the case was transferred by the military authorities. The Civil and Military Gazette says there is no doubt whatever of Prickett's innocence. Still the cart-driver undoubtedly died of a bullet wound, and the man who fired it is still at large.

A SPECIAL Army Circular has been issued laying down regulations for the employment of pensioned soldiers in civil capacities. The object is stated to be to popularise military service by enabling soldiers to earn some addition to their pensions after they have retired from the service. It is sought to provide a ready means of communication between employers and pensioners who are desirous of employment, and the Governor-General in Council trusts that all concerned will further the object in view as far as may be in their power. The pensioners will continue to draw their usual pensions, the receipt of which will in no way be affected by their acceptance of situations. The rules laid down are on the lines already adopted in Madras, where great success has been obtained.

THERE was a mistake in the local accounts of the arrest of a young cavalry officer at Bombay which requires to be rectified. He was not arrested by a police inspector, but by a superior officer, the offence being purely a military one—namely, absence without leave. He was, moreover, at once liberated on parole. The following is from the Civil and Military Gazette:—"Lieutenant Fry, whom our telegram from Bombay has reported as arrested, was, we learn, a very young officer, being under age. He had not long joined the regiment (7th Dragoon Guards), and was addicted to racing, being the owner of Wolfdog—for which he paid the modest price of Rs. 3,000—and other ponies. However, he got tired of soldiering in India; and so, as we hear, he sent in a written resignation of his commission to his commanding officer, and most probably through youth and ignorance started the same day for Bombay. His departure was in no way concealed, and his name was on all his boxes, so that he did not endeavour to leave India in any other than an open manner."

LIEUTENANT CONINGHAM, of the Leinster Regiment, now stationed at Agra, has been awarded the gold medal of the Balloon Society of Great Britain for meteorological observations made in a balloon ascent, which were recorded in the Government report; and also for having designed and supervised the construction of the first balloon made in India. It is worthy of note that military men have succeeded in holding this medal since the society was started. It was awarded to Colonel Burnaby, and soon after his death the late General Brine won it for his adventurous trip across the Channel. This officer had not been dead six months before it was awarded to Lieutenant Coningham. This is the second officer out here who has carried off an English Society's medal this year—Captain Younghusband having won the Royal Geographical Society's gold medal. It has been asked on more than one occasion why India does not keep up with other countries and have a balloon corps of its own, and the obstacles in the way have been given as a sufficient reason. Another answer was that Russia did not believe in it. But this no longer holds good, for in addition to possessing a well-established corps on land, she is now thinking of extending it to the navy. France, who keeps more than 500 balloons on her frontier, was the first to recognise their importance in this new phase, and Germany was not long in following suit. If, then, it is possible to send a captive balloon up from an ironclad at sea, surely it is easy enough to do it in India? Moreover the recent ascents in Calcutta would tend to show that the weather is far from unfavourable for ballooning.

THE programme of Sir Frederick Roberts' autumn tour has been just settled. Leaving Simla on the 15th October his Excellency will reach Bombay on the 18th, Poona on the day following. Bijapur on the 22nd, and Mahabaleshwar on the 24th, after which he goes to Deolali and thence to Mhow, where a halt will be made from October 30th to November 3rd. On the 4th Sangor is to be visited, on the 6th Jhansi, and thence by way of Cawnpore (7th to 9th) to Agra (10th and 11th), Muttra, and Delhi, which is reached on the 15th November, and here the Chief stops till the 19th. He then starts north to Khairabad for the Attock Camp, at which he will be present from the 21st November to December 3rd. Visiting thereafter Peshawar, Pindi, Sialkot and Mian Mir, Sir Frederick will reach the Pur Camp on the 15th December, and remaining there a day will move on to the Meerut Rifle Meeting, at which he stays till the 27th, and then goes to spend Christmas at Simla. The second tour commences on December 29th, the first engagements being a visit to Umballa and to Lucknow, 3rd to 7th January. Leaving Lucknow Sir Frederick moves westwards again, and stopping the 8th and 9th at Jubbulpore reaches Poona, where he stays from the 11th to 15th, and then moves to Secunderabad, 16th to 21st. Madras is reached on the 23rd, and after stopping till the 28th his Excellency goes back to Secunderabad, remaining there till February 3rd. On the way back to Calcutta a stop will be made at Allahabad from the 6th to the 9th, and Calcutta will be reached on the 11th February. Sir Frederic Roberts will probably remain in Calcutta till after the presentation of the Budget, but will then embark on a month's tour to Beluchistan and the North-West Frontier. Unquestionably our Commander-in-Chief is not only the greatest soldier, but the greatest traveller in the Indian Empire.

THE PATIALA WAR SERVICE TROOPS.

THE Maharaja of Patiala presented colours to the 1st Patiala Infantry on Sept. 9th. His Highness delivered an extempore address in Hindustani which, being translated, ran as follows:—"Bukshi Sahib, Colonel Sahib, officers and men of the 1st Patiala Infantry,—I have great pleasure in presenting you with colours with my own hand to-day. It has been brought to my knowledge that the men have greatly exerted themselves in learning their work, and the officers have shown much zeal and interest in the fulfilment of their duties. I, therefore, with my own hand present you with the colours as a mark of honour as well as a token of my satisfaction with your work. God forbid that the time for trial should ever come; but if it does come I am sanguine that you will win greater honours and reputation by serving your own master and the Imperial Government with the same glory and distinction which you so well gained in front of Delhi in the dark troublous days of 1857, and in the valley of Kurum in the Afghan war of 1878; and that you will show your loyalty, fidelity and valour by fighting, under the colours now presented to you, with the sense of honour and duty which is worthy of true soldiers."

THE following is the programme of the Viceroy's tour:—Leave Simla on October 21, and arrive at Patiala on the 22nd. Inspect Patiala, Nabha and Jhind troops, and leave on the 24th, arriving at Diobund on the 25th. Arrive Ulwar the same day, and inspect Imperial Service troops, and leave on the 27th. Arrive Ajmere on the 28th and hold a levée, inspect the Merwara Battalion, Erinpura and Deoli Irregular Forces, and R. M. Railway Volunteers, and leave Ajmere on the 30th. Arrive Chitor on the 31st, and Oodeypore on the same day. Halt till 4th November, inspecting the Meywar Bhil Corps meanwhile. Arrive Ajmere via Chitor on the 5th, and arrive at Jodhpore on the 6th. Witness the parade of the Sillidar Cavalry, and leave on the 8th. Arrive Mount Abu on the 9th, and leave on the 11th. Arrive Jeypore on the 12th, and leave on the 16th; arrive at Delhi on the 17th. Hold a levée, and leave on the 21st. Arrive at Agra on the 22nd, and hold a levée. Halt at Agra till the 3rd December, holding a Durbar on the 24th, visiting Batesar Fair on the 25th, Bhurtpur, and inspection of troops on the 28th, Deeg on the 29th, and Fatehpur Sikri on the 1st December. Leave Agra on the 3rd, and arrive at Benares on the 4th. Halt till 8th, and arrive at Calcutta on the 9th at 7 o'clock in the morning.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

SIR CHARLES NAPIER.*

There were two Sir Charles Napier, both of them "men of action." "Black Charlie," the Admiral, was at one time a more popular and better known personage than his cousin, Sir Charles James Napier, the conqueror of Scinde. The naval Sir C. Napier would probably have made a great name for himself in the Baltic had he not been restricted and betrayed by Sir James Graham's disloyal instructions. After that unhappy failure he was known only as a great snuff-taker. The fates were almost as unkindly in their treatment of Sir Charles James Napier, whose temper was fatal to all permanent success in any career. All the Napiers were great quarrellers, but the Scindian hero surpassed all the others in that quality. He was always insubordinate, and writhed under the slightest control. He was consequently always at strife with those placed in authority over him. With Sir John Moore, indeed, he got on excellently well, though nothing was done by the Government in recognition of either his heroism at Corunna, or of his subsequent sufferings. Under Wellington his military talents were duly appreciated, and he received his usual ultra-proportion of wounds; but, to his misfortune, he was suddenly promoted to the command of the 102nd Regiment—"a corps then just returned from Botany Bay, where it had been guilty of grave acts of mutiny and insubordination." Major Napier had no choice but to accept this unwelcome distinction, which hurried him away from the Peninsula in the middle of 1811, and sent him and his vagabonds to Bermuda, where his inexhaustible energy was expended in suppressing the drunkenness of his soldiers, and in improving their discipline. It was a dreary task, but all his entreaties to be allowed to return to the Peninsula were treated with disdain, for he belonged to a family whose advanced Liberalism was unwelcome to the Government of the day. He himself was a professed admirer of Cobbett and Burdett, nor did he conceal that he aimed at bringing about a full representation of the people, the free import of food, the complete emancipation of the Press, and the abolition of all vexatious privileges. A British officer holding such opinions was not likely to find many sympathisers at the Horse Guards; and it was only in 1819 that Lieut.-Col. Charles Napier was gazetted as Inspecting Field Officer of the Ionian Isles. There was nothing to do; but Governor Maitland, better known as "King Tom," was not long in recognising the necessity of making some public use of the extraordinary abilities placed at his disposal. He accordingly despatched Napier on a special mission to Ali Pasha at Yanina, who succeeded in inspiring him with an enthusiastic ardour in favour of the Greek cause. The utmost he was able to do for them or for himself was to obtain the appointment of military President in Cephalonia—where it was hoped that "the impetuosity and violence of Colonel Napier's character and politics" might find room for action, without danger to the State. There was ample room for action though of a purely civil character. Violence and robbery had to be suppressed; the husbandman had to be protected from political brigands; roads had to be made in all directions, for steep mountains intersected the island, and cut off one-half from the other. Napier was equal to the occasion, however little his work might commend itself to his taste. His subjects were 60,000 in number. For six hours daily he sat in Court administering justice, if not exact law. The prisons were reformed, quays and a lazaretto were built, the marshes were drained, and two zig-zag roads were laid down over the mountains. While he was thus usefully, if prosaically occupied, King Tom's reign came to an end, and he was succeeded by Lord High Commissioner Adam, who finding nothing else at fault, commanded Napier to shave off his moustaches. The hirsute appendage at once disappeared, and the Lord High Commissioner was assured that he was "obeyed to a hair." A visit from Lord Byron filled him with an intense desire to enter the Greek service, but he was warned that if he did so it would be at the cost of his commission. Having no private means of his own that settled the question, and he remained at his post for a period of nine years, upon which he afterwards looked back as the happiest episode in his stormy career. As it was, he had to face the fact that he was close upon the fiftieth year of his age, that he was miserably poor, and had no influence whatever in spite of wounds and exceptional services; that he had a sick wife and two children to maintain, and that his own constitution was worn and battered. In 1833—three years later—he lost his loved and loving wife, and for a time was utterly distraught. He was roused to action, however, by a report that his enemies in London and Corfu were about to attack him in the Reviews.

He then removed to Caen, in Normandy, for the sake of economy, and there stood with his back to the wall. It would have been well for him had he always displayed the same patient dignity, instead of returning abuse for abuse, and indulging in very intemperate language. During his three years' residence in France he published a work upon "Colonisation," that evinced considerable breadth and perspicuity of vision. His excellent book on "Military Law," which comprised many other topics useful and interesting to men of his profession, came out about the same time; but the Government in those days cared for none of these things, and preferred that its officers should be merely fighting machines. The darkest hour, however, is said to precede the dawn. In 1839 Napier was selected by Lord John Russell to command the troops in the North of England, where the Chartists threatened to give some trouble. Though personally sympathising with that misguided faction, Napier was a soldier before all things, and never allowed his feelings to obstruct the proper discharge of his military duties. He thus afforded perfect satisfaction to the Government, and prepared the way for his appointment to the command of the army in Scinde. Sir W. Butler's descriptions of the battles of Meanee and Dubba are spirited and effective, though we cannot commend the somewhat gushing style that pervades this little volume, and which was quite uncalled for in a memoir of such a genuine man as Sir Charles James Napier. We may also regret that so much space should have been devoted to the revival of the unhappy squabbles in which the hot-headed hero was so constantly involved. The recall of Lord Ellenborough rendered Napier's position in Scinde quite untenable, and he, too, was compelled to return to England, where his reception by the Court of Directors was painfully unjust, and in the highest degree discreditable. By the irony of fate they were compelled ere long to seek the aid of the very man they had villified, and to entrust to his generalship the command of their Indian army. As it happened, the second Sikh war had been successfully terminated before he landed at Calcutta, but there was still much work to be done, for the Sepoys had begun to display the discontented and insubordinate spirit which shortly afterwards burst forth into open rebellion. The mutinous conduct of the 66th Bengal Native Infantry at Govind Ghur was, indeed, promptly suppressed by the disbandment of the regiment, and the substitution of a corps of Goorkhas. As it chanced Lord Dalhousie was at that crisis cruising in the Bay of Bengal, and before he again set foot on dry land the Commander-in-Chief had completed his high-handed proceeding. The Governor-General, however, was not a man to suffer any encroachment on his authority, nor had his previous relations with Napier been of a cordial character. A serious and even violent quarrel was the result, which led to Napier's resignation, though he was compelled to remain another year in India until his successor arrived to take over the command. It is sad to think that on his return to England the war-worn veteran should again have encountered the antagonism of the Court of Directors, who contrived to make his concluding years a burden to him, notwithstanding the vigorous defence made by his brother, Sir William Napier, the eloquent historian of the Peninsular War. The last scene of all took place at Oaklands, his country house in Hampshire, where he had hoped to spend many happy and peaceful days, but the fates were adverse. On the 8th of September, 1853, the great warrior was buried in the old garrison graveyard in Portsmouth—St. Paul's and Westminster Abbey being alike closed against him. But the fever called living was conquered at last, and the restless spirit at length found repose, where the wicked cease from troubling, and the weary are at rest. It is a woeful tale that Sir W. Butler has submitted to the public, and one that will be read with shame and indignation.

THE simultaneous "Honour and Glory" match has been won by the Changla Gully Musketry Class with the splendid score of 921 points. The 7th Dragoon Guards are second with 897 points, and the 5th Bengal Infantry third with 890 points.

INDIAN GOLD MINING SHARES.—The principal change in this section was a rise of $\frac{1}{2}$ in Mysore-Harnballi Shares. Those of the Mysore Company declined 1-16. There were a few inquiries for Indian Consolidated and Mysore Reefs. Mysore Shares were last quoted 4 13-16 to 4 15-16 rd, Mysore-Harnballi 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ to 2 $\frac{3}{4}$, Nundydroog 1 13-16 to 1 15-16, Indian Consolidated New Company (9s. paid) 3s. 9d. to 4s. 3d., Balaghat Mysore (New) 8s. 3d. to 8s. 9d., Ooregum Ordinary 2 1-16 to 2 3-16, ditto Preference 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ to 2, Devala-Moyar 6d. to 1s., Nine Reefs New (fully paid) 3s. 3d. to 3s. 9d., Mysore Reefs (£1 paid) 5s. 6d. to 6s., Mysore-Wynaad (18s. 6d. paid) 2s. 3d. to 2s. 6d., South-East Mysore 2s. to 2s. 6d., Indian Glenrock New 2s. to 2s. 6d., Gold Fields of Mysore 8s. 6d. to 9s. 6d., New South-East Wynaad 1s. to 2s., and Mysore West (17s. paid) 1s. 9d. to 2s. 3d.

ARMY TEMPERANCE IN INDIA.

THERE are some philosophers who are never satisfied with the pace of progress. It is either too fast or too slow for them. On the 9th of last month, at Simla, Sir Frederick Roberts delivered a speech at a meeting held there in connection with the Army Temperance Association, and in this speech he expressed satisfaction at the progress which the Temperance movement had made amongst the British soldiers under his command. He said:—

"It would be premature to announce that the 'Army Temperance Association' and regimental institutes have done all we may hope they will eventually do for the moral life of the soldier, but I can truthfully say that, even in two short years, much good has resulted from them. As regards the 'Army Temperance Association,' for some some months past the average number of total abstainers who belong to it is about 14,000, besides which there are some 300 honorary members in the shape of temperance men. These figures are most satisfactory, but what gives great value to them, and at the same time bears testimony to the usefulness of these institutions, is the fact that crime has diminished, and the health of the troops has improved. I am justified in using the word 'fact,' for though the improvement in both these most desirable objects is not very great, there is a distinct improvement, quite as much as could, I think, have been reasonably expected, and quite sufficient to warrant my exhorting all those interested in the welfare of the British soldier in India to do everything in their power to support the 'Army Temperance Association,' and encourage regimental institutes."

One might have thought that these expressions of the Commander-in-Chief indicated a very marked improvement in the manners and customs of the British soldiery in India from those which were in vogue not many years ago. But an Anglo-Indian newspaper—the Times of India—is scarcely of this opinion. It says:—"Looking at the question narrowly, and from the statistical point of view—as one inevitably does here, where, in dealing with a huge population and an enormous tract, figures gives us the only realisable idea of progress—Army Temperance would seem to have made but little headway." It then "damns" with a little faint praise. For, it continues, "looking a littler closer to the subject, there is no doubt ample justification for the encouraging speech which Sir Frederick Roberts delivered. The moral character of the army has certainly improved." But then follows the cavilling at the figures quoted:—"Coming back to the statistical point of view, it is at first a little disappointing to find that the total number of soldiers on the member-roll of the Association has never exceeded fifteen thousand. Looking at the number of men, the facilities placed at the disposal of the Association, the energy and zeal with which the work is carried on, and the practical absence of anything of a denominational element, it strikes one at first as a very poor return." We fail to see this. It is surely rather a matter of very great congratulation to every friend of the army in India—except, perhaps, the canteen sergeants—that fifteen thousand British soldiers have enrolled themselves in the ranks of temperance. Anglo-Indians who have had any experience of the olden days in India, before Temperance Associations ever troubled the thoughts of Tommy Atkins, will think that there is reason, not for satisfaction only, but for rejoicing at the present state of things as mentioned by Sir Frederick Roberts. In those days the old soldiers who represented the "survival of the fittest" in being able to stand canteen rum or bazaar arrack were really all "seasoned casks," whose first care was when they got hold of a recruit to teach him to drink spirits also. Many—indeed, the majority—of the young fellows sent out in the drafts from England have been accustomed to no stronger drink than the wholesome porter ration allowed to them on board ship during the voyage out. But on arrival at one of the depots in India, where recruits and time-expired soldiers were most foolishly placed together, the latter while waiting for embarkation very soon initiated the youngsters into the secrets of how to make canteen rum and bazaar liquor take the place of the wholesome malt. Amongst these old hands there used to be a decoction made composed of fermented "toddy," bazaar spirit and pounded chillies, which, taken on an empty stomach early in the morning, was supposed to make fit the British soldier for parade and all other fatiguing duties of an Indian summer day. It went by the very appropriate name of "fixed bayonets"—probably from producing a sensation in the throat similar to that which might have been produced by swallowing the bayonets themselves if possible. But the concoction and the concoctors of it have long passed away into the army of shadows, and the recruit landing in India to-day is no longer under the baneful influence of the thirsty time expired toper. Instead of this we learn from an old soldier, Sergeant-Major Dormand, who spoke at the annual meeting of the Temperance Association, that the course pursued in his regiment and several others was as follows. On the arrival of a draft, the recruits were invited to attend a meeting of the regimental branch of the Association, and hear an explanation of the principles of the Association, and the advantages of belonging to it. "As a rule the majority of the recruits joined at once, and though they might after three months resign membership they generally came back at the end of a year." Sir Frederick Roberts paid a high compliment to Sergeant-Major Dormand, of the "Queen's" Regiment, who made this statement, his Excellency saying that for many years he "had been a bright example to, and done splendid work" amongst the soldiers of his own battalion.

But the greatest fault-finders with the Temperance progress which has been made in the British army in India are the fanatical "Teetotalers," who would insist upon Tommy Atkins being a total abstainer, or being excluded from the Association altogether. In combating this aggressive zeal Sir Frederick Roberts has had a most difficult part to play, but he has played it well and successfully. If the water bigots had had their way the roll of members of the Association, whose scant number of fifteen thousand the Times of India regrets, would have been considerably less. But Sir Frederick, by quiet determination, carried his own way that encouragement should be given to temperance without insisting on total abstinence, and that no sectarian influences should be allowed, the organisation to be outside of all religious disputations, but to embrace men of every creed or persuasion. And his Excellency told the admirable result:—

"Those who were the loudest in their objections now see that there is nothing in the constitution of the Association which in any way interferes with total abstinence, and that the only difference between the "Army Temperance Association" and that formerly known as the "Soldiers' Total Abstinence Society" is that men who do not find it necessary to become total abstainers, but earnestly desire to lead temperate lives, are allowed to benefit by the comfort and privileges of the Association so long as they prove themselves worthy of the indulgence, and are prepared to abide by the regulations in force for its good conduct."

It has simply been a triumph of common-sense over prejudice and fanaticism, and the army and the cause of Temperance have both been the gainers.

MR. CAINE during his next trip to Burma should, says the Pioneer, visit the Chin-Lushai Hill Tracts, and see for himself how intemperance obtains among wild tribes that have not yet come under the "demoralising influences" of a civilised excise system. The following story is not without its moral in this connection:—A general officer during the late expedition reported that a Chin Chief of some importance had "come in," but laconically added that the visitor was too drunk to be interviewed. And yet there are no outstills in the wild country to the west of Burma.

COLONIAL emigration from Bengal appears to have been unusually active last year, owing to the small importations of labour into the colonies in recent years, due to the uncertainty of the sugar-cane industry for some time past. To this cause, and more particularly to the reopening of emigration to Natal and the Mauritius, is attributed the increase in the requisitions for the past year. The number of adults despatched was 10,041, compared with 6,544 in the previous year, the districts of Shahabad and Benares having, as usual, contributed the largest number of emigrants. With but one exception, the management of the depôts in Calcutta is described as "all that could be desired." A slight increase in the rates of depôt sickness and mortality is believed to be no more than a natural consequence of a greatly increased depôt population. In every shipment the number of women carried was, we observe, in excess of the prescribed minimum; and in the case of Surinam, it is satisfactory to find that more than half of the women embarked were married. It appears that 5,102 emigrants returned from the different colonies during the past year, against 3,908 in 1888, the percentage of deaths on the voyage among the former being but 2.14. Persons "open to the slightest suspicion of leprosy" are not to be permitted to emigrate, nor are the colonies to be allowed to return emigrants who have contracted the disease during their expatriation. The administration of the estates of deceased emigrants appears to have been satisfactory.

POSTAL PROGRESS IN INDIA.

The official returns relating to the postal service in British India has lately been issued, and below will be found the principal features of interest connected therewith:—

The gross revenue of the Indian Post Office was higher during 1888-89 than it has been before, amounting to Rx. 1,281,540, against Rx. 1,214,196 in 1887-88, while the gross expenditure, which, in the latter year, was Rx. 1,375,215, slightly declined in 1888-89 to Rx. 1,342,452. The number of post-offices has nearly doubled since 1879-80, amounting last year to 7,533. Letter-boxes rose in extent during the same period from 6,426 to 10,067. Considerably less village "post-men," as they are termed, were employed last year than in the four previous years, while, on the other hand, the total strength of the establishment has increased from 30,000 persons in 1879-80 to 41,356 in 1888-89. The length of railways, roads, &c., over which the mails were conveyed shows an almost uninterrupted progress during the last decade, being 68,000, against 58,000 miles, while 2,000 miles were added in 1888-89 to those in existence in the previous year. Some idea of the growth of the service as regards the letter, newspaper, and parcels departments will be gained when it is said that the number of letters, packets, &c., received for delivery in 1879-80 was 142,977,644, whereas in 1888-89 this had risen 293,224,282; into 1887-88 the figures were 274,398,622. The number of paid and service letters received last year was 135,646,541; 27,634,024 unpaid, and 5,246,168 registered letters; the number of postcards dealt with in this way was the largest on record, being 85,914,587, or 449,850,176 since 1879-80. The business in money orders has strikingly increased, in 1886-87 the number received being only 4,821,117, whereas last year it had risen to 6,136,790. The newspaper branch has evidently partaken of the general activity, 21,832,000 papers being received in 1887-88, against 22,696,000 in 1888-89.

The net revenue from the sale of stamps indicates a sensible increase, being Rx. 1,052,310, against Rx. 996,625 in 1887-88. The charges, exclusive of those for non-postal branches, amounted to Rx. 1,005,000, the net postal revenue proper being Rx. 236,536, leaving a deficit, if official postage is not reckoned, of Rx. 46,000. The total of paid telegrams sent last year by Government telegraphs was 2,933,000, value Rx. 434,672, a slight decrease in value of free messages compared with the previous year, being attributed to the transfer of the Government meteorological reports from the free list to the paying list.

GOVERNMENT BANKS IN BRITISH INDIA.

The report on the Government Banks of British India has been published. It shows that the number of depositors and the amount of the balance at the end of each year from 1884-5 to 1888-9 have been steadily progressive. Some idea of the progress made during this period can be obtained when it is said that the number of depositors in all the banks has risen from 243,037 to 382,971, the interest earned from Rs. 15.80.372 to Rs. 25.74.073, while the balance, which, at the end of 1884-5 was Rs. 4.69.70.713, at the close of 1888-89 amounted to Rs. 6.50.00.708. Out of this total the three Presidency banks at Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay had 39,403 accounts open last year, and the interest being Rs. 4.20.256, and the balance Rs. 1.15.01.098. This is a very large falling off from 1884-85, when the accounts numbered 71,671, the interest amounting to Rs. 8.25.869, and the balance to Rs. 2.30.20.054. The affairs of the district banks was taken over by the Post Office at the close of 1885-86, presumably in consequence of the rapid decline of business, the accounts falling in number from 23,695 in 1884-85 to 168 in 1886-87, the interest earned and balances likewise declining in proportion. The twelve railway banks have increased their business from 12,848 depositors in 1887-88 to 14,372 in 1888-89, the interest rising from Rs. 14.299 to Rs. 95.491, and the balance from Rs. 22.96.561 to Rs. 32.81.150. The Post Office banks have also been augmenting both the volume and the value of their transactions, 311,001 depositors, of whom 273,693 are Natives, being now on the books, the balances being Rs. 5,04.88.357 in 1887-88, and Rs. 5.88.64.081 in 1888-89. The military banks, however, do not appear to have shared this prosperity, the number of depositors during the last ten years showing a decrease, and the balance falling from Rs. 14.73.283 to Rs. 13.53.779; the interest was, however, the largest earned for many years, being Rs. 70.430.

A DEPARTURE IN THE INDIGO TRADE.—An important alteration in the method of selling indigo will shortly be made, and which will be of very great advantage to the dyers in this country. Hitherto the planters have disposed of their produce in the Calcutta, Bombay, and Madras markets, where it is generally sold by auction to firms who hold orders from consuming countries. Of late years the quantity coming to London has shown a considerable falling off. In 1884 the total imports amounted to 104,432 cwt., in 1887 they had fallen to 76,698 cwt., while for the past nine months only 68,896 cwt. have arrived, as against 83,041 cwt. in the corresponding period of last year. The principal London brokers, who have been the chief sufferers, determined to induce the planters to consign their indigo direct to the London market, and they have so far succeeded that many owners of the best known brands have already agreed to ship direct to this country instead of selling in the Indian markets. A considerable saving in the cost will thus be effected, for it is estimated that nearly 20 per cent. represents the various commissions or profits which the article has to carry from the time it leaves the producer until it passes into the hands of the consumer. The new departure will also benefit the crop of the country, because buyers from France, Southern Europe, and America will now have to come to London instead of making their purchases in India. The new crop is now arriving in Calcutta to be shipped to this country, and it is estimated that quite five thousand chests in excess of recent years will be on the London market by January.

Second Edition, crown 8vo. cloth, 150 pp. 2s. 6d.
FOUR YEARS IN PARLIAMENT WITH HARD LABOUR. By C. W. RADCLIFFE COOKE, M.P.

What Mr. GLADSTONE says:—"My only complaint is that, once opened, it is difficult to close the volume. I recognise in it an enviable union of fancy, humour, and good sense."—The Right Hon. W. E. GLADSTONE.

Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d. Illustrated.

RUSSIA'S RAILWAY ADVANCE INTO CENTRAL ASIA. Notes of a Journey from St. Petersburg to Samarkand. By GEORGE DOBSON, Author of the Letters in the Times on "The Central Asian Railway."

"Those of our readers who remember the original letters will need no further commendation of our correspondent's accuracy of information and graphic powers of description."—TIMES.

Crown 8vo. 6s.

THE QUEST OF SIR BERTRAND, and other Poems. By R. H. DOMENICHETTI.

"Mr. R. H. Domenichetti, in 'The Quest of Sir Bertrand, and other Poems,' is a maker of ballads of the kind that Coleridge and Scott made popular, and Lewis imitated, more successfully than most of their contemporaries. The poet's diction is quite in the brave old style."—SATURDAY REVIEW.

"There is certainly much promise in Mr. R. H. Domenichetti's 'The Quest of Sir Bertrand, and other Poems,' for which Mrs. Truquair has drawn an effective frontispiece. He has evidently a keen eye for natural beauty, whether in wood, water, or woman."—GRAPHIC.

Demy 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.

CAMP AND STUDIO. By IRVING MONTAGU, late of the Illustrated London News, &c.; Author of "Wanderings of a War Artist." With Portrait, and 102 Illustrations from Sketches by the Author.

"Needless to say he has many tales of horror to relate."—SCOTSMAN.

"There are also some excellent passages relating to the war being carried on at the same time in Europe. But it is in the least known episodes round Kara, Erzeroum, and Trebizond that the author's lively and clever pen finds its best material."—DAILY TELEGRAPH.

LAST NEW VOLUME OF THE "STATESMEN SERIES."
Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

GAMBETTA. By FRANK MARZIALS.

"Both in style and matter, the life of Gambetta is one of the best studies of statesmen that have appeared in the 'Statesmen Series.' Mr. Marzials is evidently master of his subject."—STATESMAN.

"The life of 'Gambetta,' by F. T. Marzials, is a highly interesting book."—EVENING NEWS and POST.

SATURDAY SONGS. By H. D. TRAILL, Author of "Recaptured Rhymes," &c.

"A book of satires not inferior to any which have seen the light since the time of Præd, and not unworthy to be ranked alongside the Anti-Jacobin. . . . Some of the most brilliant of many brilliant verses contributed to the Saturday Review."—ST. JAMES'S GAZETTE.

"They are more than clever enough to deserve collection in a book."—SCOTSMAN.

THREE HUNDRED AND SIXTY-FIVE RECEIPTS, APPROVED BY EXPERIENCE.

BY LUCY JONES.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"Those whom the matter concerns will find a faithful and fertile source of information."—SATURDAY REVIEW.

"Contains a fresh recipe for every day of the year, is clearly printed, and of a handy size. The recipes are clearly set forth, and likely to be of practical assistance to cooks and housewives, since they have all been approved by experience."—THE CATERER.

"A useful little cooking book."—HOME NEWS.

"Miss Lucy Jones' 365 receipts are admirable for their terseness and for the ease with which they can be understood. This handy book is a veritable treasure to young housekeepers."—PUBLIC OPINION.

"The collection as a whole in this handy and useful volume will be highly prized."—BRITISH WEEKLY.

"We could not recommend a better work."—ARMY AND NAVY MAGAZINE.

"A considerable number of the recipes are out of the ordinary run, and those which we have examined in detail appear to be constructed on sound principles."—MANCHESTER GUARDIAN.

"Will be found extremely serviceable."—METROPOLITAN.

Just Published. Demy 8vo. 10s. 6d.

THE PRESIDENTIAL ARMIES OF INDIA.

BY THE LATE

Colonel S. RIVETT - CARNAC.

(Formerly 11th Hussars)

WITH A CONTINUATION AND GENERAL REMARKS ON INDIA.

By the Author of "Our Burmese Wars and Relations with Burma," "Distinguished Anglo-Indians," &c.

"The volume is a graphic, stirring record of the English in India, as shown in the achievement of the armies of the three Presidencies. It is a book that deserves wide popularity."—ECHO.

"An interesting book."—DAILY NEWS.

"It is one of the best historical narratives of the real conquest of India that has ever been written. This is a book with which every Anglo-Indian should be pleased. Page after page it gives us some information we had not before. It lets us see far more, as it were, of the military operations of the Company—of its strength and its ambition—than almost any book of its size has hitherto done."—GLASGOW HERALD.

"A valuable contribution to the history of India, by the late Colonel S. Rivett-Carnac. The book has been edited and completed by the accomplished author of 'Our Burmese Wars and Relations with Burma,' and is very interesting."—THE FREEMAN'S JOURNAL.

"Colonel Laurie has done his part thoroughly and well, and we can cordially recommend this most interesting volume to the consideration of the reading public."—DAILY EXPRESS (Dublin).

"Colonel Carnac's share of the book is confined to the first six chapters, the remainder being furnished by Colonel Laurie. . . . It is the sort of book that every man in India ought to possess, for a reference to its pages would decide many points that are constantly cropping up. . . . The book is worthy of Colonel Carnac's reputation."—TIMES OF INDIA.

BROAD ARROW

AND

ESTABLISHED 1832.

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

Earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

What higher aim can man attain, than conquest over human pair?

JEOPARDY OF LIFE, THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset!! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm. The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—
J. C. ENO.

CAUTION.—Examine each Bottle, and see that the Capsule is marked ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." Without it you have been imposed on by worthless imitation.

OLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS, POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S PATENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.,

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced life they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 21, 1890.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 4th October; from Allahabad and Madras to the 2nd October; and from Calcutta to the 1st October.

THE Viceroy has been spending a few days at Mashobra.

THE Government of Bombay was to assemble at Mahabeshwur on the 20th inst.

THE Government of India has decided to send a punitive expedition into the Lushai country.

THE Zhob Valley troops left Quetta on Sept. 29th. There are no signs that the tribesmen north of the Zhob Valley will offer resistance to Sir G. White's force, but isolated cases of Ghazi fanaticism may occur, such as were encountered in the first expedition, five years ago.

SIR ROBERT SANDEMAN left Quetta on Sept. 29th for Hindubagh on his proposed tour. He is not expected to return to Quetta till the middle or end of November.

THE Nawab of Bhawalpur has asked the Government of India to let his Imperial Service Corps be sent on any frontier expedition which may be starting for war operations this year, in order that they may be rendered more efficient.

THE Maharajah of Ulwar will command his own troops at the parade before the Viceroy on Oct. 27th.

THE Pioneer denies that there is any reason to suspect the Ameer of hostility to the British Government.

THE Cashmere Durbar has unanimously approved of an asylum to contain some fifty lepers being constructed and supported by the State. His Excellency the Viceroy has signified his satisfaction at the step taken by the Cashmere authorities.

THE Assam Railway Company have just struck a promising oil spring in the Lakhimpore District at a depth of 615 feet. The oil overflowed the top of the bore, and all the available barrels on the spot were quickly filled.

A MARBLE bust of Lady Dufferin will be placed in the Dufferin Hospital, Calcutta, and a full-length portrait in the Town Hall, probably during the cold season.

THE Bombay Army headquarters were to be established at Mahabeshwur on the 10th Oct.

THE reward for the capture of Dad Mahommud, Mr. Dalgleish's murderer, was not accepted by Lieut. Bower, the whole of the Rs. 5,000 being divided at his request among the Natives who assisted in the work of tracking the criminal.

ENTERIC fever is very prevalent at Allahabad, hundreds of cases being reported from the city and suburbs, many ending fatally.

THE GOVERNOR OF MADRAS cut the first sod of the East Coast Railway on Oct. 1st.

THE new rules regarding the direct posting of British officers from Sandhurst to the Indian Staff Corps will probably come into force on January 1st, 1892.

THE traffic returns of the Madras Railway for the first half of the current year show the best result that has been obtained since the 1877-78 famine epoch.

MR. THURSTON, during his recent visit to Tuticorin, found the pearl banks there deteriorating in value, and he sees no prospects of any new banks proving sufficiently remunerative.

MR. TOM LEMESURIER has been elected honorary secretary of the Western India Turf Club in place of Brigade-Surgeon Gaye.

DOCTOR TISSOT, Roman Catholic Bishop of Vizagapatam, died on September 27th at Surada, Ganjam District, after an illness of ten days. He was over eighty years of age. He died from heart disease supervening on fever.

THE relief of Changsil has been achieved, but not without opposition and loss. The relieving force was attacked on the 26th ult. by the Lushais while going up the river, and Lieutenant Swinton killed and five sepoys and a boatman wounded, one of the former mortally. The force reached Changsil without further opposition, and found all well there. On the 29th Lieutenant Cole started with 300 men to relieve Dr. Melville and the garrison shut up in Aijal.

THE legislative business of the Simla session will be concluded by October 16th. The Select Committees' Reports on all Bills remaining to be passed will be presented at the next meeting.

BEFORE the close of the current session at Simla the Government of India will probably forward a despatch home to the Secretary of State regarding the age of consent. Their recommendations will follow the general drift of public opinion, which is distinctly in favour of the raising of the age as now laid down in the Statutes.

THE Oudh Talukdars, the Lucknow Bar, and one of the local Mahomedan associations have pronounced against the proposal that revenue appeals should be made to the Board of Revenue instead of the Judicial Commissioner. Their memorials are now under consideration, and a decision upon the points raised will have to be arrived at before the passing of the North-West Provinces Administration Bill through the Legislative Council at Simla.

THE composition of the Factory Acts Commission will be as follows:—Dr. Lethbridge (President), and Raja Piyari Mohan Mukharji, Shapurji, and Mir Mahomed Hussain, members. These gentlemen will be assisted in each province by selected representatives of the mill hands, viz., N. M. Lokhandy, Bombay; Babu Ram Lal Ghose, Bengal; and Mr. Framji Manakji, Cawnpore Woollen Mills, for the N.W.P. The Commission will submit its report by the middle of November.

SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS will be the Umpire-in-Chief at the Attock Camp of Exercise. The other umpires are to be Brigadier-Generals Nairne and Luck, and Colonel Hart, V.C., Director of Army Instruction.

At the suggestion of Raja Amar Singh a leper hospital is to be established in Srinagar at a cost of Rs. 50,000. It will accommodate fifty inmates. Drs. Arthur and Ernest Neve, now working in Srinagar, will be in charge of the hospital, of which all the expenses will be borne by the State.

THE East Indian Railway Company have adopted the fifty-five years' rule in the case of all their officers, leaving, however, power in the hands of their agent to recommend that particular individuals should be granted an extension of service.

A SPOUTING WELL of petroleum has been discovered at Degbri, in Upper Assam, which promises large yields of oil.

THE annual Staff College dinner took place at Simla on Saturday night, Sept. 27th, at the United Service Club, General Elles presiding. Among the guests were Sir Frederick Roberts, Sir George Chesney, and Sir James Browne. The Commander-in-Chief, in responding for the guests, made a short speech, in which he referred in happy terms to the advantages of a Staff College, and the good which it did in providing the army with thoroughly trained officers.

NOTES.

THERE is little news of interest or importance from India this week, either by telegrams or newspapers. The appointments of Sir Charles Elliott as Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, in succession to Sir S. Bayley, and that of Sir Charles Crosthwaite as Public Works Member of the Council, call for little comment. The friends of Mr. Mackenzie rather prematurely nominated him to the Bengal Governorship, but if he gets Burma he will have little to complain of.

FULL particulars about the recent outrages by Northern Lushais show that they were not mere transitory outbursts of savagery, but a deliberate declaration of war was resolved upon long previously. The Lushais fought most persistently with an amount of co-operation, tenacity, and system scarcely looked for among such savages. Our small force had to meet a most determined organisation of the tribes.

A QUETTA telegram, dated Sept. 27th, says that some excitement had prevailed there for the past two days, as the troops could not proceed on the Kidderzai Expedition for want of baggage camels. The Maliks, ordered to supply them, made all sorts of excuses for their non-appearance, but it was found that the camels, 300 in number, had all been hidden away by them. The whole lot were brought into Quetta under escort the previous evening, and two Maliks received twenty-five lashes each for their villainy. The troops left that morning. It appears that the heads of the tribes are determined to annoy the column at every stage of the march, and withhold all requirements asked from them. This will lead to strong measures being adopted, and it is thought a skirmish will probably take place.

COMMENTING on this the Times of India says:—The Zhob Valley, or as it is now to be called the Kidderzai Expedition, has not commenced under favourable auspices. A frontier Malik is not a very easy man to deal with at the best of times, especially a Pooindah Malik, as we suppose those referred to in the Quetta telegram to be. The camel transport for border raids is generally provided by the Pooindahs, a nomad tribe of merchants, who maintain intercourse between Cabul and British India, driving their camels down through the passes in early autumn laden with merchandise, which certain of their number take on to the greater cities of the Empire for sale, returning in the spring with goods suitable for sale in Afghanistan. Meanwhile, the majority of the men and all their families who accompany them remain to tend the camels on the frontier plains beyond the Indus. They prefer to be in British territory, but it must be close to the border. They are, as a rule, ready enough to hire out their camels for expeditions, and, as they on this occasion hid them away, they must have been actuated by one of two motives—either they were opposed to the expedition, or they were afraid of retaliatory attacks from the tribes in the Zhob Valley when they passed through after the expedition was over. In either case flogging would do very little good, for they are almost insensible to pain, and might desert at an awkward moment.

SOME of the tribes on the part of the Afghan frontier affected by our survey operations are, the Lahore paper hears, much exercised in mind, owing to news having been received to the effect that the survey party, which is shortly expected to arrive, will be accompanied this time by two companies of Native regiments from Sialkot and Rawalpindi. The information had been conveyed by some Sepoys who went to their homes on the frontier on leave, and are said to have warned their neighbours not to interfere with the survey party. On the previous occasion some of the frontier bukmashos did all they could to check the progress of the survey, and also fired on the coolies.

The sanguinary exercise of power by the Goa authorities 01311, thinks the Indian Spectator, once more to bring home to the Indians the blessing of Pax Britannica. The Portuguese community of India enjoy, it is believed, the Parliamentary franchise of electing a Deputy of their own to represent their interests in the Imperial Assembly at Lisbon; but, from the facts which have come out, it may seem that the blessing is quite of a doubtful character. The administrators of the country under Portuguese sway would not allow a representative to be elected who was not disposed to represent their side, or would use high-handedness even if their wish was to be crossed. Military force was brought to bear on those who wished to exercise the rights of free citizenship, the public Press was gagged, and the purpose of the rulers was accomplished by means, fair or foul. In British India we have everything differently managed. The utmost liberty of speech and action is enjoyed by all, and municipal and other franchises are given, not for the purpose of converting them into an instrument of torture to coerce the people into unwilling compliance with the fond wishes of the authorities. Yet we have representatives of different shades of political thought whom nothing short of violent changes would satisfy. The election mêlée at Margao ought not to be without its lesson to the political malcontents under the wing of the British Raj.

OWING to the growing tendency of attacks upon the character and conduct of Government officials, the Government of India has ruled that an officer must not have recourse to the Courts for vindication of his public acts or of his character as a public functionary from defamatory attacks without the special permission of the Government he is serving under. When the local Government has given leave for institution of proceedings it has also to decide whether the circumstances of the case are such that costs of the case should be borne by Governments, or whether the officer should be left to carry on the prosecution at his own expense. In the event of the case turning in the officer's favour the local Government has the further power of deciding whether the whole or any part of the costs should be made up to him by Government. Thus the matter is entirely within the competence and discretion of the Provincial Governments.

THE result of the Chartered Bank case, writes the Calcutta commercial correspondent of the Pioneer, has produced a feeling akin to consternation in business circles here. From Mr. Justice Prinsep's ruling that, in order to constitute the offence of criminal embezzlement, it must be shown that the accused person has misappropriated a specified sum on one particular date, it was evident from the very beginning of the trial that the prosecution would certainly fail to establish their case. If this ruling be good law nearly every merchant's firm in Calcutta might be robbed by its Native cashier or by one of its Native collecting sircars, and the thief would run very little risk of a criminal conviction, as it would be practically impossible to actually prove the embezzlement of a specific sum on any particular date. If Mr. Prinsep's law be good law, it is urgently necessary that the law be promptly changed to give honest people the protection they have a right to expect against dishonest employes who may be willing to avail themselves of the peculiar system of trade in the East to rob their employers.

SOME remarkable facts as to income-tax collections are, according to the Pioneer, forthcoming from the Punjab. During the year 1889-90 it appears that the amount brought in increased by over a lakh, and in some districts the rise in the realisations has been simply stupendous. In Umballa, for instance, the collections now show an increase of 900 per cent. since the first institution of the tax, and of 350 per cent. on the previous year's figures. Compared to this, as the Government observes, "an increase of 125 per cent. in Amritsar, and an increase of nearly 150 per cent. in Ludhiana, looks small." And there is no reason to think that the topmost point has even been approached. The circumstances of the Punjab are certainly exceptional, and it may be taken for granted that a good deal of this rapid rise is due to nothing more than the notoriously slack state of the revenue administration of the province a few years ago. Much leeway has in consequence to be made up in order to reach the point which other Governments made at the first attempt. Yet to a certain expansion is a common feature of the income-tax administration in every province; and it must be admitted that the more the revenue grows the more the tax is justified.

A NATIVE paper writes:—"Has the Babu any redeeming quality calculated to soften the feelings of the masters of the country towards him? If he has it is time that it should be told. Bengalis, expelled from parts of India, write to us angrily. They have been deprived of their means of livelihood, and they have no chance to procure it anywhere in the country. They write angrily to us to say that the National Congress has ruined them! One writes from Burma. The Bengali can fight if he will only be given the opportunity. He will fight better than others, because he is sober and intelligent. Brutal ferocity is oftentimes mistaken for courage, and as the Bengali is gentle and cultured in his habits he is put down for 'a coward.' A Bengali can be made a ferocious beast if placed within suitable surroundings. A Bengali whose letter appeared in the National Paper the other day is at present a Lieutenant in the army of the Republic of Brazil. How he got to South America Heaven knows! This man wanted to establish a colony of his own in the wilds of South America. He describes how he shot Indian men and women, and how he was at last taken prisoner, and succeeded in effecting his escape almost miraculously. When the Bengalis offered to serve Government as volunteers they knew what they were about. But the Babus were not trusted. This, however, disproves the theory that they are good for nothing. Placed as the Bengalis are they are beyond the influence of the Russians. Bengal alone is quite capable of maintaining the British Government against all comers."

THE split in the ranks of the Uncovenanted Service Organisation in India threatens to widen. The Central Committee at Calcutta does not approve of the action of the Simla Committee in passing the resolutions it did, having reference to the London Committee, so a series of counter resolutions have been voted condemning these. The Calcutta Committee maintains that the Simla body acted against the constitution of the Association, by which the entire management of its affairs was to be in the hands exclusively of the Central Committee, an elected and responsible body. It is also stated that the Simla declaration was "ill advised and inopportune."

COMMENTING on this, the Pioneer says:—" 'Ill-advised and inopportune' evidently mean that the Central Committee considers that the Simla Resolutions may have the effect of alienating some of the prominent supporters of the movement in London, and that, too, before the matters rising out of the Parliamentary inquiry have been closed as between the Secretary of State and the Government of India. On the other hand, it is perfectly clear that the Simla representatives, whether they acted within their powers or not, must have known that their Resolutions were not likely to please the London Committee, but that they considered that a protest was necessary against the tendencies visible in the management of the movement. There is a good deal to be said in support of this view, and there will now be a strong temptation to say it. But in many cases it is better to be silent than to prove oneself in the right, and this is probably one of them. It would be unfortunate if the split were carried deeper by a warfare of Resolutions between the different Committees, when the important thing is that the Association, as a whole, should continue to present a united front."

MR. KIERNANDER is likely to continue to officiate as Accountant-General in Bengal for some time.

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, OCT. 18.

Sir Charles Elliott succeeds Sir S. Bayley as Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal.

OCT. 19.

Sir Charles Crosthwaite succeeds Sir C. Elliott as Public Works member of the Council. It is believed that Mr. Mackenzie, Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces, will be transferred to Burma, and will be succeeded by Mr. A. P. MacDonnell, Home Secretary.

The Viceroy leaves Simla on Tuesday, and goes first to Patiala, where he reviews the Imperial war service troops of that State, numbering about 3,000.

The Zhob force reached its first objective—Thanispa—on the 15th inst. in two columns. The first column traversed a comparatively easy country, via the Kaisar Valley, which was found to offer a good railway route from Apozai to Chaman, turning the Amran Range on the north. The second column marched through a wild and difficult country by successive narrow and tortuous defiles. No opposition was offered. Despite the great heat and the trying marches the percentage of sickness was low.

EXPLORATION IN TIBET AND CHINA.

ST. PETERSBURG, OCT. 18.

According to the last advices received here of the expedition to China undertaken by Prince Henry of Orleans and M. Bonvalot, the French explorers, after encountering many difficulties from having failed to provide themselves with the necessary permission from the Chinese authorities, had reached the Kuku-Noor district, whence they proposed to make their way through Eastern Tibet to Barthang. They hoped to be able subsequently to travel right through China from Barthang to Shanghai, but should obstacles arise to prevent this, the expedition would leave China by way of Mongolia.

Another expedition on a smaller scale, conducted by the French explorer, Joseph Martin, already known as having made a remarkable journey through Siberia, lately reached Siu-Tcheu, in Western China. M. Martin, who has exclusively scientific objects in view, is only accompanied by a Native staff, who often give him great trouble, and are at times even dangerous, owing to their insubordinate spirit.

OBITUARY.

—o—

COLONEL HENRY WALPOLE TULLOCH, late Madras Army, died suddenly at Talbot-road, Bayswater, on the 14th inst., at the age of seventy-seven.

MAJOR JAMES FREDERICK REYNE, late 37th (North Hampshire) Regiment, and late of Alverstoke, died suddenly on the 10th inst. at 8, Sunderland-terrace, W., at the age of fifty-six years. The deceased served with the 37th Regiment in the Indian campaign of 1857-8, including the first attempt to relieve Arrah, under Captain Dunbar, actions of Atrowlea and Koelsa, defence of Azimghur from 25th March to 15th April, 1858, pursuit of Koer Sing and actions of 17th and 20th April, capture of Jugdespore, actions of 17th, 18th, and 20th October, 1858, and subsequent pursuit (medal).

THE STRATHNAIRN MEMORIAL.—The Mansion House Fund for providing a memorial in London of the late Field-Marshal Lord Strathnairn is now approaching a total of £3,000. Among the later donors are the following:—The Rajah of Mandi, Rs. 1,000; the Maharajah of Kotah, Rs. 100; the Marquis of Lothian, £10 10s.; the Earl of Morton, £10; Mr. J. D. Allcroft, £10 10s.; Lord Templemore, £5; General Sir Henry Rawlinson, £5 5s.; General Sir Dighton Probyn, £5; Alderman Sir James Whitehead, £5 5s.; Mr. ex-Sheriff Burt, £5 5s.; and General Sir C. G. Arbuthnot, £5.

THE jute crops in Bengal is expected to be a good average one. The crop has suffered from rain in Nuddea, Mymensingh, Purneah, and parts of Jessore and Fureedpore, and in them will be somewhat less than expected. The total exports from Calcutta last year was 8,768,974 cwt., and an increase of 20 per cent. on this quantity should be available for export in the present year.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

PROPOSED REORGANISATION OF THE POLICE.

(Pioneer.)

In the examination of the statistics recently furnished by the Local Governments the conclusion was forced on the Government of India that the police undoubtedly required to be considerably improved. What is the cause of failure? Wherein lies the remedy? A reference to the history of police organisation shows that ever since the issue of G.O. No. 3,010 of August 3rd, 1867, there has been a regular and systematic falling off in the material from which the District Superintendent has been recruited. That Resolution was the first step towards lowering the status of a service which ought in the police interests rather to have been raised than lowered. As the present state of affairs is the natural result of the action of the Government in 1867 in the matter of the recruitment of the heads of the Police Department, so the future of police reform turns on the question of an efficient staff of District Superintendents. Obviously the true remedy lies in obtaining in the best market the best available material. First improve the head, and then you may reasonably expect the other members of the "body police" to work properly. You can no more expect intelligent and satisfactory work to filter downwards from inefficient higher grades to the lower grades than you can expect water to run uphill. The system of appointing young men purely by patronage and promoting of old inspectors has proved a failure. Public interests can no longer be sacrificed to private patronage. The police as a department is as important as either the Forest, the Public Works, or the Accounts Departments; and the work demanded of a District Superintendent nowadays requires as much brains, energy, and application as the work of revenue and judicial officers. A radical change is demanded. Why should the police not be made a special branch for the whole of India, and recruits obtained by competitive examination in England, for which Natives should be eligible as they are for the Civil Service examinations? Reorganisation on this principle need not be costly. Instead of offering thirty appointments a-year to the Civil Service, let the Government offer fifty, or as many as may be necessary, for obtaining the requisite number of police recruits annually. The first thirty would obtain the Civil Service appointments, the last twenty Police Assistant Superintendentships. The pay of the police appointments to be maintained as at present, with the exception hereinafter suggested; the leave rules to be the Civil Service Leave Rules; and a sterling pension of £500 a-year after twenty-five years' service—this pension to be subscribed for by the recipient and to represent "deferred pay." To allow of this the present pay might be raised 6, 7, or 8 per cent., as on actuarial inquiry may be found necessary, and this percentage deducted as a monthly subscription towards future pension. The drain on the Indian revenues on account of pensions paid and spent out of the country is heavy. It would in every way be better to pay Europeans at a slightly higher rate during their time of service in India, and call upon them to secure themselves their pensions by deductions from their pay. The sooner this principle is introduced for all the services the better.

BENGAL.

(October 1.)

A DACCA correspondent of a Calcutta contemporary tells this story:—The following is an official communication from a Government servant not a hundred miles from Dacca to his superior officer:—"So long I did not report as one or two tigers used to come in the night, but to-day nine tigers came near my station, and crossed the line after walking on it. We, six men, stood in the station and cried out, 'Tigers, tigers,' but the tigers cared very little, so may I expect to get one gun for safety." This touching appeal for help did not result in the applicant being supplied with a gun, but a sporting quartet set out to the Babu's relief, and in one day accounted for one out of the nine tigers, a fine tigress, measuring 9ft. 6in. That there are more in the vicinity is certain, and there is no reason to doubt the veracity of the Babu, who declares that there were nine of the beasts at one time; but the jungle is so dense that fifty of the beasts might hide so as to make it a difficult matter to bag one of them. It was by the merest fluke that we were fortunate enough to get the one we did, though I should mention that we had forty elephants with which to beat the jungle. However, the other eight remain for our next excursion.

LADY DUFFERIN AND THE CALCUTTA NAVAL VOLUNTEERS.—The Commander of the Naval Volunteers, we understand, has received an exceedingly kind autograph letter from Lady Dufferin, regarding the efficiency of, and the excellent work done by, the Naval Volunteers since their conversion to a Naval Corps. In referring to their printed manual, she writes:—"Not only will the magazine be of interest to the Naval Volunteers themselves, but will show others what they are doing and have done for the service of their country." This letter, coming as it does from such a distinguished quarter, must be very cheering to the corps, which can muster nearly two hundred and fifty sons of the old soil; and it will doubtless stimulate them to increased efforts during the drill season, which is now at hand. It should also induce others to join the ship's company, whose muster-roll is always open for fresh names. "Step out, lads, the ladies are looking at us," used to be said by the first commander of the battery; and now that it is known that the ladies do really take a lively interest in the corps, there is little doubt that the season 1890-91 will prove the most successful of all for the Calcutta Naval Volunteers. We wish the indefatigable commander of the corps and his boys every success in their work, and congratulate them on the praises they have so well earned.—Englishman.

THE CHARTERED BANK CASE.—We are informed that the Advocate-General has, on being consulted in reference to the Chartered Bank case, given his opinion that Shama Churn Sen could again be prosecuted on other charges arising from transactions connected with the subject of the last prosecution. This opinion has been forwarded to the directors of the bank in England, but any steps that may be taken in the matter will depend on their decision, which will shortly be received.—Statesman.

MADRAS.

(October 2.)

It is believed that the Czarewitch will be the guest of Lord Connemara at Madras for a short time during his tour.

News has reached Madras that Mrs. Dr. Mary Scharlieb, wife of Mr. W. M. Scharlieb, late Second Presidency Magistrate, has been appointed Physician to her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales. Mrs. Scharlieb received her early medical education in the local Medical College, and afterwards graduated with distinction in the London University.

BOMBAY.

(October 4.)

THE Government of Bombay will assemble at Mahableshwar on the 20th inst.

MR. T. WALKER, C.S., acts as Assistant Judge and Sessions Judge, Ahmedabad.

MR. H. L. HERVEY, C.S., Assistant Collector, Kanara, has been allowed special leave of absence on urgent private affairs for six months.

MR. P. REYNOLDS, M.Inst.C.E., Executive Engineer, 1st Grade, has been allowed furlough for six months on urgent private affairs.

SURGEONS C. G. W. Lowdell, H. B. Briggs, M.B., W. P. Carson, M.B., and A. S. Falkner, F.R.C.S., having completed twelve years' service, have been promoted Surgeons-Major.

MR. NANABHOY B. JEEJEEBHoy has now, under the provisions of the Hon. Byramjee Jeejeebhoy Trust Settlement, 1872, formally assumed the name of Byramjee Jeejeebhoy.

AMONGST the passengers who arrived here from Europe by the mail steamer on Monday were Lieut.-Colonel Lord William Beresford, Military Secretary to the Viceroy; Capt. P. Brazier Creagh, Aide-de Camp to H.E. Lord Lansdowne; Dr. Lethbridge, and Sir E. Buck.

MR. EDGELOW, of the firm of Messrs. Macfarlane, Edgelow and Hemming, has, we hear, been retained on behalf of the Cambay villagers charged with rioting, and proceeds at once to Cambay to confer with his clients with a view to instructing counsel.

CAPTAIN H. D. M. MINCHIN, Station Staff Officer, Ahmednugger, has been appointed to be Cantonment Magistrate at Ahmednugger, in addition to his military duties, vice Captain J. Davies, transferred to the Political Department.

THE Honourable the Chief Justice and Judges of Her Majesty's High Court of Judicature have been pleased to sanction the closing of the High Court, Appellate Side, and all Civil Courts subordinate to the High Court on 25th, 26th, and 27th February, 1891, in order that the establishments of the Courts may be employed in aiding the Census operations.

A VERY pleasant gathering took place at "Malabar House" on Tuesday afternoon, when Lady Thompson entertained a number of Native and European ladies. Some of the Native ladies played selections on the piano in a very good style. Mrs. Uloth also played several pieces in her usual excellent style. Mrs. Squires and Mrs. Macbeth sang a beautiful duet, and Mrs. Turner sang and Miss Gostling recited. Everyone present seemed to enjoy themselves, and the kind hostess has every reason to be satisfied with the success of her purdah party.

THE following is a summary of the Bombay Season report for the past week :—Rain throughout the Presidency proper, except Kaira, Baroda, and Kattywar ; generally slight. More wanted for standing early crops or sowing of late crops in parts of Kattywar, Ahmedabad, Panch Mahals, and of all districts of the Deccan and Southern Mahratta Country. Standing crops suffering from drought in three talukas of Shikarpore, two of Nassik, and two of Ahmednugger ; damaged by blight, rats, locusts or other insects in parts of Kurrachee, Hyderabad, Shikarpore, Upper Sind Frontier and Dharwar ; otherwise good. Harvesting of early and sowing of late crops generally progressing. Fodder insufficient in parts of Nassik, Poona, Ahmednugger, and Dharwar. Agricultural stock healthy, except in parts of Nassik.

PROFESSOR R. G. OXENHAM will propose at the next meeting of the Syndicate of the Bombay University that an honorary degree of LL.D. be conferred on Principal Wordsworth prior to his expected retirement from India in December next. As Mr. Wordsworth will, in all probability, be going away before the annual Convocation takes place in the early part of the year, a special Convocation would have to be held for the conferring of the Degree. The Native papers have of late been full of suggestions and recommendations regarding the recognition of Mr. Wordsworth's long and meritorious services as the head of the Elphinstone College ; and it is expected, therefore, that the recommendation of the Syndicate for a special honour being conferred on that gentleman will be adopted by every member of the Senate. It may be mentioned that the University of Bombay conferred a similar honour on Lord Ripon, the late Viceroy and Governor-General of India, on his retirement from office in the year 1884.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES AND PUNJAB.

THE cricket match Simla v. Outstations was won by the former, the score being, Simla 160 and 143 ; Outstations 123 and 68.

THE Oudh Talukdars, the Lucknow Bar, and one of the local Mahomedan associations have pronounced against the proposal that revenue appeals should be made to the Board of Revenue instead of the Judicial Commissioner. Their memorials are now under consideration, and a decision upon the points raised will have to be arrived at before the passing of the North-West Provinces Administration Bill through the Legislative Council at Simla.

THE number of snakes killed in the Punjab during the quarter ending June 30th, 1890, was 5,363, against 15,686 in the corresponding quarter of 1889, a remarkable falling-off which is not explained. The number of deaths from snake-bite also decreased from 168 to 127, a corresponding decrease being recorded in the amount of rewards paid for the destruction of these reptiles, the figures being Rs. 873, against Rs. 1,968 in 1889.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS will be Umpire-in-Chief at the Attock Camp of Exercise. The other umpires are to be Brigadier-Generals Nairne and Luck, and Colonel Hart, V.C., Director of Army Instruction.

AN improvement in the system of military umpiring will be made during the manoeuvres about Attock. Instead of umpires being attached permanently to each of the opposing forces, they will be assembled in Headquarters Camp, and be posted from time to time to particular divisions or brigades, their duties being clearly defined on each occasion on which they move out in this way. Their sympathies will not be enlisted on any particular side, and their decision will consequently be more likely to give satisfaction to all parties if such a thing is possible in mimic warfare.

A TEMPORARY bridge of boats will be thrown across the Cabul river at Khund during the Attock manoeuvres.

THE first tour of General Luck, Inspector-General of Cavalry, is as follows :—Sialkot, October 19th ; Jhelum, 25th ; Rawalpindi, 30th ; Nowshera, November 7th ; Attock Camp, November 13th to December 4th ; Meerut, 6th ; Goona, 17th ; Mhow, 22nd ; Secunderabad Camp, January 4th to 24th ; and Bangalore, 26th. From Bangalore General Luck goes to Madras, and then by sea to Calcutta. On completion of his inspections in April, he will take leave home for three months, or for six, if the exigencies of the service permit it.

It is likely that when the present incumbents vacate the posts, the Inspector Generalships of Artillery and Cavalry in India will be filled by officers of the full rank of Major-General. The importance of the work to be done is held to be a justification for this, as Inspectors-General have to deal with very senior officers commanding cavalry regiments or a group of batteries in a district. A Colonel with the rank of Brigadier-General only may find himself criticising officers senior to him in the Army, and though this may occur in the case of Brigadiers commanding second class districts, it is considered advisable to avoid the possibility of a friction when an officer has to inspect troops in every part of India. It has been suggested that an Inspector-General of Cavalry shall be chosen from the British and Indian service alternately.

THE Inspector-General of Artillery starts on his tour from Simla on the 20th October, meeting the Commander-in-Chief at Mhow.

A NEW departure will be made this trooping season by employing the Indian Marine steamers Clive and Canning for conveyance of troops between Bombay and England. The reason for this is that the increase of the British garrison in India has been followed by an expansion of reliefs which the four troopships annually employed are unequal to meet ; consequently, the Secretary of State and the Admiralty have sanctioned the employment of the Clive and Canning. The former carrying 800 men will make three trips each way, while the latter will carry 700 men home, and return with a draft of a similar strength.

THE Government of India have sanctioned the extension of the free issue of 2,000 Martini-Henry cartridges per British regiment, 1,200 rounds per Native corps, and 500 rounds per battery of Royal Artillery, to the Madras and Bombay Rifle Associations ; but observe that as Bengal only grants Rs. 5,000 pecuniary assistance to the Bengal Presidency Rifle Association the grant of Rs. 5,429 allowed to Bombay should be based on the relative strength of the two Associations, and that the annual grant-in-aid may in the case of Bombay be reasonably reduced to Rs. 3,000. This is rather hard on Bombay, considering that the grant has been an annual one for the past fifteen years before Bengal thought of giving aid at all.

THE accident to Mr. Hutt, of the Seaforth Highlanders, has terminated fatally. As far as is at present known, says the Civil and Military Gazette, Mr. Hutt was shooting by himself on the hill near Chakoti, on the road into Cashmere. He appears to have lost his balance and fallen down a khud. This occurred on the 22nd ult., and on the 25th he was brought in by coolies to Hathan, from which place he came on in a tonga to Murree, arriving at Lady Roberts's Home for Officers about midday on the 26th. The same afternoon it was found necessary to perform an operation before the arm could be replaced, and from the first but slight hopes were entertained of his recovery. He died some time on Sunday morning, and was buried on Monday.

ARRIVAL OF THE TROOPSHIP SERAPIS

Her Majesty's troopship Serapis, Captain C. P. G. Hickr, arrived at Bombay on Sunday evening (October 3.) from Portsmouth, which she left on the 3rd September, calling at Malta on the 11th, Port Said on the 16th, and Suez on the 17th. She brought with her 49 officers, 13 ladies, 11 children, 1,040 men, 68 women and 74 children, of the 16th Lancers, 2nd Oxford Light Infantry, 2nd Royal Munster Fusiliers, 5th Lancers, 2nd Dragoons, and other regiments. During the voyage the wife of a bandmaster died. The Serapis experienced fine weather throughout the journey. The following are the names of the saloon passengers :—

SIR RICHARD BURTON.

(Standard.)

A remarkable personality has disappeared with the passing away of Sir Richard Burton. For several years the famous traveller had been in failing health. The drains of Trieste, he declared more than once, were killing him, and at one time it was hoped either that the Foreign Office might see fit to remit the full term which he was required to serve before being entitled to his well-deserved pension, or else that a pension from the Civil List might enable the closing days of his life to be passed in a climate better suited to the constitution of a man who had nearly completed his seventh decade than the Adriatic Consulate to which he had been appointed. In vain the explorer, who had been at one time endowed with a constitution of iron, who had braved Zanzibar and Fernando Po, Bahia and Santos, Somali Land and Tanganyika, the filth of a pilgrim caravan and the horrors of a Scindian campaign, sought health in the brief intervals of the vacations which his official duties permitted. Tangier, Lucerne, and Algiers were in turn resorted to, and for a time he hoped that he might rally to do some Oriental translation work which he meditated. But in the course of last spring it was evident to those who saw the once strong man that his days were numbered. His eyes, still fierce and as penetrating as ever, were sunk in hollow cavities. His body was emaciated. He could barely walk without support, and his hands were thin almost to transparency. Still he held on with the dogged tenacity which was a part of his character, and only a few weeks ago he passed several days with Mr. Stanley in a Swiss holiday haunt, where they happened to meet for the first time. But the rally was merely temporary, and he returned to Trieste only to die. As years go, Sir Richard Burton was, it is true, not young; though in the vigour, the vehemence indeed, with which he vented his indignation over any meanness, or wrong, or littleness, he was to the last as youthful as when he discovered Lake Tanganyika, or visited, in the disguise of a Moslem pilgrim, Mecca and Medinah. If, however, the work he went through, the hardships he endured, and the amazing amount of learning which he acquired and gave forth to the world are to be taken as any measure of his life, Sir Richard lived double the term of most ordinary men. Traveller, soldier, Orientalist, anthropologist, antiquary, hunter, falconer, poet, naturalist, linguist, he was distinguished in many ways, and the master of many arts. As a swordsman he had few equals. He wrote, indeed, a standard treatise on his favourite weapon, and gloried in the title of "Maitre d'Armes" by which he described himself on the title page.

But few who knew Burton best as an explorer—one who told his unvarnished tale in language which seldom lacked anything in the way of plain speaking—were prepared to learn that as a poet he might have gained lasting fame. His English translation of Camoëns' "Lusiad" ranks amongst the finest in any tongue, and the songs with which his wonderful text of the "Thousand Nights and a Night" are studded were, like the great portion of that translation, his own work. In reality, when he and a long-dead fellow-officer meditated that version, the chief share which Burton proposed to allot to himself was the versification of the Arabic poetry, and it was only the death of his friend that compelled him to take upon his own shoulders a burden which he bore so bravely. For when all is said that needs to be said—and it may be admitted that the book contains much that might have been left out—the sixteen volumes which contain his rendering of the famous "Arabian Nights" constitute the only edition that scholars can ever think of consulting. A man so many-sided cannot be fittingly characterised in the obituary of a passing hour. Volumes have, indeed, been occupied with the details of his chequered career, and it was, we understand, his intention to have written an autobiography, which, we may trust, is far enough advanced to allow of his widow offering it to the world. It may be taken as an amusing instance of how men's callings are sometimes made for them, with the faintest insight into their true bent, that Burton's father, an Indian officer, instead of sending the lad to serve "John Company" in the stirring times of 1840, entered him at Oxford with the object of duly qualifying for a curacy. Preaching was, however, little in young Burton's line; and so, forty-eight years ago, after a short undergraduate course, which was not wasted—for he was to the end of his life a good Latin scholar—he landed in India as an ensign just in time to miss the Afghan War, and, it may be, the massacre in the Khyber Pass. But he was not long in finding his true métier, as an explorer, of the Neigherry Hills and a member of the Scinde Survey under Sir Charles Napier, whose upright character obtained for him the young officer's warm affection. In these years no knowledge came wrong to Burton. He studied everything, and tried to master every dialect. A furlough when he was just thirty was utilised in a pilgrimage to Mecca and Medinah, and soon afterwards he entered upon that career as an African explorer which, either singly or in conjunction with Speke, entitles him to be ranked with the greatest of travellers in the Dark Continent. As an interlude to exploration, he served for a time in the Crimea, and again resumed his African pioneering, with such happy results that he discovered Tanganyika, now one of the most familiar of all the great lakes of that continent. Salt Lake City, then little known, was visited and described by him in the course of a journey across the American Continent, in a day when the Pacific Railroad was scarcely meditated; and subsequently he paid a visit to the King of Dahomey, with the double purpose of seeing how he conducted his "customs" and of persuading Gelele to abandon his evil ways. Various terms as Consul in Africa, Assyria, and South America enabled his roving instinct to find outlets, while the intervals of travel and official toil were occupied in preparing for the Press the thirty-six volumes, and those papers which, if collected, would amount to almost as great a bulk, in which the result of his varied observations were recorded.

It is no depreciation of others to say that had Burton founded his claims to distinction on almost any one of the many subjects which he took up he would have made good his right to be the rival of those who had confined themselves to a single speciality. Yet, except from the few who were most intimate with him, and knew how, under a sometimes surly exterior, there lay a heart of great goodness, and a mind of remarkable power, he died without obtaining that ample appreciation which he so richly merited. While honours of every description were being lavished on African travellers who had accomplished not a tithe of what he had done while they were still boys, the discoverer of the East African lakes remained the plain Captain Burton he was when that notable achievement was put on record. The author of a shelf-full of books, not one of which is worthless, he died without any University doing itself the honour of asking to enrol him among its doctors. Four years ago he was knighted, though not until our columns recalled to the recollection of those with whom lie the bestowal of ribbons and crosses the unworthy neglect with which he had so long been treated. Still, for these slights, Burton had himself not a little to blame. Hating, with a long-enduring though short-suffering hatred, everything in the shape of sham and pretence, he made hosts of enemies by the too often indiscreet terms in which he expressed his contempt for men in authority. No one was quicker in discerning merit, or warmer in appreciating it. His friendships for those he liked were firm and speedy; but the moment those keen eyes of his discerned, under the guise of specious talk or showy externals, an ignoramus or a fool, he quite forgot the French proverb to the effect that though it is well to know everything, all things are not worth the telling. This freedom of speech, frequently repeated, soon made him unpopular at Whitehall, and rendered his promotion slow, and finally stationary. He knew his weakness, but instead of railing at the neglect with which the official world treated him, he quite acknowledged that he met with the fate which he deserved. But, as he always added, the luxury of speaking the truth was to him far sweeter than the most luxurious sinecure which an ungrateful country had to bestow.

IN the matter of shooting licenses in the Government closed forests in the N.W.P., divisional Forest officers have been authorised to issue permits to sportsmen to shoot dangerous carnivora in Government reserves during the fire protection season. Fees will be charged.

THE BENGAL GOLDFIELDS.

(FROM A "TIMES" CORRESPONDENT.)

As some allusion was recently made in one of your Calcutta correspondent's communications to the excitement ruling in Calcutta over the Bengal goldfields, your readers may be curious to know on what grounds their title of goldfields is based. A short sketch of their history as gathered from the pages of Capital and other Calcutta journals will probably be acceptable.

About two years ago, during the construction of the Bengal-Nagpore Railway (since completed), one of the railway engineers, named Birrell, who had previously been a gold miner in Australia, was struck with the geological formation of the country through which the railway was passing, and came to the conclusion that it was a goldfield. Birrell, in conjunction with a Calcutta stockbroker named Martin, decided to form a syndicate to buy up the land—extending to some twenty square miles—known to the Natives as the "Sonapet," or "Womb of Gold" Valley, from gold having been found there from time immemorial. Through fear of being forestalled in the purchase they were unwilling to divulge any particulars of their supposed goldfield's whereabouts, and consequently experienced great difficulty in securing subscribers, and eventually found the public could only be tempted to embark in such a pig-in-the-poke concern by getting fully paid-up ten-rupee shares for one rupee. In this way, at intervals up to last spring, 30,000 shares were privately subscribed for by a syndicate consisting of rather less than thirty members, and, as Mr. Bosworth Smith, F.G.S., had meantime surveyed the ground, and issued a most glowing report on its geological formation, and the number of likely looking reefs it contained, the later issue of shares gradually rose in price, the last of all being taken up at the rate of five rupees as against one originally for a ten-rupee share. The scheme was kept comparatively dark till early this year, when it got noised abroad, and a regular gamble in the scrip ensued, which culminated in April last, when the shares, for no earthly reason whatever, were run up as high as thirty rupees each, a large number changing hands at prices ranging from twenty to thirty rupees. This inflation in prices was not destined to last long, however, and got its death-blow on the retention of Mr. Harris, of mining celebrity, to report on the syndicate's property. Mr. Harris sent, as his advance agent, Mr. Hepburn, of Ballarat, a miner of great experience, who was then working at the Mysore mines, to open up the ground; but, unfortunately, a land dispute arose, and the Courts stopped all work till the title to ownership should be definitely settled. For this reason next to nothing was done, and Mr. Harris arrived to find the ground practically untouched. Notwithstanding this, he selected and assayed some of the surface quartz and clay, with such discouraging results, besides calling in question Mr. Birrell's statement that a nugget had been discovered there, that the shares immediately dropped down to four and five rupees, with no buyers. To cap this it was suddenly discovered, whether by purchasers at maximum prices history recordeth not, that the syndicate was illegal, owing to its not having been registered, and that all transactions in its shares were practically null and void. This was rather a blow to the subscribers; but, nothing daunted, the syndicate issued fresh scrip to double the original amount, thereby increasing the number of shares to 60,000. With the fresh funds thus acquired, prospecting was pushed on within the reefs indicated by Mr. Harris on his visit, with the result that private assays made by Mr. Hepburn showed as much as 6 ozs. of gold to the ton of quartz, while ½ oz. is calculated to cover all expenses. On this result being known, the managing agents, Messrs. F. W. Heilgers and Co., who till then had declined to launch what might prove to be a bogus concern, and had offered to retire in favour of any first-class firm willing to run the risk, decided to form a company, the whole of the shares in which were immediately privately subscribed for, and thus was formed the Sonapet Gold Proprietary Company (Limited). The capital consists of 12 lakhs of rupees of ordinary shares of one rupee each (of which the original syndicate got six lakhs in shares for their 60,000 ten-rupee shares) and 12,000 founders' shares, allotted proportionately, and entitled to one-half the profits over 25 per cent. per annum. The shares in this company were quoted at about Rs. 2 each by last mail.

Early this year, when the Sonapet syndicate first began to be talked of, the Chota-Nagpore Syndicate, not to be behind-hand, acquired the hilly country to the north, east, and west of the Sonapet Valley, and, as these two concerns are to be incorporated into one, the position of the joint concern should be a pretty strong one. The Dumra Company later on acquired the land immediately to the south, and may be looked upon as a genuine concern, in so far as the actual possession of land is concerned. In addition to the foregoing, about a dozen other companies and syndicates of sorts have been launched, or threatened to be launched, with hundreds of square miles of very indefinitely defined territory, where prospecting for gold will be about as hopeless a task as looking for the proverbial needle in a haystack.

The gold fever in Calcutta has recently been so severe that the very best firms have been violently seized, and in their delirium have allowed their names to be trailed through the mud in their eagerness to launch gold companies of some sort.

Mr. Bosworth Smith is again prospecting on the Sonapet Estate, the reefs on which have been partially opened up on the lines laid down by Mr. Harris; and should his report, which will be based on actual results and not on theory, prove as favourable as he himself predicted on his first visit, and as is generally anticipated by the would-be knowing ones, the gold-fields of Bengal will be given out to the world as one of the biggest things on record. A large number of fresh companies are ready to be launched on the marked pending a favourable report from Mr. Bosworth Smith on the Sonapet Estate, the only concern on which any prospecting has been done so far. A very short time will decide what the future of these supposed gold-fields is to be.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.WARREN HASTINGS.

Notwithstanding the excellence of Sir Alfred Lyall's memoir of the first Governor-General of British India, Captain Trotter cannot fairly be accused of attempting a work of supererogation. He is abundantly justified for going over the same ground as his predecessor by the opportunity he has possessed of consulting Mr. G. W. Forrest's three folio volumes of "Letters, Despatches, and other State Papers preserved in the Foreign Department of the Government of India, 1772-1785." He himself lays claim to the merit of exhibiting "for the first time the actual work of that great Governor-General as reviewed from the firm standpoint of the original records now made available to the students of Indian history." At the same time, we fail to discover any blemishes in the comparatively recent works compiled by Sir James Stephen and Sir Alfred Lyall that Captain Trotter has had occasion to signalise and correct. Macaulay and Lord Stanhope have long since been demolished, and are quite unworthy to occupy the time of the general reader. Sir J. Stephen's narrative enjoys, moreover, the advantage of presenting to the rising generation the names of persons and places as they were pronounced by their forefathers. Even home-keeping Englishmen are familiar with Bhurtpoor, Budge-Budge, and, above all, with Nuncoman, whose execution for forgery created such a painful sensation among the Hindoos, and also among certain classes in England. But how shall we identify these sounds with such uncouth utterances as Bhartpur, Baj-Baj, and Nanda-Kumar? Captain Trotter, of course, has merely adopted the so-called scientific system of alliteration introduced by Sir W. Hunter and Sir C. Trevelyan, and foolishly sanctioned by Lord Mayo's Government. Not the less do we regret that he should have been so readily and completely influenced by two pedants who desired to be mistaken for Oriental scholars. Some degree of consolation, however, is to be found in Captain Trotter's vigorous and attractive style, which must be held to cover his orthographical defects and unpleasantnesses. This is not, indeed, the first time that he has taken in hand the vindication of Warren Hastings' character and career, so ignorantly and shamelessly maligned by Burke, Sheridan, and Fox, whose frothy eloquence would long ago have been forgotten had it not been crystallised by that great word-painter, Thomas Babington Macaulay. His famous Essay was very little, if at all, inferior to the more elaborate work he has now produced, though denied the popularity conceded to the "Rulers of India" series. For one thing, he is to be commended for founding his narrative so largely upon Gleig's exhaustive history of Warren Hastings, which is likely to retain its place in Anglo-Indian literature as the safest guide to an impartial knowledge of perhaps the most important chapter in the annals of British India. It was not a pleasant period to contemplate. English officials of ability and culture did not hesitate to abuse their position without apparent remorse, robbing and oppressing the natives instead of trying to elevate their character, and improve their social and moral condition. The example they set in their own lives has reflected disgrace upon their nation even to the present day, and cannot be defended on the plea that a low standard of morality prevailed throughout Europe, and in England as well as elsewhere. Fortunately for himself and his readers, Captain Trotter has not been compelled to enter minutely into those revolting details, though he could not pass them over in absolute silence. He has shown with what unworthy instruments the strings had to work, and beyond that nothing could be desired of him. No further memoir of Warren Hastings need now be written. Whatever vacuum there may have been has been satisfactorily filled by Captain L. J. Trotter.

A CORRESPONDENT writes to the Times from Suez, Oct. 8:—"The retirement of Captain W. H. Roberts from the position of chief agent in Egypt of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company deprives this country of one of one of the oldest and most respected of its British residents. Captain Roberts was within a few months of completing his fifty years in the service of the company, half that time having been spent at sea, and the remainder on shore. The late Khedive, Ismail Pasha, made many attempts to persuade him to enter the Egyptian service, but his loyalty to the splendid company he represented induced him to decline them. Though verging on the three score years and ten, Captain Roberts was stronger mentally and physically than many a man in his prime, and the only surprise evoked by his retirement is that the company should have offered him a pension rather than have availed themselves in England of his extraordinary energy and business capacity."

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 21, 1890.

THE INDIAN STAFF CORPS.

THERE was a time when the Indian Staff Corps was looked upon by the British subaltern much in the same light as Paris is said to be looked upon by the American traveller as the desired final resting-place for his soul. The complaint of commanding officers of regiments was then that youngsters no sooner joined than they commenced preparations to leave by becoming candidates for Indian Staff Corps. These young gentlemen were sorrows to colonels and adjutants, but there was no help for this state of things, which was rather encouraged than otherwise at the War Office. Colonels could only sigh and bear the depletion of their junior commissioned ranks, and adjutants could only swear (if swearing had not been abolished under the new system of military reorganisation) at the loss of time they incurred in drilling and making "soldiers" of those who did not intend to remain in the regiment a day longer than they could help. The Indian Staff Corps was then the joy of the "probationer"—the "longed-for" of the British subaltern. But times change, and the subalterns with them; and to-day the military papers tell us not of the attractions, but of the disadvantages of the Indian Staff Corps, and its sorrowful influences. The complaint now is of the slowness of promotion—a complaint which the military authorities might long ago have foreseen as one which was certain sooner or later to arise. One officer, who signs his letter with the ominous word "Strike," writes of those many who have to do duty now with Native regiments that the spirit of bitterness, disappointment, and dislike to the service is widespread, if not universal. "It is not necessary," he says, "to enter at length into our grievances; briefly they are (1) that our pay is so whittled away in extra subscriptions and forced donations to regimental fads that we are almost bound to get into debt; (2) that we are overworked till our health and spirits give way, when we are liable to be reported on (and frequently are) for want of zeal; and (3) we are superseded in every Gazette by our juniors in the British service, who have half the work and a quarter of the responsibility that we have —in cantonments this is annoying but on service it is simply heartbreaking." The complainant is of opinion that it will not do to suffer such wrongs any longer in silence, and so he makes an appeal to his brethren in misfortune:—

"I do not believe in any half measures; as long as we suffer in silence we shall get nothing. Let us try and help ourselves, and then perhaps God and the Government will help us. Sunk in our present apathy we do not deserve to have our grievances redressed. Let letters be sent to every cadet and militia man who enters the service, asking him to abstain from entering the Staff Corps, and showing what a fraud it is. Our only chance of being listened to is to cut off the supply. Let every man in all three Staff Corps simultaneously send petitions to the House of Commons asking for our promotion in 9, 17, and 23 years to bring us on a level with the British service. Unless the Staff Corps is rigorously boycotted, and unless the petition is universal, the movement will end in vapour."

Another sufferer who signs himself "Soldier" asks,
 "Who will take the matter up?" and answers his own question thus:—

"Undoubtedly the proper persons to do so are the subalterns and captains of the Indian Staff Corps themselves, and not for us to wait for others to do it for us. It is for us to move first in the matter. It is a well proved and well tried adage that 'Heaven helps those who help themselves,' and the officers of the Staff Corps might well learn something from the Uncovenanted civilians. If we do nothing ourselves and leave it to others to help us we may all be retired or dead before anything is done to improve the present rules of promotion. I would therefore suggest that we not only help ourselves but go about it at once. Amongst the seventeen hundred captains and subalterns in the Staff Corps there is assuredly sufficient energy to work the matter, and succeed too, as the Uncovenanted civilians have already done. I would propose that the whole matter, fully showing the hardships suffered by officers of the Staff Corps as regards promotion be printed in a circular form and sent to every member of Parliament; that every officer concerned should write and ask for the help of the member of Parliament representing that part of the country he resides in while at home. The authorities would assuredly see that for promotion to the rank of captain after ten years' service and to that of major after eighteen years' service is a very just and moderate request."

A writer in a home service paper "takes up the running," and classifies for the benefit of, and warning to, young officers of British regiments the disadvantages of joining the Indian Staff Corps. He brings forward nearly a dozen drawbacks, amongst which he puts the following prominent. The candidate for the Staff Corps should, he thinks, be reminded that—

(1) He must give up altogether the hope of ever serving elsewhere than in India, or with other than Native troops.

(2) To many of the stations, more or less removed from the centres of civilisation, to which he is likely to be sent, it is not considered advisable, on the score of health, to send European soldiers.

(3) He must content himself with less leave than he would get in a British regiment.

(4) He exchanges a large, comfortable, and well-appointed mess, and its many pleasant associations, for a poor imitation of it, at which the average number of dining members is three or four.

But after all the slowness of promotion is the most serious drawback to a soldier who aspires to higher command. But how this is to be remedied, with retrospective effect without injustice to others, it is not easy for the moment to see. It is no doubt a dreary fact that three-fourths of those who go into the Indian Staff Corps must content themselves with Native Regimental Service for the remainder of their military career, but this fact has not been a hidden one to any candidate. The best thing for the budding British hero to do is—not to seek such "bubble reputation," and on this point, the writer at home gives the following excellent advice: "I would advise young officers who are thinking of the Staff Corps to avoid consulting three classes of individuals—(1) Staff Corps officers who have come home bent on matrimony, for they must draw the long bow to be successful; (2) retired colonels (survivals of the fittest) who are full of glee at having managed to survive their period of service, and the ills that India abounds in; and (3) of ladies and gentlemen who have had relatives and friends in India in prehistoric times, and who know usually nothing about the matter."

SIR RICHARD BURTON.

A REUTER's telegram published in this morning's papers gives the following intelligence, which will be read by many Anglo-Indians, who knew the man and his deserts, with feelings of unfeigned sorrow:—

"Sir Richard Burton, the eminent Eastern traveller and Orientalist, who has held the post of British Consul here since 1872, died this morning.

"Sir Richard had not been in robust health for some years past, but felt comparatively well yesterday. During the night, however, he was seized by an attack of gout, which ultimately reached the heart, the end coming quite suddenly at seven o'clock this morning. The English resident doctor, who has been with Sir Richard Burton for the last three years, was in attendance at the deathbed.

"The body will be provisionally interred here on Wednesday next, and will afterwards be taken to England. Sir Richard Burton was in his sixty-ninth year, having been born in 1821."

It was a charge which was justly brought against ancient Rome that she showed often the blackest ingratitude to some of the best and bravest of her citizens, but what of modern England? Had Richard Burton belonged to any other nation but ours he would not have gone to his grave almost the victim of official neglect. He would have been the recipient of the highest honours which the State that valued long and faithful services could bestow. As it is, a man who has given so much to his country, to science, and to literature, whose fame that country will not hesitate to accept as part of her own, has been permitted to die a humble Consul at Trieste. Why has this been so? Is the answer to be found in the able and appreciative article which we reproduce from this morning's Standard, an article evidently from the pen of one who knew and admired—as all who knew him did—the sterling worth of Richard Burton?

THE Government of India have issued orders under which Haka becomes the head-quarters of the first Burma Infantry, now stationed at Thayetmyo.

It is possible, says the Pioneer, that the Government of India, in declining to avail itself of the offers of the promoters of the Connaught Memorial scheme, may have had in mind the fact that promise in these cases is by no means the same thing as performance. This same class of society that brought forward the project of an Indian Sandhurst to do honour to the departing Commander-in-Chief also organised a fund to commemorate the virtues of the departing Governor, Lord Reay. Some Rs. 9,000 were speedily promised by the people of Poona towards this latter object; but, according to the Rast Gofar, less than half that sum is actually forthcoming when it comes to collection. Nor need we go back to the similar experiences of the Congress. It is highly improbable that the people of the Deccan would show a greater eagerness to subscribe to a project connected with the name of the Duke of Connaught than they have shown in the case of their particular patron, Lord Reay; and the Government of India would have been placed in a somewhat ridiculous position if it had given its formal sanction to a new departure such as the Indian Sandhurst, and then found that the scheme was after all in the air. Not that this was the main reason that influenced the Government, if it did influence them, in declining the offer. That must have been the obvious consideration that if such an institution was to be started the proper place for inaugurating the experiment was not among the decayed Mahratta Sirdars of the Deccan, but among the Sikhs and Rajputs of Northern India, where its chances of usefulness and success would be so enormously greater.

IN the Central Provinces the study of the elements of agriculture has received much attention in primary schools during the past year, and the subject has proved a popular one. It is intended, when possible, to establish school gardens, that the boys may by working in these get practical lessons also. The teaching of drawing is also being pushed on, but it will be some time before the supply of trained teachers is equal to the demand. The primary school teachers are now being instructed at the Normal School in the system of "hand and eye training" adopted from the Slöjd system by Mr. Ricks, Inspector of Schools, of the London School Board. The system consists in teaching wood work, modelling in clay and in cardboard, upon the basis of a knowledge of drawing. Physical training has received considerable attention, and the Chief Commissioner found that while on tour that drill was a most popular subject both with masters and boys. The plan of making the best boy drill his own class has stirred up emulation, and a scheme for holding annual gatherings for athletic contests has also had excellent results. All the high schools and important middle schools have been supplied with the necessary physical apparatus mainly by private subscriptions. The agricultural and engineering classes made good progress during the year. It is in contemplation to affiliate the engineering class with the Roorkee Institution with a view to sending successful students to obtain the Roorkee certificates, and to utilise the agricultural class as a means of giving a practical side to the teaching of agriculture in primary schools. While instruction given in schools has thus proceeded on wider and more practical lines, the plan of popularising education by giving those who are interested in it a more direct management over the schools has also been attempted. The financial terms upon which all middle and primary schools in municipalities will be handed over to Municipal Committees have been definitely ascertained, and the necessary negotiations will shortly be completed. The rules for the management of these schools by municipal bodies will at the same time be revised. With all these increasing efforts to advance education in the Central Provinces it is satisfactory to find that the attendance at schools is steadily increasing. On the 31st of March last there were 1,830 schools with 108,200 pupils, as compared with 1,924 schools and 107,357 pupils on the corresponding date of the previous year.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

Earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

What higher aim can man attain, than conquest over human pair?

JEOPARDY OF LIFE, THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset!! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm. The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, biasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—J. C. ENO.

CAUTION.—Examine each Bottle, and see that the Capsule is marked ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." Without it you have been imposed on by worthless imitation.

OLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS, POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S PATENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.,

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced Life they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 27, 1890.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 11th October; from Allahabad and Madras to the 9th October; and from Calcutta to the 9th October.

AT the last meeting of the Legislative Council the Reports of the Select Committees on the Bills amending the Indian Emigration Act and the Salt Act were presented, and Sir D. Barbour presented the Report of the Select Committee on the N.W.P. Administration Bill. Sir A. Scoble introduced a Bill amending the Criminal Procedure Code under which the principle of Section 250 is extended, whereby compensation may be awarded to the victims of frivolous and vexatious prosecutions.

THE Bengal Government have followed the example set by Sir Auckland Colvin in appointing a Provincial Committee to take up the question of police administration and reform. Mr. John Beames, Mr. J. F. Stevens, Judge of Gya, and Mr. Veasey, the Inspector-General of Police, are the members of the Committee, which is to submit its report within six months.

PROPOSALS have been made by the Punjab Government for increasing the strength of the Commission by employing military officers of the Frontier Force in a civil capacity on the frontier for a term of five years.

THE Home Government have sent out the memorial recently addressed to them by the Anti-Opium Association. The Government of India will consider and report upon it, as they did with the representations regarding the Excise system.

A DESPATCH will be sent home shortly setting forth the views of the Government of India in favour of the establishment of a Revenue Commissioner in Baluchistan, which Sir Robert Sandeman has recommended.

THE new rules regarding the direct posting of British officers from Sandhurst to the Indian Staff Corps will probably come into force on January 1st, 1892.

THE Simla Committee of the Uncovenanted Association will shortly issue a circular explaining the position they have taken up.

THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR of the North-West Provinces, after leaving the hills, will proceed to Lucknow and remain there till November 20th, when he goes to Agra, where he will stay during the Viceroy's visit. The months of December and January will be devoted to a long camping tour over the Agra Division, and early in February Sir Auckland Colvin comes in to Allahabad.

SIR ANDREW SCOBLE AND MR. ROBERT CROSTHWAITE have been invested with the K.C.S.I. and C.S.I., respectively, by the Viceroy, at Viceregal Lodge.

GENERAL T. E. GORDON, Military Attaché at Teheran, intends visiting India during the coming cold weather.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL GATACRE will probably succeed Brigadier-General Knowles as Adjutant-General of the Bombay Army.

MAJOR MUIR, 17th Bengal Cavalry, is to be appointed Assistant Adjutant-General at Fort William.

DRS. BARCLAY AND CUNNINGHAM are to be placed on special duty on the Leprosy Commission.

DR. BOMFORD will act as Secretary to the Surgeon-General, Dr. Harris, from Simla, taking his place at Nagpore as Civil Surgeon.

LIEUT. OGG, acting Adjutant of Artillery at Jutogh, met with a bad accident while riding into that cantonment from Simla. His pony fell down a Khud and was killed, Mr. Ogg sustaining a bad fracture of the elbow-joint.

THERE are no signs that the tribesmen in the north of the Zhob Valley will offer resistance to Sir G. White's force, but isolated cases of Ghazi fanaticism may occur, such as were encountered in the first expedition five years ago.

THERE will be a punitive expedition this cold weather against the Lushais.

PARTICULARS of Lieutenant Swinton's death at the hands of Lushais in the advance to Changsil show that he was shot through the lungs, the bullet also grazing his orderly. Lieutenant Swinton died in a quarter of an hour. His body was taken on to Chansil, and interred there beside that of Captain Brown.

THE first part of the programme of the little force of frontier police at Changsil has been successfully accomplished. Than-ruma was destroyed on October 4th. A body of Lushais made another demonstration against the post at Changsil after the departure of the main body for Aijal, but, finding Mr. Shuttleworth, who was left in command of the reserve, fully prepared to receive them, they withdrew without fighting.

DURING the ensuing cold weather a small party will be sent to demarcate the southern boundary of the Kiang-Tung State, on the border of Siam. Mr. Archer, the Consul at Zimmé, will be in charge.

ON the conclusion of Mr. Warburton's evidence in the case which he is bringing against the Tribune newspaper an attempt was made, at the suggestion of the Magistrate, to have the matter settled by a compromise. Counsel for both sides were for some time in communication, but the negotiations eventually fell through, owing to the sum offered by the accused as compensation being far below what, in the opinion of the complainant's counsel, Mr. Warburton was entitled to expect.

THE Lieut.-Governor of Bengal, having consulted his district officers regarding the condition of the flooded districts, has come to the conclusion that distress is not likely to be very serious. The floods have now subsided, and agricultural operations are being resumed. Both loans and charitable relief are, however, still being given, and the organisation in connection with these is equal to meeting all demands.

A NATIVE gentleman at Hyderabad has received a letter from Mrs. Cates, the local Secretary of the Liverpool Moslem Society, in which the lady states that there are now in that city no less than twenty-five gentlemen and five ladies who have embraced Islam. Mrs. Cates asks for support to carry on the work of converting the English nation to Mahomedanism; and the leading moulvies in the city, in response to her appeal, have opened a subscription list for that object. The President of the Society is Mr. W. N. Quilliam, B.A., a solicitor of Liverpool, who has published a pamphlet entitled "The Faith of Islam."

No intimation has been yet received from the English postal authorities regarding the adoption or otherwise of the Government of India's proposals in connection with the change in the overland postal rates.

It has been calculated that if exchange were now to fall to the figure at which it was taken in the estimates, the revenues would still show a clear gain of at least a crore, so great has been the saving from the high rates of the last few months.

NOTES.

THE news from India is dull, but satisfactory. According to the telegrams, the organisation of the levies offered by the Native princes and chiefs for the defence of the Empire is being carried out in a very practical way, all attention being paid to military efficiency, and no pressure being brought to bear on any ruler to supply a contingent. Vanity, emulation, jealousy, or whatever good or evil motive may be at work, there is this certain, that the Government of India will have no difficulty in getting any number of auxiliaries from the territories of its feudatories that it may require. It has only to be discriminate in its choice, and see that the chosen are well drilled, equipped, and officered.

THE fresh outrages committed by the Northern Lushais have convinced the Government of India that there is only one way of dealing with these treacherous and bloodthirsty savages. Their country must be subdued once for all, and a sufficient retribution exacted to make them conscious that murders and raids across the frontier are diversions that are not worth the candle. An expedition, therefore, has been sanctioned for the ensuing cold weather which will work through the country thoroughly. Preparations will be matured during November and December, so that the force can start on its work by January 1st.

IN order to carry out the work of retribution in the Northern Lushai country a sufficient supply of stores and provisions is being forwarded for the force that is to be employed. There are already, with garrisons and reinforcements, about 500 frontier police across the border, and part of a regiment of Assam Gurkhas will be sent to the front when the time comes for making the available force altogether about 1,000 men. There are to operate by short dours in every direction.

AS yet there are no signs of the excitement spreading to the Southern Lushais, but the commotion in the north is on such a scale that it is impossible to say it may not be communicated all along the frontier. In that case the 39th Bengal Infantry, which is to be held in reserve on the Chittagong line, would be moved up to Lungleh, and a force sent northwards, as was done last year, to catch the Lushais between two fires.

THE Pioneer makes the following remarks regarding the late Lushai disturbances:—"It is now doubly clear that the outrage which brought about the death of Captain Browne was not a mere transitory outburst of savagery, but was a deliberate declaration of war, which must have been resolved upon long previously. Then followed the simultaneous attack upon the two forts, and while blockading these the Lushais were also able to oppose an organised resistance to the advance of the relieving force. The death of Lieut. Swinton and the other casualties in the boats were not, as one might have conjectured, the unfortunate result of a chance volley fired from an ambush, but came about in the course of persistent fighting, which had to be carried on to clear the banks of the river of the enemy. So, too, the attacks upon Changsil prove to have been continuous, and were persevered with for many days, in spite of heavy loss to the assailants. Even after the junction of the two bodies the tribesmen seem to have held their ground and kept up firing at nights. If the Government had not decided already upon regular military operations in the winter it is evident that they would have had no choice after these particulars. The whole of the Northern clans must have been in combination to decide upon war to the knife, and they have carried out the scheme with an amount of co-operation, tenacity, and system which one would not expect to find among such savages."

IN connection with the matter of proffered military assistance from the Native States for "Imperial War Service," the Nawab of Bahawalpur has shown himself eminently practical. He has asked the Government of India to send his selected battalions on Service, as he wishes them to gain practical knowledge, and not to grow stale in their barracks. As at present there is no way of meeting his Highness's wishes by putting his men into action, it has been suggested to him that the next best training they can have for the battle-field is in a British cantonment or camp of exercise, where they might be fully exercised with regular British regiments in manoeuvres and field-firing. The suggestion is a good one, and if it can be carried out with all the Native levies whose services have been offered to the Government of India, the result will be to strengthen the internal defence of the Indian Empire in a way which will make it very "awkward" for an invader, from whatever quarter he may come.

THE truth of the adage that a story does not lose anything in the telling is exemplified by the statements which appear in an article on the "Cambay Atrocities" in the Indian Mirror. Here is an extract:—"The Dewan saw that his post was not worth a day's purchase. He appeared before the Nawab, and succeeded in thoroughly frightening him, and they fled together from Cambay. When they returned they had brought with them the Political Agent and a company of British troops from the Residency at Baroda. The people explained their grievances to the Political Agent, but he refused to listen to them, and asked them to disperse. As they failed to do so the troops were ordered to disperse them with shot and bayonet. And then a merciless and atrocious butchery of the helpless, unarmed Kunbis took place. That 200 people should have died of their wounds, inflicted by the ruthless and only too obedient soldiers, is a fact which must cause universal indignation."

THE Englishman, in the course of an article on the "Ruling in the Chartered Bank Case," writes:—"The extraordinary point in the Chartered Bank case was that the learned judge reserved the point as to whether it was necessary to find that the money was taken on one date and one occasion, but in the same breath he told the jury that they could not convict the accused unless they were satisfied that he had abstracted the money on one date and one occasion. What, of course, he ought to have done was to have asked the jury whether the accused had misappropriated the money; and if so, whether he had misappropriated the money on any particular date. If the jury had found that the accused had misappropriated the money, but could not say on what date the money had been misappropriated, then the High Court would have had to determine whether it was an offence in law to misappropriate money when the prosecution failed to show the particular and date on which the misappropriation had taken place. Having reserved the consideration of this question it was unfortunate, to say the least of it, that the learned Judge should have directed the jury to acquit the accused unless they were satisfied that he had taken the money on one occasion. Such, however, is the law as laid down by the High Court, and from this decision there is no appeal. Every local Treasurer of Government, every cashier of a bank, everyone, in short, entrusted with his employer's money has now a free hand; and it remains for the Legislature, as the Criminal Procedure Code is now under revision, to say whether this is the law under which the commercial transactions of India are to be carried on."

"FAIR WORDS," says the proverb, "butter no parsnips;" but those who hold a different opinion may be interested in the explanation which the Pioneer offers for the action of the members of the Simla Committee of the Un-covenanted Service towards their chosen representatives in London:—"They cordially acknowledge the great services rendered by Mr. King, and their debt of obligation to him; they recognise that, through his powerful aid, they have made a great stride in obtaining recognition of their grievances and their claims; and that without his assistance it is extremely probable that they would have vainly endeavoured to obtain any concession from Government."

At the same time they feel that they made certain reasonable claims to which they consider themselves fully entitled, and that they have only as yet obtained a portion of their claims; they by no means allow, as some people seem to think, that they deliberately asked a good deal with a view to obtaining a portion only. They claimed what they thought they were entitled to and no more. They also feel that, by the concession of a Parliamentary Committee to investigate their grievances, a great opportunity was offered which, in all probability, cannot occur again; and that while they, so far as in them lay, strained every nerve to make the most of that opportunity, through the force of circumstances, and, to some extent, through mismanagement, which they could not control, the opportunity was not fully utilised. They feel, in fact, that from one cause or another, the evidence offered was not as complete as it might have been, and that the witnesses were not the best that might have been offered. They not only consider that the London Committee, who were the immediate advisers on their behalf of Mr. King and Mr. Jenkyns, to some extent failed at a critical time; but they consider, now that the Select Committee has submitted its report, and as its recommendations will be carried out by the Government here, that the venue has changed, and that the headquarters of the Association should be in India."

(Times Correspondents.)
INDIA.

CALCUTTA, OCT. 26.

The Viceroy, speaking at a banquet at Patala on Friday, said that Lord Dufferin's scheme of assigning to the forces of the Native States a place in the defensive system of the Empire had made an excellent beginning. There were now under training about 6,400 cavalry and 7,000 infantry, all well disciplined, thoroughly equipped, and fit to take their place beside the Imperial troops. He felt no doubt that the Government would, in time, see its way to accept the numerous other offers still open. The essence of the whole scheme was that there should be no compulsion, and that only those States should be selected which were not only willing but anxious to take part in defending the Empire in the hour of need.

BURMA.

RANGOON, OCT. 25.

The health of the troops at Fort White is improving. Our relations with the Siyins are friendly; they are employed in collecting material for the new Fort White, which will be situated 2,000ft. above the old fort.

The Chief Commissioner and General Wolseley have protested strongly against reducing the troops in Burma till the new local regiments are properly trained.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

MINING CONCESSIONS IN MYSORE.

(Madras Times.)

It has been a subject of complaint that those engaged in developing the gold-mining industry in Mysore have been most illiberally treated by the Mysore Government. The gold-industry is a new one; the chances of success are anything but assured; the capital required is large; the labour entailed is arduous; the benefits to the country enormous; yet with all this the Government imposes restrictions and demands initial payments which have led to the surmise that the Mysore Durbar is not anxious to foster European enterprise in the Province. Without European agency little can be done in gold-mining, as the present generation of Hindus appears wanting in the necessary skill in mining, and does not care to undertake the risks of so speculative an industry as this appears to be. In modern times, gold-mining was unknown in Mysore till ten years ago. Even now it is but in its infancy, and in undertaking to open a gold-mine the speculator has not the data of a long-standing and well known industry to base his calculations on; all his plans are but tentative, and his chances of success problematic. Gold is a metal whose very scarcity gives it much of its value, and although one of the most widely distributed of minerals, it is yet so disseminated among other minerals that the bringing together and recovering of these particles it is that costs so much in time and money. There are certain minerals with which gold is found associated more largely than with others, and it is the finding of these that marks out the prospector's work; the exploitation of the included gold—the work of the gold-miner. Very little is known of the distribution of the gold matrix in Mysore. The geological formation of the plateau is in favour of the existence of these auriferous rocks, but their exact locality and their capabilities are yet to be ascertained. To find the gold-yielding strata and ascertain its value for gold-mining is a work of skill and time, and costs money, yet in Mysore the Government charges all who are anxious to search for such lands a license fee of Rs.500 and further restricts their search to a limited area, as if gold, like earth or water, is to be had everywhere in Mysore. A further fee of Rs.1,000 is expected before the land is granted on a lease of thirty years. Then comes the acquisition of surface rights from private individuals, and the full rate of land revenue if the lands belong to Government. It does not matter if the land is never cultivated, the cultivation tax must be paid. Waste-lands which are free to the ryot, must be paid for by the gold-miner. If he gets gold he must give 5 per cent. of the gross yield to Government, whether the speculation is profitable or not, or the Government has the right to impose a rental of Rs.5 an acre annually should the royalty be too small. If the lessee wishes to sell the land he has acquired with so much labour and expenditure of capital he must pay 10 per cent. of the selling price to the Mysore Government: thus, if after spending a lakh of rupees on an undertaking, he is no longer willing to carry on gold-mining, and finds a purchaser of his property willing to take over his claim for half a lakh, ten per cent. of this half lakh must be made over to the Mysore Government. Briefly put, the gold-miner's grievance, is, that he is treated differently to any occupant of Government lands in Mysore. For instance, the husbandman can obtain Government lands for agricultural purposes on merely paying the land assessment, according to the nature of the soil he applies for. Trained Government officials have already examined the soil and classified it according to the nature of the crops it will grow—wet land, dry land; first, second and third class soils; arable and unarable lands. The ryot pays nothing for this examination and mapping; the gold-miner has to do all this for himself, and pay Rs.500 for a license to do so. The husbandman gets his land free; the miner pays Rs.1,000 for his. The ryot can sell his holding for whatever sum he pleases, and Government does not ask for a portion of the purchase money—the miner has to give Government 10 per cent. of the selling price. In addition to the Rs.500 prospecting fee, in addition to the Rs.1,000 deposit on lease, in addition to full land tax, whether lands are cultivated or not, in addition to a hitherto unknown tax of Rs.8 an acre for unarable lands, in addition to ten per cent. of the sale price of the land should he dispose of it at a loss, or to advantage; in addition to all these, the gold-miner has to make over a twentieth of all the gold he gets without making any deduction for the cost of getting it.

It certainly appears as if the gold-miner has made out his case, and that he is very hardly dealt with by the Mysore Government. It certainly appears that this is not the way to foster a new industry. It certainly appears that the Mysore Government is not anxious to develop its gold resources, as it will be seen from the text of the proceedings of the Government of His Highness the Maharaja of Mysore, dated Aug. 23, 1890, how different is its treatment of an individual who has come forward to develop the iron mines of Mysore. The Durbar believes in iron, it has no faith in gold. It puts all sorts of impediments in the way of those who wish to mine for gold; it is willing to make great sacrifices on behalf of the one who will take up iron manufacture. We mentioned a few of the disabilities under which the gold-miner labours, disabilities due to the action of the Mysore Durbar; let us now enumerate the advantages offered to Dr. Dhanakoti Raju to work the iron-mines of Mysore.

Unlike gold-mining, iron mining and iron manufacture is an old established and well known industry in Mysore. Cannon and cannon balls of indigenous manufacture, and of first class quality, are still to be seen in all parts of the Province. Hyder and Tippu had large factories for the manufacture of these weapons of war, and it has been asserted with some show of truth—that the denudation of all forests in the vicinity of the iron mines is due to the large demand for fuel for iron-smelting and iron-manufacture. That this denudation of the forests has been a curse to Mysore and a cause of the famines which periodically visit the country, is now a recognised fact, and it has been the earnest effort of British Rule in Mysore to foster the growth of forest and encourage tree planting by the ryots. The richest soil in Mysore—the black cotton soil of the Chittaldroog district—is left uncultivated simply from the want of water. Chittaldroog is also exceptionally rich in iron mines, which have been extensively worked. Mr. Bowring, in his "Eastern Experiences," tells us that this District shows signs of once being covered with extensive forests. May not the requirements of the iron mines have had much to do with this clearing of forests which has resulted in making this rich tract of country the most arid in the Province? Dr. Buchanan, who visited Mysore in 1802, describes numerous iron mines in this district, and gives statistics of the iron manufacture of the Province. The iron ore of Mysore is amongst the best in the world, and the quantity appears inexhaustible and easily got at. The great mass of the Babudan Hills is said to be made up of vast bed of magnetic iron ore similar to that from which the celebrated Swedish iron is produced. The Gangur range of hills on the east boundary of the Shemoga District is nothing but a ridge of brown iron ore, still largely worked by the Natives, and yielding iron so soft that all the rails required for shoeing cattle are made from it. On the Chickmaikanhalli Hills red hæmatite is so common and so easily reduced that the Natives say that after the annual firing of the grass on these hills just before the rains, a harvest of iron in its metallic state can be had by picking up the pieces of metal resulting from the fusion of the ore by the burning grass. Chennapetam and Maram have long been known as yielding steel which had a reputation as early as the times of Apulicus (A.D. 130), who in his "Florida" speaks of India as producing "heaps of ivory, harvests of pepper, bales of cinnamon, streams of gold, and excellent steel." Indian Woolly is still known and valued for making wire for musical instruments. Mysore is one vast iron mine, and its capabilities of iron production are only bounded by its capabilities of fuel production, and in this respect its resources are nil. Mysore cannot spare a single ton of its wood fuel—its coal fuel is an unknown quantity; already a scarcity of fuel is experienced in many parts of the Province, and with the spread of railways the want will be more and more felt so long as Mysore has only wood fuel to depend on. The gold mines at Kolar already experience a difficulty in procuring fuel, and yet the requirement of railways, gold mines, and kitchen fires are infinitesimal when compared with the requirements of a widespread iron industry on a large scale, such as the Mysore Government is anxious to promote. Any great spread of the iron industry in Mysore would be a curse to the Province instead of a blessing in the present state of its fuel resources.

"The Government of His Highness the Maharaja of Mysore have for some time felt convinced of the expediency of affording the necessary facilities for the development of the resources of the Province in iron ore and the establishment of an iron manufacturing industry on a large scale with a full use of modern processes and modern appliances which have been developed elsewhere. The abundant supply of iron ore which is available and the success which has attended small, crude, and isolated efforts to manufacture it, afford every promise of success attending a large, well-organised and carefully conducted undertaking. . . . After a full and careful consideration and discussion of all the details have resolved upon granting to Dr. Dhanakoti Raju a concession on the terms set forth in the annexed memorandum. . . . The Inspector-General of Forests will as soon as the deed is duly executed and registered proceed to give effect to the concession and in communication with Dr. Dhanakoti Raju, define the forest land to be granted for fuel."

The above is the decision of the Mysore Government with regard to this important matter. A concession has been granted to Dr. Dhanakoti Raju which, for scope and favourable terms to the concessionaire, outdoes even the notorious Hyderabad concession. The whole of the iron deposits in the Province are made over to Dr. Dhanakoti Raju free of all charges, free of all duties, free of all taxes, for fifty years. In Mysore, at the present moment, ten thousand persons are engaged in mining and manufacturing iron on a small scale. These persons pay for their iron ore, pay for their fuel, pay land tax, and pay on their furnaces. In 1876 there were 1,463 iron mines and furnaces at work, yielding Rs. 206,000 worth of iron. The furnaces paid a duty of Rs. 8,140. All land required by Dr. Dhanakoti Raju for factories, workshops, dwelling houses for the people, he is to be granted free, and all machinery imported for the ironworks, all goods manufactured there are to be free of import and export duty for twenty-five years.

We have said that the great objection to an iron industry in Mysore was the want of fuel in the Province, and we know that it is this want of fuel that prevents a great iron industry being developed in Mysore. If cheap fuel could be had without indenting on the already meagre resources of the Province then encourage an iron industry by all means; but if iron works are to be started at the cost of the already diminishing forest lands of Mysore then perish the iron industry. The Mysore Government is not of this opinion, and to encourage an output of not less than 1,000 tons of pig iron per annum it makes the concessionaire a present of 64,000 acres of forest land in any part of Mysore he may choose to select. It is not too much to presume that each acre of forest will have at least 100 trees on it, and calculating each tree at Rs. 2 we have a lump sum of 128 lakhs of rupees of fuel placed at the disposal of Dr. Dhanakoti Raju; one-half of this fuel he has free of all cost, i.e., if he fells at the rate of five miles a year for ten years for the next ten years he pays at the rate of one rupee an acre for forest which is worth considerably more than our low estimate of Rs. 200. That our estimate of the value of the forest land is not too high will be at once seen when it is known that the concessionaire is allowed to select his own land, which will be demarcated and set apart for him, so that even the small trees will have grown to a large size by the time he is called upon to pay at Rs. 1 an acre. The total area of Government State forest in Mysore is only 924 miles. There are, in addition, what are known as district or unreserved forests, and it is probably that it is of these forests that the concessionaire will be allowed to select 64,000 acres in the Malvalli and Kankanpalli Taluk. The gain indeed must be great if the Government of Mysore can afford to give up 64,000 acres of forests land, worth at a low estimate 121 lakhs of rupees, to an individual, when every acre of that forest land is essential to the well-being of the State.

ACCELERATED PROMOTION IN THE STAFF CORPS.

(Times of India.)

Some eight years ago, it will be remembered, an agitation was set on foot by the officers of the Indian Staff Corps to try and obtain accelerated promotion to the ranks of Captain, Major, and Lieutenant-Colonel. A committee, named "The Staff Corps and Indian Army Fund Committee," was formed, and agreed to administer a fund, raised by subscriptions from officers of the Indian Army, named "The Staff Corps Accelerated Promotion Fund." A circular was published by the committee for the purpose of giving definite and vigorous shape to the undoubted grievance of Indian officers in the matter of promotion. The circular ran as follows:—"Under the present Staff Corps rules, a Lieutenant is promoted to the rank of Captain after twelve years' service; to that of Major after twenty; to that of Lieutenant-Colonel after twenty-six; whereas in British regiments, a Cavalry Subaltern gets a troop, on the average, in seven years, while the Infantry Subaltern is promoted, as a rule, after nine years. Only the Engineers have to wait twelve years, and for them the Government is understood to be going to do something. As to Captains, it is noticeable that they cannot be promoted to the rank of Major until they would, if in a British regiment, be superannuated; and it is a fact that, under the present system, unless some change be made, there will only be seven Majors in the whole of the Madras regiments. It is not, therefore, for Subalterns alone that this movement is set on foot, but to ensure accelerated promotion generally throughout the service. The exact period of service qualifying for promotion can only be suggested as yet; but it is submitted that, as the Warrant of July 1, 1881, accelerated promotion enormously in British regiments, all Staff Corps Subalterns who have completed ten years' service or more at that date should have their Captaincies dated from that day, and those who had not completed that amount should be promoted at the expiration of ten years' service—the rank of Major to date, similarly, with seventeen years' service; that of Lieutenant-Colonel with twenty-four years. The great injustice by which Sub-Lieutenants were deprived in many instances of one or even two years' service needs, and will receive, thorough ventilation. The English Press, has always afforded great facilities for the assistance of those who, being far from home, are apt to be forgotten or neglected amid the more obvious demands of the home service; and it is intended in this case to rely largely on the Press, as was done with great success in the earlier movement. By this means, and by questions in the Houses of Parliament, the real state of the case will be laid before the public, and, meanwhile, individual petition forms will be sent, to the officers interested, by which each one will be enabled to lay his case before Parliament. These petitions will be sent in the first instance, to the committee, and will only be presented when a sufficiently large number has been received to mark the decided and important nature of the complaint."

The result of this agitation was that Government reduced the qualifying period of Subalterns of the Indian Staff Corps, for the rank of Captain, by one year, making it eleven instead of twelve years. The qualifying periods for the other grades remain the same.

Now, however, the same question has again cropped up—this trifling concession, apparently, being considered insufficient—and agitation on a very large scale is now going on.

Among the many letters on the subject which are daily appearing in the home and Indian papers we select the following, written a few days ago to the editor of the Pioneer :—

"Sir,—In reply to query by 'Paterfamilias' as to whether he and his relations would do wisely in putting their sons into the Staff Corps on account of the somewhat better pay, though slower promotion, in my opinion the latter counteracts the former. The British service has much the best of it as regards promotion, the rates being about seven years for a troop and fifteen for Majority in the British cavalry, and about eight years for promotion to Captain and seventeen for promotion to Major in the R.E. and R.A. In the British infantry the periods are about ten months and eleven months longer, respectively, on an average, but a war would of course accelerate promotion in the Queen's service, while the Staff Corps (whose entire service is spent under more adverse climatic influences and subject to a depreciated currency) must still remain at a dead level. Furlough and pension rules for the Indian Army have been revised many times in the last twenty years, but promotion rules have remained unconsidered. However, the Service papers have taken the matter up, and if it be temperately and constitutionally put before the Secretary of State and Parliament, there is no reason to fear that any just claims of the Indian Army, for promotion pari passu with the Queen's service, will be overlooked. Already a committee of retired officers who have relations in the service is considering the matter in London, and a circular will be issued by them."

It certainly appears to us that the Indian Staff Corps officers have every reason to be dissatisfied with the present state of things, and we hope that the present agitation will be successful in securing for them some of their demands

OMRAH KHAN.

(By ALPHA.)

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

The old Rubabi sweeps the string
With echoes of an earlier day,
And poor and weak although his song,
And all unworthy be his lay,
Perhaps some notes of fire may lie.
The rapture of his minstrelsy
Some cheek may burn, some heart may beat—
And this to him were guerdon sweet.

I.

There were two of us—Khaled, the Barakzai,
From the hills beyond the Khurd,
And I, who first saw daylight
On the banks of the Gomul Ford.
Our fathers left us their tulwars.
'Tis the sword, and the sword alone,
That makes the warrior a chieftain,
That leads the chief to the throne.

II.

No reed that ever writ letters
Hath ever won lands like these—
Look where the rich crops broaden
To yon grey line of trees ;
See on the rocky hillside
Standeth my tower of stone—
There wind my fat beeves homeward—
All that I see is mine own.

III.

We followed the Abdali's banners
With other good men and true ;
We shared in the sack of Jehanabad,
The march to the blue Hurroo.
We were rich with the spoil of a nation,
We had won it fairly in fight ;
There was no law but the sword then,
And might was ever the right.

IV.

We were stopped by the fortress of Lora,
I summoned the Rajpoot Chief ;
He cursed from behind the parapet,
And called me a border thief.
When we passed the fortress of Lora
Old Unject Singh lay slain ;
I had cleft him through shield and forearm,
Through casque of steel to the brain.

V.

My prize of war was his daughter,
She was fair as the houris who wait
To welcome the Faithful to Paradise,
And throng at its golden gate.
She raved at first like a fury ;
But the maid and the fiery steed
Are tamed alike by the silken-hand
That shows its claws if it need.

VI.

And Khaled, my brother, hath told me
"The Abdali calls thee west,
There is danger and trouble before thee ;
There is need of our bravest and best."
I rode through a night of thunder,
Through a land that was pale with rain,
And reached the camp of the Amir.
It lay on the Sirhind Plain.

VII.

I showed to my Prince his token.
The Amir said, "It is well,
To me art thou true and faithful,
Yea to the Gates of Hell.
And ever I need true hearts like thine ;
But look to thine honour, friend :
This signet is false—thy brother is false."

I heard him until the end.

VIII.

Ah ! the night was black as falsehood
As I lay 'neath the siris trees
And heard the tinkling of the leaves,
The wail of the southern breeze.
And the siris bloom fell on me
As soft as the snow flakes fall,
From the low sand hills in the distance
I heard the dog-wolf call.

IX.

The wolf betrays not its fellow,
But the heart of a friend—is it true ?
True as steel till a woman's face
Shines 'twixt thy friend and you.

I slew them both in chamber,
And stepped forth once more whole—
I had but slain a faithless wife,
A friend with a traitor's soul.

X.

Allah ! the knife hath cleansed me,
Mine honour is white as snow,
Pure as the ice which sparkles
On the mighty Safed Koh.
And shame but knoweth this balsam
Prate not of law—I feel
No law can save a wound like mine
Save blood, and a yard of steel.

WANTED, A GOD.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

A touching exposition of unadulterated heathenism—we use the word in its Christian sense—is displayed in the petition of the Jaini sect of Gwalior to the Viceroy. They request his Excellency's assistance, by pressure brought to bear upon the Gwalior Durbar by the Governor-General's Agent in Central India, to convert their "image," known as Ruth Biman, into a pucca god. At present it is only an "image," and, to quote the petition, "cannot be considered a god unless it is taken with procession into the streets and accompanied by several images which come from other stations, and these images take the new image to the temple." The public procession alone confers divinity, it appears ; for "until the procession is not performed a new image is not considered a god according to our religion." The spectacle of the Viceroy, called upon to assist the Jaini bunnias of Gwalior to make an "image" into a god, should give subject for serious reflection to Exeter Hall. India, however, has not been, and is now less than ever, governed on Exeter Hall lines ; and, from the point of view of Government policy, the Jaini petitioners seem to have made out a case which in British territory would certainly be listened to. They appear to have suffered from Brahmin hostility ; their temple has been broken into and their image broken. They are, therefore, in their own eyes without a god, and cannot, until the new image is deified by orthodox rites, perform the ceremony of marriage. Hence, for the last four years, because the Gwalior Durbar refuses to sanction the performance of the proper processional rites, the girls in the sect have been growing up unmarried. As a rough and ready local cure for early marriage this may not be matter for grief ; but the complainants are naturally miserable, and they make generous offers to obtain a remedy for their grievance, being willing to pay for any extra police force which may be needed for the protection of their procession against Brahmin hostility. In British India, where followers of every creed are protected in the performance of their religious rites by the State, such an offer would be as unnecessary as the reason for making it. Interfering, however, with religious matters in Native States is, probably, not a job for which the Government of India has much liking.

THE DETESTED IMPOST.

(Pioneer.)

We have had to speak once or twice lately, not altogether enthusiastically, of the arrangements which Government makes for singling out its own servants to pay Income-tax in parts of the country where the detested impost is unknown to the rest of the population. Yet it is impossible to deny the Finance Department two virtues in their system, impartiality and consistency. A hostile critic would of course say that impartiality is only that of the schoolmaster who flogs his son by preference because there are no consequences to apprehend; but then who can deny the consistency? Who can impugn the reputation of the Department for taking anything it can get in whatever way it can get it? If any person entertains any lingering doubt upon this point, we have only to add to the instance quoted the other day of the officials in Berar—whose salaries, though virtually paid by the Nizam, are mulcted for the benefit of the Indian Government—that of the Telegraph officials in Persia, who, incredible as it seems, have had to pay toll since they came under the Director-General in India, and the Finance Department, was able to get at their incomes—a beautiful manifestation of broadening justice that we should be able to compel a person to contribute to the Indian revenues for the privilege of living in the dominion of the Shah. But we desire to point out that if the principle involved in this seemingly insignificant matter is acted up to, it takes us right up to a conclusion of very considerable interest. If the income-tax can be applied to Government servants in Persia on the ground that they are deriving their salaries from the Indian revenue, and therefore must contribute towards them like the rest, it can surely be equally well applied to Government servants in London, beginning with his lordship the Secretary of State. Where is the difference, except that its application in the one case would bring in a comparatively large sum, while in the other the realisation must be absolutely insignificant? There is the further difference too, to be sure, that the India Office is a body as powerful as the scattered handful of officials in Persia are weak and voiceless; but one cannot believe for a moment that the Indian Government would take up so contemptible a position as that of justifying taxation on one class of people because they cannot resist it, and of leaving others alone because they might not only resist but resent the proposal. No; we are persuaded that the facts are in evidence a despatch will go home on an early date announcing to Lord Cross and his Council that their salaries are henceforth under deduction for Income-tax, with arrears from April 1st. By way of contrast to the treatment of Government officials in this matter, we may instance how the employés of a private company come off when that company takes the trouble to look after the interests of their servants. A correspondent writes to us that he was employed in 1888 and 1889 on the Bengal Nagpur Railway, and stationed on a point of the line where it passed (for a short distance) through the territory of a Native State. The deductions on account of Income-tax were made as usual by the office at head-quarters; but, when the local employés pointed out that the Act was not in force where they were stationed, the Company bestirred themselves to recover the amount, with the result that soon afterwards those who were concerned had the satisfaction of getting back several months' previous payments in a lump.

THE BOLAN RAILWAY.

(Englishman.)

Commenting upon the recent destruction of the Bolan Railway, an Allahabad paper calmly remarks that the line was the work of Civil and not Royal Engineers, thereby seeking apparently to shift the responsibility for the blunder. The attempt is not ingenuous, but it is a sign, at least, that those who are actually responsible are ashamed of their handiwork. Fortunately for the professional Engineers, there can be no doubt regarding the question of responsibility. It would be as logical to hold the subaltern of a regiment answerable for the bad generalship in a campaign as to hold the engineers who carry out orders accountable for the result. The Bolan Railway was, in the first instance, asked for by the then Commander-in-Chief as a temporary line, and it was constructed as such. As has been pointed out, the railway served a good purpose in enabling the permanent way of part of the Sind-Peshin Railway and Khojak extension to be conveyed to the Peshin plateau, and there cannot be a doubt that, as long as complications with Russia were probable, the construction and maintenance of the Bolan Railway were justified. But when the war scare ceased and the Government of India had leisure to construct a railway on proper alignment, if it was still considered that a second approach to Quetta was necessary, then the saving or wasting of public money rested with that authority which had to settle the question of placing the Bolan Railway on a proper footing, or of pulling it up altogether. It will be time enough to criticise the policy and administration of Civil Engineers when they are allowed to control the Public Works Department, but as long as the Government of India keeps the control of the Public Works in the hands of military men it is to the latter we must look for the proper expenditure of public money. We believe that we are right in saying that Colonel Lindsay, R.E., was the first officer who was placed in charge of the construction of the Bolan Railway, but that he had only succeeded in laying a very small portion of the line when he met with an accident which led to his being invalided. The post was then offered to Colonel Gracey, R.E., who declined it; and the work was eventually entrusted to and completed by Mr. O'Callaghan. We believe that Mr. O'Callaghan repeatedly warned Government that the line could not withstand the floods that swept down the valley, and pointed out a new and good alignment for a permanent railway; but his advice was not accepted. Colonel Wallace, R.E., tried his hand at what was called a high-level line at the top of the Pass, but much of the alignment selected as above having been altered to "save expenditure," a large portion of his work has been swept away with the rest. None of the construction officers can be blamed for the waste and loss which has occurred in the case of this railway. The men who are directly and solely responsible are advisers of the Government of India, and they are not Civil Engineers.

BENGAL.

(October 8.)

THE area under the administration of the Bengal Forest Department during 1889-90 consisted of 5,195 square miles of Reserved Forest, 2,239 square miles of Protected Forests, and 4,034 square miles of Unclassed State Forests and Waste Lands—aggregating 11,468 square miles, which is 5½ per cent. of the total area of the province, viz., 193,198 square miles. The forests are, however, confined to the districts bordering on the sea, the sub-Himalayan tracts and the plateau of Central India, so far as it stretches into Chota Nagpore and Orissa. An area of 207 square miles was added to the Reserves during the past year, and 25 square miles of Protected Forests in the Soonderbuns were farmed out for reclamation. The title of Government to existing reserves is being completed by a compliance with the requirements of the Act; and the inquiries incidental to these proceedings will also secure the record and protection of private easements. The special measures taken for the protection of forests from fires have been increasingly successful, 95 per cent. of the areas thus dealt with having escaped, in spite of the dryness of the season, against 72.9 per cent. in the previous year. The financial results of the past year show a net surplus of Rs. 3,78,454, against Rs. 3,08,738 in 1888-89, results which must, we think, be considered satisfactory and encouraging.

BOMBAY.

(October 11.)

SERIOUS ACCIDENT ON BOARD THE "SERAPIS."—On Wednesday morning, at about eleven o'clock, an accident of a serious nature occurred on board the Serapis, by which eight soldiers of the 17th Lancers were more or less severely injured. It appears that some men of that regiment were hoisting in baggage, when the shackles of a lift they were using broke, and eight men were precipitated into the hold, a distance of about twenty-five feet. The doctor was immediately summoned to the scene, and on examining the men found that two were seriously injured, while the injuries sustained by the other six were of a less serious nature. One of the men, it may be mentioned, had to have one of his arms amputated. The men have all been detained on board, and will leave in the Serapis this morning. Yesterday evening they appeared to be progressing favourably.

THE following is a summary of the Bombay season reports for the past week:—Rain during week fairly good and beneficial to crops in most parts of the Deccan and Southern Mahratta Country and in Ratnagerry; slight in other parts of the Konkan and in parts of Surat, Panch Mahals and Kattywar. More wanted over the greater part of the Southern Mahratta country and in parts of Broach, Panch Mahals, Baroda, Khandeish, Nassik, Ahmednugger and Satara. Standing crops suffering from drought in one taluk of Nassik and one of Ahmednugger; damaged by blight, rats, crabs, locusts, or other insects in parts of Kurrachee, Shikarpur, Hyderabad, and one taluka of Dharwar; otherwise good. Reaping of early crops and sowing of late crops progressing in most districts. Fodder scarce in a few talukas of Nassik, Poona, Ahmednugger, Satara, and Dharwar; and agricultural stock good except in two talukas of Nassik.

THERE was a long and lively debate at Thursday's meeting of the Corporation, when it was asked by Sir Henry Morland to sanction the payment of Rs. 8,553 towards the amount of the excess over the grant for the fête held in the Victoria Gardens on the occasion of the return visit of H.R.H. the Duke of Clarence and Avondale from certain sources. Mr. P. M. Mehta and the Hon. Mr. Javerilal strongly protested against the municipal executives exceeding the grant by about Rs. 12,000, which had been sanctioned by the Corporation after a due and careful consideration. Mr. Mehta observed that as sensible and practical men the Corporation should sanction the amount, but not without expressing their great regret that the outlay granted by them should have been so largely exceeded, and moved an amendment to that effect. Dr. Viegas went a step further, and asked the Municipal Commissioner to submit his report fixing the liability on a particular individual or individuals who had exceeded the grant, so as to enable the Corporation to recoup the amount from him or them in the best way they could. The Municipal Commissioner and Mr. Kirkham made eloquent and persuasive speeches in defence of the executive who were responsible for the excess, but the Corporation, though they did not favour the views of Dr. Viegas, carried Mr. Mehta's amendment by a very large majority.

AMONG the passengers who sailed from Bombay on Saturday last by the mail steamer Assam were Mr. John Marshall, Secretary of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, and Mrs. Marshall. A large number of European and Native gentlemen assembled at the Apollo Bunder to wish them bon voyage, among those present being Lord Colin Campbell, Messrs. John Adams, J. Steiner, H. John, J. Janni, J. Westall, H. Curwen, C. J. Michael, Premchand Roychand, Dewjee Veerjee, Cursetjee Cooverjee Mody, Ludha Ramjee, Mahomed Joosub, Tricum Nathoo, Jewan Dhurumchand, Muncherjee Cursetjee Mistry, Dorabjee Sorabjee Sethna, Sorabjee Nanabhoj Nalaset, Dewjee Dewsee, &c., &c. At 1.45 P.M. Mr. and Mrs. Marshall walked from the Yacht Club, where they had been lunching with some friends, to the head of the pier, and were at once surrounded by their numerous friends, and were loaded—or, rather, overloaded—with garlands of flowers and choice bouquets. Indeed, the floral decorations were so heavy—garland being added to garland, and bouquet to bouquet, as they descended the steps of the bunder—that their friends had to come to Mr. and Mrs. Marshall's assistance and help them in carrying these gifts to the water's edge. We may add that Mr. Marshall will be absent from Bombay for about two months. In departing for Bombay he had to resign the office of Sheriff of Bombay.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES AND PUNJAB.

(Oct. 9.)

LORD WILLIAM BERESFORD has proceeded to Dehra to inspect the Viceregal stables after the recent outbreak of anthrax.

LIEUTENANT McMAHON, Assistant Commissioner, Punjab, has been appointed to the political service, and goes to Zhob.

As the attitude taken up by the Simla Committee in connection with the results of the recent Parliamentary inquiry and the future course of the movement seems to have been misunderstood, the Pioneer, without embarking on polemics, gives the following correct indication of their position in the matter. They cordially acknowledge the great services rendered by Mr. King and their debt of obligation to him; they recognise that through his powerful aid they have made a great stride in obtaining recognition of their grievances and their claims; and that without his assistance it is extremely probable that they would have vainly endeavoured to obtain any concession from Government. At the same time they feel that they made certain reasonable claims to which they consider themselves fully entitled, and that they have only as yet obtained a portion of their claims; they by no means allow, as some people seem to think, that they deliberately asked a good deal with a view to obtaining a portion only. They claimed what they thought they were entitled to, and no more. They also feel that, by the concession of a Parliamentary Committee to investigate their grievances, a great opportunity was offered which, in all probability, cannot occur again; and that while they, so far as in them lay, strained every nerve to make the most of that opportunity, through the force of circumstances, and, to some extent, through mismanagement, which they could not control, the opportunity was not fully utilised. They feel in fact that, from one cause or another, the evidence offered was not as complete as it might have been, and that the witnesses were not the best that might have been offered. They not only consider that the London Committee, who were the immediate advisers on their behalf of Mr. King and Mr. Jenkins, to some extent failed at a critical time, but they consider, now that the Select Committee has submitted its report, and as its recommendations will be carried out by the Government here, that the venue has changed, and that the head-quarters of the Association should be in India. They also propose that the Central Committee should be located for part of the year only at Calcutta, and for the rest at Simla; already the members of the Simla Committee when in Calcutta are ex-officio members of the Calcutta Committee, so that the change is not a very radical one. The members of the Association are well aware that the important business connected with the Parliamentary inquiry has fallen almost entirely on the members of the Simla Committee, and that Committee feels confident that whatever proposals it makes will carry weight with the other local Committees, and will receive full consideration. Those proposals will very shortly be made known; and until they are known it would be well that judgment on the action of the Committee should be suspended.

IS THE SOCIAL REGENERATION OF INDIA POSSIBLE WITHOUT THE AID OF OUR RULERS?

A correspondent writes to the Madras Times :—

SIR,—There are a certain class of reformers and orthodox Hindus who are against the interference of the Government in social matters. These men say that by interfering in social matters the Government would be acting in direct contravention of the pledges given by Her Gracious Majesty the Queen Empress, and maintain that the work of reforming their present cursed sociology should be left to themselves. It is, therefore, necessary to see whether or not we Hindus are able to reform our sociology without the aid of our rulers. The social reform movement was first set on foot by Pundit Iswara Vydisagar, of Bengal; there cannot possibly be two opinions of his high intellectual attainments and the personal influence that he had with his countrymen. This veteran champion of the social reform movement tried as much as he possibly could to effect certain changes in our sociology without the aid of the Government; but what was the result of his untiring exertions? He practically and most signally failed because he was not able to secure a handful of men who would carry on this crusade with him. After spending the best part of his time and substance to work out the cause which he so nobly espoused he was compelled to give it up quite disheartened and disgusted at the apathy of his countrymen. Next to him others have commenced to carry on this agitation; the most prominent amongst them are Mr. Malabari, Mr. Ranade, and Mr. Dewan Bahadur Ragoonath Row. We are all familiar with the writings and sayings of these reformers; how they have travelled each in his own Presidency, and lectured to the masses at large about this social reform movement. What was the result of their missions, and how far have they succeeded are questions which can be better answered by the public than by myself. Undoubtedly, wherever these champions of the social reform cause went and lectured on the subject the whole audience sympathised with them, and their noble cause una voce as long as they were within the hall; but when leaving the hall they left all their sympathies in one corner of the hall itself, so that they may offer the same sympathies, if they should happen to go there again, to hear any other lecturer. Such is the support which these champions of the social reform agitation have been receiving wherever they went. After having worked indefatigably for a certain number of years, and after having spent a good deal of time and money for the social emancipation of their brethren and sisters, they have at last found out that any amount of preaching without the aid of our rulers would produce the same results as would be produced by addressing wooden posts. Seeing that we Hindus are only talking and writing a great deal since the birth of the social reform movement without doing some practical good, Mr. Malabari was compelled to seek the co-operation of philanthropic European ladies and gentlemen in order to take some active steps, and thereby relieve the inexpressible miseries of our poor downtrodden sisters. Many of my brethren know that it is a very awkward thing to go and ask foreigners to help us in our domestic affairs. Knowing this, what steps have we taken, or do we show any signs of taking any active steps besides mere talking, which is proverbial with us Hindus, to assist ourselves without their aid? I hear several of my brethren saying that they sympathise with the social reform movement, and that they do not become outcasts by dining in a house where a widow has been re-married, and, moreover, say that widow-marriages are very commendable; but when they are asked to perform the re-marriage of a widow, or dine in a house where a widow-marriage has been celebrated, they have not the moral courage to do so; thus they show to their critics and rulers that they lack the moral courage to act up to their convictions. It is the want of this moral courage which is the chief drawback with us Hindus, that makes us to seek the co-operation of our rulers whose fundamental policy is to act up to their convictions at any cost. Some of us are urging our rulers to allow us a voice in the administration of our country. When we are urging our rulers to give us a share in the administration of our country, we are, at the same time, seeking their co-operation to effect certain changes in our social system; by doing so we make our rulers understand that we are utterly unable to reform our sociology without their aid. Now mark the beauty that lies with us Hindus when we agitate for political and social reforms. When we are thoroughly unable to eschew certain social evils which exist in our own domestic life without the aid of our rulers we are agitating to govern our countrymen. Is this possible? No, certainly not. I say without fear of contradiction that it is only foreigners who have organised religious, political, and social reform movements, and made us to throw in our lots with those movements. Colonel Olcott and Madame Blavatsky have founded the Theosophical Society, and kindled an interest in us to know something about our religion. Mr. Hume has set on foot this great political movement. Had it not been for the untiring efforts of Mr. Hume, Mr. Norton, and Mr. Digby, the Indian National Congress would have become a nonentity long ago; then Mr. Malabari is carrying on the social reform crusade. It is thus apparent that we Hindus are not able to carry on any agitation without the intercession of foreigners; while they are trying to do us some tangible good we are talking, talking over the subjects, and ratifying and modifying resolutions after resolutions. If anyone of my brethren should say that the co-operation of our rulers is not necessary, then I beg to ask them how far they have reformed their sociology, and what practical measures they have adopted for the social emancipation of their poor and downtrodden sisters? The answer to this question will solve the knotty problem whether the social regeneration of India is possible without the aid of our rulers.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE Government have sanctioned the addition of a ninth Company, composed exclusively of Afridis, to the 1st Punjab Infantry.

GENERAL EAST is likely to be President, and Colonel Sanderson a member, of the Committee which may sit on the Cantonment regulations in Calcutta in the cold weather; but nothing is yet definitely settled.

THE Nawab of Bhawalpur has asked the Government of India to let his Imperial Service Corps be sent on any frontier expedition which may be starting for war operations this year in order that they may be rendered more efficient.

AN Army Circular has been issued on the subject of field deposits in the case of British and Native troops. Such deposits are under no circumstances to bear interest, and never to exceed at one time a full month's pay and allowances.

THE Brigade Commanders at the Attock manœuvres will be chosen from among the senior officers of batteries and regiments present on the spot. The staff officers will be drawn mainly from the Rawalpindi and Peshawar district commands.

AMONG the ordnance demands made by the Government of India this year are the latest pattern guns for four heavy batteries. The pattern asked for is 4-in. breech-loading guns and 5-in. breech-loading howitzers. Armament for one siege train, we are glad to hear, has also been indented for, including four 5-in. guns and two 6-in. howitzers, all breech-loaders.

SERGEANT JOHN DRAY, of the Ordnance Department, was drowned in the Hughli on Oct. 5th in attempting to return to a powder-boat, of which he was in charge, from the steamer Pundooah. This vessel was proceeding down the river. Mr. Owens, a passenger by her, jumped in after Sergeant Dray, but the latter never rose. Mr. Owens himself was carried away by the tide, and picked up in an exhausted condition.

It is to be hoped that the Government of Hyderabad will not be so much occupied with resignations and threats of resignations amongst its officials, and the mock complications to which they give rise, as to lose sight of the representations recently brought before it by Major Afsur Jung, the State's foremost soldier, on the condition of the cavalry. Major Afsur Jung showed clearly that though the cavalry of Hyderabad is celebrated for its good appearance, it wants before it can be considered as an efficient force such things as arms, accoutrements, transport and tentage. With these—as they would not be difficult to provide—the Nizam's cavalry might be made as good as they look. The memorandum was referred to a Committee of course. What has become of it since?

THE long-expected Army Circular has been issued setting forth the regulations governing the service of Royal Artillery officers in the Indian Ordnance Department. First appointments will be made for five years, and the Government may extend this period to ten years. Officers of the rank of Lieutenant and Captain will be seconded as at present. Such officers serving in the administrative and manufacturing branch of the department as the Government may select will be allowed to serve continuously in India under certain conditions. They must have ten years' approved service, and if selected they will be regarded as having finished their career in the Royal Artillery. Fifteen years' continuous departmental service will entitle such selected officers (except those of the late Indian Artillery) to Indian pensions on the Staff Corps scale, provided they have not less than twenty years' Indian service. They will also be entitled to leave under the Staff Corps rules.

DEPARTURE OF THE TROOPSHIP SERAPIS.

Her Majesty's Troopship Serapis, Captain C. P. G. Hicks, sailed on Thursday, Oct. 9, for London, with 57 officers, 14 ladies, 11 children, 974 women and 110 children. The following are the names of the saloon passengers:—

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

RĀMA-CHARITA-MĀNASA.*

A book of unusual importance has just appeared in India, which ought to attract, and, no doubt, will attract, much attention. It is of some interest on account of the handsome manner in which it is got up, and from the grandeur of its typography, its page-bordering, its many-coloured titling, and its careful lithographs. In these respects it is probably the handsomest book yet published in India; but it is chiefly remarkable as the first critical edition which has been produced of the great Indian poem, generally spoken of as the "Rāmāyan of Tulsidās." Its proper name, as the author states in one verse of his poem, is the "Rāma-Charita-Mānasa" ("the Holy Lake of the Actions of Rāma"), and it recounts the doings of the hero-god, holding up each incident as an example of uprightness to vacillating man. The book before us is evidence that the spirit of Western scholarship is taking possession of the East, and is beginning to show itself in practical results. Hitherto it has been deemed enough, by an Indian, to carefully print some version of a book, or to make such changes in it as his preconceptions prompted. The functions of critical editorship were never exercised, and even the desirability of strictly accurate texts was unrecognised. A change seems to be coming, and its first fruits are now before us in the shape of the splendid volume on which we are commenting. Bābū Rām Dīn Sinha, of Bankipore, has procured photographs of the portion of the work existing at Rājāpur, in the ancient poet's own handwriting, which he has edited with painstaking care. Thus, as far as one quarter of the book goes, we have now a text just as the author wrote it. The remainder of the work is taken from the manuscript in the possession of the Mahārājā of Benares, and which was written within twenty-four years of the poet's death. The differences between these and the ordinary versions current are many and serious; but the learned Bābū has been influenced by no considerations other than the desire to present a trustworthy text. The handsome manner in which the book is brought out expresses his consciousness of the value of his labour; and no one who has tested his work, or who understands the sublimity and exalted purity of the original composition, will fail to recognise the value of the service he has rendered to his countrymen, to Oriental scholars, and to mankind at large.

The "Rāmāyan of Tulsidās" is a truly wonderful poem. It is one of the few noblest books of the world, on account of its moral exaltation, its breadth of thought, its universality of sentiment, its natural graces, its devotional fervour, and its undying poetic vitality. It is a book for prince and for peasant, for the wealthy and for the poorest, for the happy and for the miserable; it appeals to every noble instinct, teaching man to be better and purer, true in all his dealings, and humble before God and his fellow-man. It is pure and innocent in expression. There is not one indelicate allusion in its whole poem; and it speaks well for Indian nature that a work of such high moral excellence should have won the hearts of the entire people, and should have become the standard of a worthy life. Little as this book is at present known to Europe, it is one of the epoch-marking books of the world; and when the Hindī language attracts the students which it ought, Tulsidās will be universally recognised as one of the enlightened benefactors of mankind. In the meantime the careful translation of Mr. Growse will place at the service of Europeans the ideas the book contains; but not, of course, the charms of expression which make the teaching seductive.

Bābū Rām Dīn Sinha has placed an accurate text of this extraordinary work before his countrymen and before all students of Hindī. He has prefixed a scholarly preface, treating of the various texts and of the old form of Hindī in which the verses are written. Photographs of the manuscripts from which the edition has been prepared are given, and other interesting lithographs also. A poetic life of Tulsidās, followed by a prose sketch in Hindī by the well-known scholar, G. A. Grierson, then occurs; this is followed by some clever verses in praise of the composition, and lastly, comes the grand old poem itself. The volume is a present for a king; and it is to be hoped that the Indian Government will mark its appreciation of useful scholarly labour, and its desire for the moral progress of the people, by presenting copies of this soul-purifying book to men of influence in India, and to public libraries and schools. The poem is a veritable text-book of morality, and the corrupt versions of it are read in all the schools of Northern India. It is, therefore, only reasonable to expect the Government to spread the correct text now that it has been published. Bābū Rām Dīn Sinha is a peaceful patriot; and no doubt he will be left to enjoy the reward of a good conscience, as all peaceful patriots are. He has, however, won the grateful thanks of those who desire the mental and moral progress of the Indian people. Sir Stuart C. Bayley has marked his appreciation of the work by accepting its dedication, and has shown himself in this, as in so many other ways, solicitous for the welfare of the people committed to his charge.

COLONEL PRIDEAUX, Resident, Jeypore, who has just arrived in Simla, has been granted six months' leave. Dr. Hendley, Resident Surgeon, holds charge meanwhile.

MR. J. R. NAYLOR, C.S.I., Remembrancer of Legal Affairs, has been allowed special leave on urgent private affairs for six months from 11th October, 1890. Mr. H. Ratty, C.S., acts for him; and Mr. J. D. S. FitzMaurice, C.S., acts as Judge and Sessions Judge of Ruttanagerry during the absence of Mr. H. Batey, C.S.

A CORRESPONDENT writes to the Civil and Military Gazette from Murree:—"The funeral of Lieutenant W. L. Hutt, of the Seaforth Highlanders, whose sad death I wrote to you of on Monday morning, was a most impressive and picturesque ceremony. The body was taken, in the early morning, from Lady Roberts' Home, where he died, to the Station Hospital, from which place the funeral cortege started about midday. First came the firing party of the Seaforth, with arms reversed, marching, of course, in slow time, with their white spats glancing and their sporans swinging in measured rhythm. Then the bands of the 5th Fusiliers, the Devonshire Regiment, the Dragoon Guard band from the Depot, and last of all the band of the Seaforth. Then behind these came the pipers of the regiment, in their dark-green uniforms and waving plaids, followed by their pipe-major. Then the coffin, with six officers of the regiment as pall-bearers. After these the Colonel and others, and then the whole of the officers up here, a number of soldiers of the different regiments bringing up the rear. The scene, as the long procession wound its way down the hill side among the oaks and pines, was most imposing. Pand after band took up the music, and of all, the strains of the pipes, as they came sighing through the trees, were far and away the most impressive."

* "Rāma-Charita-Mānasa." ["The Lake of the Doings of Rāma."] By Goswāmī Tulsidās. Carefully edited from the original manuscript. (Published by Bābū Rām Dīn Sinha. Bankipore, 1890.)

INDIA AS A WINTER RESORT.

It is satisfactory to notice from the "passenger lists" which we publish weekly that India is about to be visited this year by an increasing number of travellers, male and female, who are wending their way Eastwards to seek health, relaxation, or change of scene and air. A few years ago such passenger lists contained the names of only a few of such kind of wanderers; the majority of names belonged to officers, civil or military, who were going back to the land of exile and regrets under the special privilege notified in the Gazette as "Permitted to return." What a cruel mockery these words have been through many weary years to a multitude of men who looked upon that privilege as one of the saddest incidents of their lives! So far as the services—civil and military—are concerned, it may be said that the "going back" to India is not altogether now the hated thing which it was to many in the days gone by. Those were the days when communication between England and the East was slow, troublesome, and expensive for the man whose purse was slender, and who had not been fortunate in securing early any golden fruit from the famed pagoda tree. The "going back," too, in those days meant probably the leaving in England of wife and children for long years, during which period of separation the bread-winner would have to toil and suffer under all the drawbacks and trials of distasteful or uncongenial work, which had, however, to be daily done. There is now happily a change for the better, and he—the bread-winner who has given hostages to fortune—can manage, when leave or furlough rules permit, to kill time and the wrongs of estrangement, thanks to expedited trains viâ Brindisi, and the quick steamers of the P. and O. The "permission to return" to India is not now the sad satire which it sometimes was in the days we are referring to, and which some foolish people still insist upon designating as the "good old times."

Now the returning soldier or civilian has more cheerful associates on the voyage back than the comrades who were formerly merely miserable multiples of himself. He finds pleasant people going to the East for a pleasure trip, and this helps to lessen the distance between England and India in his imagination, and helps him also to make lighter thought of the pangs of separation from near and dear ones. Of course it may be his misfortune to find in train or on board ship the typical M.P. who is journeying to India for the purposes of gaining information regarding the iniquity of British rule in its dispensation of injustice towards the "downtrodden" two hundred and fifty dusky millions of his fellow-subjects in the East; but if there are other travellers as now, certain to be of better and brighter nature, the inquisitive M.P. can be ignored or laughed at. And so the returning official may make himself very happy in the more congenial society of sensible travellers who are going to India to "see" and be "amused," and not solely for the purpose of being "instructed."

So far so good—but a danger threatens. The medical Press has commenced to recommend India as a winter resort for invalids. We read that "for those who suffer from chronic bronchitis or asthma the climate of Bombay is very suitable," and that "the winter in India is much to be commended in cases of neurasthenia and hypochondriasis." Now this is hardly fair to the Anglo-Indian official who, by the unerring kindness of the Secretary of State for India has been "permitted to return." Terrible and intolerable as the presence of an inquisitive M.P. may be on the deck of a P. and O. steamer, a crowd of passengers in the saloon suffering from chronic bronchitis, asthma, neurasthenia or hypochondriasis would hardly be acceptable as an adequate relief. For the sake of all who have to return to India, whether of the official or non-official classes, we make bold to express the hope that the doctors will change their minds and send their patients afflicted with any of the above diseases elsewhere, or at least recommend them to take another route than that of viâ Brindisi and the P. and O. The British Medical Journal is, however, very inexorable on this point, and insists upon communicating the following information for the benefit of the travelling patients :—

"The facilities for getting comfortably to India now are much greater than they were in former years. The sea voyage from Brindisi to Bombay only lasts fourteen days, and the establishment of the train de luxe, or the "Brindisi express," which runs in connection with the mail steamers, has abolished the risks and miseries connected with a hurried overland journey to Brindisi. The train leaves London at 3.15 P.M. on Fridays, and reaches Brindisi shortly before 4 P.M. on Sundays (giving two unbroken nights' rest in the train), in time to allow the passengers to dine comfortably on board the steamer at six o'clock. Hot meals served in the dining saloon, with good sleeping accommodation, make it possible for an invalid to travel comfortably from London to Brindisi during winter without leaving the train, so that, practically, there would be no undue exposure after leaving Calais. To the traveller whose health is not materially affected there is, of course, the route open from London to Bombay by the Mediterranean. Travellers who go for the sake of health, and who are at all invalids, will, during winter, act wisely by selecting the Brindisi route, in order to avoid unnecessary exposure to cold."

This is too bad, however true. But there is balm in Gilead, or, in other words, a chance that the healthy passenger may not have to find his steamer a floating hospital. The same authority declares that a winter trip to India costs as little as a trip to the Riviera :—

"A patient who travels first-class all the way, with the extras for the train de luxe, might spend four months in India, an additional month being taken up by the journey to Bombay and back, for a cost of some 200 guineas, putting the travelling expenses at £130, and four months' stay in India at 11s. per day, with £10 for extras. This is the sum for which it could be done, whilst allowing the maximum of comfort in travelling."

If the asthmatic and hypochondriacal, &c., can be assured on other authority that they can live for four months in India, with the "maximum of comfort," for 11s. per day, let them make the experiment. But if they survive it the report which they will give on their return home will prevent others, we imagine, from following their example.

THE PRESIDENTIAL ARMIES OF INDIA.

BY THE LATE

Colonel S. RIVETT-CARNAC.

(Formerly 11th Hussars)

WITH A CONTINUATION AND GENERAL
REMARKS ON INDIA.

By the Author of "Our Burmese Wars and Relations with Burma," "Distinguished Anglo-Indians," &c.

"The volume is a graphic, stirring record of the English in India, as shown in the achievement of the armies of the three Presidencies. It is a book that deserves wide popularity."—Spectator.

"An interesting book."—DAILY NEWS.

"It is one of the best historical narratives of the real conquest of India that has ever been written. This is a book with which every Anglo-Indian should be pleased. Page after page it gives us some information we had not before. It lets us see far more, as it were, of the military operations of the Company—of its strength and its ambition—than almost any book of its size has hitherto done."—GLASGOW HERALD.

"A valuable contribution to the history of India, by the late Colonel S. Rivett-Carnac. The book has been edited and completed by the accomplished author of 'Our Burmese Wars and Relations with Burma,' and is very interesting."—THE FREEMAN'S JOURNAL.

"Colonel Laurie has done his part thoroughly and well, and we can cordially recommend this most interesting volume to the consideration of the reading public."—DAILY EXPRESS (Dublin).

"Colonel Carnac's share of the book is confined to the first six chapters, the remainder being furnished by Colonel Laurie. . . . It is the sort of book that every man in India ought to possess, for a reference to its pages would decide many points that are constantly cropping up. . . . The book is worthy of Colonel Carnac's reputation."—THE INDIAN.

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

(The only Quarterly Review in India.)

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it has there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenaeum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophecy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

BROAD ARROW AND

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE.
ESTABLISHED 1832.

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to appointments and other service news, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of illustrated articles is appearing weekly on Regiments, Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service inventions."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs."

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

"Earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

What higher aim can man attain, than conquest over human pair?

JEOPARDY OF LIFE, THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset!! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm. The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—J. C. ENO.

CAUTION.—Examine each Bottle, and see that the Capsule is marked ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." Without it you have been imposed on by a worthless imitation.

OLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS, POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S PATENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced life they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 3, 1890.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 18th October; from Allahabad and Madras to the 16th October; and from Calcutta to the 15th October.

THE Viceroy was to leave Simla on Oct. 21st.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF left Simla on Oct. 15th, and arrived in Bombay, Oct. 18.

It is reported that the Nawab of Cambay has been deprived of all authority in his State for a period of two years.

THE Calcutta Health Society has addressed another memorandum to the Government of India regarding the segregation of lepers.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF in India, in a Headquarters Order issued on Oct. 15th, places on record his high appreciation of the conspicuous ability Major-General Elles has displayed in carrying on the duties of the important appointment of Adjutant-General, which he has held for the last three years and a-half.

At the conclusion of the Attock Camp the Defence Committee will meet under the presidency of H.E. Sir Frederick Roberts, at Rawalpindi, to decide upon a scheme of defence for that cantonment.

LIEUTENANT HARRIS, recently in charge of the Cashmere troops for Gilgit, has been appointed Assistant to Captain Hoggie, Inspecting Officer Native States Armies.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE has sanctioned a local allowance of Rs. 100 a-month being given to all Forest officers of the rank of third grade Conservator and under serving in Burma.

DURING the official year 1889-90 there were 591,327 scholars attending 11,716 public and private schools in the Bombay Presidency.

THE Factory Commission has closed its inquiries in Bombay.

MR. FAZULLBHOY VISRAM has been appointed a member of the Bombay Legislative Council.

H.H. THE THAKORE of BHOWNUGGER has given a donation of Rs. 5,000 to the Homeless Leper Fund.

THE 33rd, 38th, 39th, and 40th Bengal Infantry (Hindustani Regiments) are to be converted into Goorkha Dogra, Punjab, Mahomedans, and Trans-Frontier Pathans Battalions respectively.

THE Madras Harbour Trust Office has been destroyed by fire.

ARRANGEMENTS are reported to be in progress for starting a cotton mill at Agra.

THE prospect of the Burma rice crop is good. The actual area planted is 3,917,987 acres.

FORTY watchers of cattle have been killed by wolves in the Hoshangabad district, Central Provinces.

LORD WILLIAM BERESFORD returned to Simla on Oct. 11th, and resumed the duties of Military Secretary.

COLONEL PRIDEAUX, Resident at Jeypore, will probably act for Colonel Parry, Nisbet as Resident in Kashmir.

A FAREWELL dinner was given to General Elles at the United Service Club, Simla, on Oct. 11th.

THE 1st Bomlay Lancers are to receive the distinction of being allowed to call themselves the Duke of Connaught's Own.

CAPTAIN YOUNGHUSBAND and party reached Kilian, the frontier village on the plains of Yarkand, at the end of August. All were well.

BRIGADIER GENERAL GALBRAITH, the Adjutant-General elect, has arrived at Simla and taken over charge from General Elles.

THE new through telegraph line from Bombay to Calcutta via the Bengal Nagpur Railway will be opened on April 1st.

THE party told off for the Kiang-Tung frontier survey will consist of Mr. Archer, Vice-Consul at Zimmé; Captain Fulton, 1st Gurkhas, in charge of the escort; Surgeon W. L. Gray, Army Medical Staff; and Mr. J. M. Kennedy, Survey Officer.

THE Postal Department have under consideration the question of always running a special train from Bombay to Calcutta whenever the Overland Mails miss the ordinary train.

SATISFACTORY intelligence continues to be received regarding the attitude of the Southern Lushais. The Chiefs of five villages concerned in the Chyma Valley raid in 1888 have just made an unconditional submission.

MR. LYALL, Commissioner of Chittagong, has arrived at Simla to consult with the Government of India about Lushai affairs, and more particularly as regards the opening of through communication between Chittagong and Mandalay.

EACH Survey Party for the Zhob Valley Railway will be accompanied by a small escort of Native troops and a detachment of the new Zhob levies.

COMPLETE estimates have been prepared for the extension of the Simla Waterworks, and the scheme has received the approval of Mr. O'Callaghan and Colonel Forbes, who have been consulted on the difficult points.

THE P. and O. and British India Companies have reduced their rates 25 and 20 per cent. respectively on behalf of all ladies travelling to and from India under the auspices of Lady Dufferin's fund.

THE Chief Commissioner of Assam and Brigadier-General Collett will not make final dispositions for the Lushai Expedition until Mr. McCabe has reported what Chiefs have joined in the outbreak. Meanwhile 600 of the 43rd Gurkhas will be held in readiness to move at short notice.

DR. HAWTHORNE, the owner and editor of the Mussoorie paper called the Beacon, being unable to pay the fine of Rs. 500 inflicted on him for disregard of the law in matters relating to the registration of his paper, has been committed to prison and his press attached.

OWING to Sir Edward Buck having resumed charge of the Agriculture Secretaryship of the Government of India the services of the Hon. Mr. W. C. Benett have been replaced at the disposal of the North-West Provinces Government. Mr. Benett takes a month's leave before rejoining his post in the Secretariat.

THE first stage of the Warburton defamation case is over. The Deputy Commissioner of Lahore has found both the defendants guilty; Sirdar Dyal Singh, the proprietor of the Tribune, has to pay a fine of Rs. 2,500, and the editor, Sitala Kant Chatterjee, Rs. 1,000, or in default six months' imprisonment. The defendants intend to appeal.

JUDGING from the letters that are appearing on the subject, it will be news even to many of those who write about the promotion and other eligibilities of the Indian.

Army to know that a "Staff Corps Promotion Fund" is already in existence, with a Committee and the framework of an organisation. Messrs. Grindlay and Co., London, and Grindlay, Groom and Co., of Calcutta, have been appointed agents of the movement.

SIR GEORGE WHITE expected to reach Fort Sandeman by October 30th, and thence will move against the Shiranis. Orders have been issued for a battalion and a half of Native infantry, three troops of cavalry, and six mountain guns, taken from the Dera Ismail and Dera Ghazi Khan garrisons, to assemble at Daraban by the end of the current month to co-operate with General White's force. These will practically form an escort for Mr. Bruce, the Political Officer, who will march into the Shirani country from the east.

NOTES.

THE news from India to-day is of little note, except that, according to the Times telegrams, the Government of India has entered upon another of its "little wars." In this case, however, it is to be hoped that the result of the expedition will be "short, sharp, and decisive."

WE reprint to-day an article from last Saturday's Spectator concerning a paragraph quoted from ourselves. We took the announcement from the Bombay Press, but are doing all we can to get further information on the subject, which, when obtained, we shall place at the disposal of our able and friendly contemporary.

ACCORDING to the Pioneer the ill-feeling between Mahomedans and Hindus at Aligarh has become so pronounced that the Lieutenant-Governor has felt compelled to interfere in the interests of the peace of the community. It appears that the Hindus lately adopted a series of resolutions having for their object the exclusion of the Mahomedans from all business and social relations with the Hindus. Had things been allowed to drift the Mahomedans would in all probability have issued a counterblast of a similar character and purport, and the end would almost inevitably have been a breach of the peace. The Lieutenant-Governor has accordingly directed the Commissioner of the division to convey to the leading citizens of both races his strong disapprobation of the existing state of affairs. In particular his Honour severely censures the conduct of those citizens who, while claiming to be men of education and enlightenment, have yet made it their business to embitter the controversy; and he requires that the names of such as persevere in this course should be handed up, in order that they may be struck off the darbar list. The ringleaders will further be reminded that they will be held responsible in the fullest degree should any breach of the peace occur.

THE Simla Committee of the European Civil Services Association have issued a circular to the various branches, in which it is stated that it would be imprudent to break up the organisation while so many points affecting the Uncovenanted claims are still unsettled. Only one of the measures they bring to mind recommended by the Parliamentary Committee has been acted upon—viz., payment of pensions at the rate of 1s. 9d. It is also pointed out that, owing to the strong opinion expressed that no distinction should be drawn between the pension and leave rules of Europeans and Natives, it may be a considerable time before the recommendations for improving such rules will be acted upon. The question is still further complicated by the report of the Public Service Commission, in which it was recommended that pay, furlough rules, and pensions should be determined for the European and Native services respectively in all departments on a distinct basis appropriate to the domicile of the members of those services. As the questions still at issue will be referred to the Government of India by the Secretary of State, and as the London Uncovenanted Committee have assumed an independence of action which has not been satisfactory to the members of the Association, it is proposed that the only recognised headquarters should be for the future that of a Central Committee in India, a professional and efficient representative or agent being appointed in London who would be entirely under the orders of the Indian Committee. In times of importance or emergency it would rest with the Committee to associate with him representative leading members of the service either on leave or retired. The very early opinion of the branches is requested on these proposals, as, if they are approved, measures will be taken at once to carry them out, and place the Association on a new basis.

FICTION is stranger than truth. The Times of India says:—"It would be interesting to discover who is the Calcutta correspondent of the London Daily Chronicle. He has sent home to his journal an account of the Goa election affray, which, for wildly flagrant misrepresentation and exaggeration, it would be hard to surpass. 'Terrible Scenes at Goa—Women and Children Bayoneted,' is the sensational heading of his highly-spiced telegram; and we learn in the course of it that there were two days' fighting, that 300 persons were killed and wounded, and that the Governor, who became a fugitive, justified from his hiding place the action of the troops, on the ground that a revolution had been declared, with the object of overturning the Government and securing British intervention. We are also told that the 'troops are said to be committing the wildest excesses, shooting down people indiscriminately; that 'several popular leaders have been arrested and shot; that the guard at the Governor's palace have 'bayoneted many women and children, who fled to the palace for protection; and that 'dynamite bombs were thrown at the palace last night by a band of citizen soldiers, who appeared suddenly, surprising the military posts.' As our readers are aware, there is not a single word of truth in the whole story as thus told above in the words of this precious Calcutta correspondent. It is one of the most monstrous and impudent pieces of exaggeration we have ever encountered. If there are many correspondents here of the same kidney as the Chronicle gentleman there need be no wonder at the ignorance which prevails at home about Indian affairs."

H.E. THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF, in a Headquarter's Order issued on October 15th, pays a warm tribute of praise to the retiring Adjutant-General. Sir Frederick Roberts says:—"I cannot allow Major-General Elles to give up the responsible position of Adjutant-General in India without placing on record my high appreciation of the conspicuous ability he has displayed in carrying on the duties of the important appointment he has held for the last three years and a-half, and I must express my deep regret that the exigencies of the service oblige me to dispense with the assistance and co-operation, not merely of a thoroughly competent official, but of a valued personal friend." Then, after having traced Major-General Elles' military career, Sir Frederick continues: "Throughout his career Major-General Elles has displayed those qualities which pre-eminently fit officers for the staff of the Army. He is surpassed by none in tact, judgment, and courtesy, and he is distinguished for his administrative capacity, military ability, and literary attainments. His merits as a soldier and staff officer have been appropriately recognised by his being appointed a civil C.B. in 1879; aide-de-camp to the Queen in 1881; and a military C.B. in 1887. In relinquishing his present appointment for a District command, General Elles may rest assured that his work at army headquarters is not likely to be forgotten; that his efforts to improve the army in India must produce a lasting effect; and that in exchanging staff duties for an executive command he carries with him the esteem and affection of every officer with whom he has been associated."

THE Government of the Punjab has issued strict instructions to the Deputy Commissioner and railway authorities of Peshawur that all consignments of arms and ammunition received there for the Ameer of Afghanistan should be opened, examined, and compared with the export license before they are allowed to be removed from the railway premises, the District Superintendent of Police being personally charged with the examination of such packages.

THE Civil and Military Gazette gives the following as the plan of action resolved upon by the Committee of the Staff Corps Promotion Fund in India:—“(1) Letters of an intemperate tendency are deprecated as doing harm to the cause, and prejudicing the case in the eyes of the authorities and of the public. (2) Combination is not invited, but individual action among officers is earnestly requested, and it should take the following form: the sending of memorials setting forth their individual cases to his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in India as soon after the 15th instant as possible; this will strengthen the hands of the authorities out here, who cannot well move in the matter unless it be brought officially to their cognisance. (3) In order to defray expenses those who are of opinion that the future prospects of the S.C. have altered from what was anticipated when they joined it, as regards promotion, rate of exchange for home and furlough remittances, &c., are invited to send, individually if possible, a donation of one day's net pay and allowances of the current month; this money to be lodged to the credit of the 'S. C. Promotion and Pension Fund' with the following:—Grindlay and Company, London; H. King and Company, London; King and Company, Calcutta; Grindlay, Groom, Bombay; and the agent of either of the above firms in Madras. These are the only firms who will be officially connected with the fund. (4) A circular will be issued in a few days, and members are invited to communicate its contents to members of parliament and influential friends at home. No further action will be taken just at present, until it be seen whether the authorities mean to make any inquiry into the matter. If not, the matter will be placed in the hands of Messrs. Grindlay and Co. and King and Company, and of the Home Committee, now forming. (5) It is begged that officers refrain from writing to the Press; but they are invited to communicate with Messrs. Grindlay, Groom and Company, Bombay; or Grindlay and Company, or H. King and Company, London, giving, briefly, their individual opinion upon points in the circular about to issue. These letters will be strictly confidential,

(Times Correspondents.)

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, Nov. 1.

The Zhob force has begun its advance into the Shirani country in two columns. One proceeds to block the south side, the other under General White, encloses the west and north sides. Troops from the Punjab, also in two columns, enter at two points from Draband. No reply has been received to the ultimatum recently sent. A skirmish took place on Thursday on the Punjab side. Thirty sabres sent to reconnoitre the Draband Pass were opposed by the Shiranis, who, however, were routed with the loss of three killed and some wounded. There were no casualties on our side.

The Factory Commission finished its sittings in Calcutta yesterday. The evidence taken is to much the same effect as that taken at Bombay and Cawnpore.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

THE INCOME-TAX IN ASSAM.

(Englishman.)

A report on the working of the Income-tax in Assam comes opportunely to hand, in face of the official declaration that the “irregularities” which occurred when the tax was a novelty are rapidly disappearing, and it serves to show the unbearable annoyance and friction which this form of assessment continues to excite. With regard to the assessment of the tax on commissions earned by tea planters on the profits of tea concerns, information is said to be wanting in almost all the district reports. The Deputy Commissioner of Sylhet writes:—“The difficulty about commission seems to be that the amount is only known a long time after a year closes, and is often not paid to a manager for a long time after the accounts have been made up.” In the same connection the Deputy Commissioner of Sibsagar reports:—“Much opposition has been experienced from planters in the realisation of the tax assessed on commission and salaries said in England. The Government of India have ordered that salaries paid in England should be assessed. This is looked upon as a great hardship, as the law on the subject is not understood. As to commission, very few planters have reported the receipt of any commission at all.” It is not that the law on the subject is “not understood,” but that the law is held to be unjust, and it says a great deal for the candour and good nature of the planting community that the Government is able to realise a single rupee of tax on commissions. The Chief Commissioner is at present not in a position to make any definite remarks on the subject, but agrees with the Commissioner of the Assam Valley Districts in thinking that commissions to a very great extent escape taxation. Turning to another branch of the subject, it seems that out of 5,218 persons assessed 1,452, or more than 27 per cent., preferred objections. Of these 985 were rejected either partially or wholly by the Collectors, and 58 appeals for revision were accordingly filed before the Commissioner. In 32 cases the appeals were rejected, in 15 the assessments were reduced, in the nine the assesses were entirely exempted, while two cases remained unsettled at the close of the year. Such a state of things can hardly justify the statement that discontent is disappearing. An attractive chapter on “coercive processes” shows that 3,840 processes were issued against 2,807 in the previous year—that is to say, there was an increase of 1,033; in 203 cases property was attached, and in 32 cases sold. The total amount recovered by these efforts was a little over two lakhs.

THE HARD FATE OF HINDU WOMEN.

(Pioneer.)

The English Government, many years ago, after a long period of hesitation, resolved to suppress suttee. That piece of barbarism has been swept away. But are not the wrongs and miseries which remain as cruel as suttee; as fatal to human happiness; as degrading to human life? The frightful stories, which every now and then are revealed in our law courts, seem to hint at a state of things which it is deplorable to contemplate as existing under a Government, which has for its avowed object the happiness of its subjects. Is the English Legislature, are English courts to go on for ever enforcing, by all the powerful machinery of the law, practices which every Englishman regards as an abomination, which he would sooner die than enforce in the case of any child of his own? Domestic reforms ought, of course, to begin in domestic circles and to be urged on the Government by a consensus of public opinion. But then, what chance is there of such a consensus in a country like India? What consensus was there for the abolition of suttee? For the law allowing Hindu widows to remarry? For the law protecting the property and status of the convert from Hinduism to another creed? For the law suppressing infanticide or the mutilation and degradation of boys? As Sir John Strachey has so forcibly pointed out, one of our troubles in India is that public opinion gives us little or no assistance in the direction of practical reforms, the removal of practical grievances. Young India prefers to give its attention, to devote its rhetoric, to more ambitious projects. The Congress, bent on introducing India, per saltum, to all the latest refinements of modern European Socialism, scorns to notice the painful circumstance that in every Hindu home a law is at work, which preserve so a comparatively civilised community, some of the silliest and most cruel traditions of an archaic epoch—a law which, based on fictions which it is scarcely conceivable that any educated man can tend to believe, condemns to unmerited misery a large and especially helpless section of society: a law which, hateful anywhere, must be especially repugnant to a race among which family feeling counts for as much as it does among the Hindus; a law which more than any other at the present day retards the progress of Hindu Society, and which must, so long as it exists, effectually estrange it from the community of civilised nations, from the sympathies of every civilised society.

THE BEVERAGES OF INDIA.

(Pioneer.)

Brought to the test of statistics, the facts about our consumption of alcoholic drinks are very much what a person would imagine them to be from the range of his everyday experience. A new beer-drinking era is setting in India, but it is not the once familiar names of Hodson, Tennant or Allsopp, but the light and vastly more wholesome German beers which have brought about the revival. The Pilsener beer vendors issued a table the other day showing that their importations had increased threefold within the last few years. Incidentally it showed also that the sale of other light brands in their smaller quantities had increased even more rapidly in proportion. The figures of Mr. O'Connor's report show that the quantity of gallons of all kinds imported has risen from little more than a million in 1884-85 to more than two-and-three-quarter millions last year. The increase in the British garrison partly accounts for this. Mr. O'Connor believes it to be partly due to the increasing number of mechanics, railway hands, and miners coming out to the country. Also he tells us (and we do hope that this will not catch the eye of Mr. Evans) that the Madras coolies working in Burma have developed a decided taste for malt liquor which their high wages enable them to gratify. Whisky apparently has reached its zenith, but has not yet begun to decline. Gin and rum are distinctly giving way, the latter possibly because of the improving quality of the rum made in India. On the whole spirits have fallen off, and we presume that the decline will be even more marked in the current year, when the higher duty comes into force. The wine trade has decreased even more than the spirits, as might be expected when the public to whom the consumption is confined have suffered to a man from the low rate of exchange. With the revival of the rupee we may see a recovery here, but the force of habits has to be taken account of, and the effects of a general change in the value of incomes are not fully developed in a day, albeit the expanding process comes more readily to most of us than that of retrenchment.

MILITARY AID AND NATIVE STATES.

(Bombay Gazette.)

The two leading States in Kathiawar—Junagadh and Bhownugger—have come forward, freely and liberally, to co-operate with the Imperial Government in the event of a military emergency. The force at the disposal of both States is, of course, small, but a good deal has been done both at Junagadh and Bhownugger in the State horse-breeding establishments, which has led to a marked improvement in the quality of the horses available both for police and military remounts. The co-operations which the Nawab and the Thakore Saheb have offered will be well within the capacity of both States, and we are not surprised to learn that the offers have been very cordially welcomed by the Supreme Government. The Nawab of Junagadh's offer is to keep a hundred and fifty foot and fifty sowars available in case of an emergency. They will wear the Junagadh uniform, and they will be drilled either by pensioned non-commissioned officers in the Nawab's service, or by officers from a British Native Regiment, the equipment being such as a British Officer appointed to report on the matter may suggest. Once a year they will be sent to Rajkote, or some other convenient centre, to drill for a few days with similar corps to be furnished by the other States. The Bhownugger contribution will be on a somewhat different basis. The Thakore Saheb's offer was to keep up a transport corps of 300 strong horses, with men and gearing ready to go on service at the three days' notice, and while on service to be maintained and recruited by the Bhownugger State. When not required for service the corps will form the regular body of sowars employed by the State as messengers, guards, and so on. His Highness has also offered to keep his armed police in such an efficient condition as to be fit to take part in keeping the peace of the province should the regular British troops, now stationed at Rajkote, be called upon distant service. In order that the efficiency of these auxiliaries should be secured the Thakore has asked that they may be inspected once a year by the General of the Deesa district. The readiness with which these two progressive and influential States have come forward in this matter deserves recognition, and there can be no doubt that if a practical view be taken by Government of certain limitations upon the capacity and resources of other of the Kathiawar States, the province can be made in various ways to contribute still further towards the defence of the Empire, a defence which will cover the Native States, as well as British India, and the entire burden of which should not rest upon British India alone.

ARMY CANDIDATES.

(Morning Post.)

The old dispute concerning the physical unfitness of some of the young officers who now pass into the army has again come to the front. It should hardly be necessary to point out that the vexed question of brain and muscle for army candidates is not brain v. muscle. The contention, and a very reasonable one—is that a proper combination of the two attributes is requisite. It is the proportion that one should bear to the other that constitutes the bone of that contention. Are the highly cultured to be collected and sifted, and from amongst them the more muscular chosen; or shall the muscular furnish the bulk, of which the cultured only shall be deemed worthy of commissions? At present neither alternative is adopted. There is no absolute guarantee that the brain-exceller is physically fit for the really hard life of a soldier when soldiering in earnest—and soldiering in earnest falls to the lot of nearly everyone who wears the uniform of the regular army sometime during his career. The perfunctory examination (and certificate of medical fitness which follows) of all candidates for the army is good up to a certain point. The doubt is whether this medical fitness touches a sufficiently high standard. It answers well enough for the bulk of English youth; but the meshes are too narrow, and some very undersized fish are included in the biennial Burlington haul. We recently published a review of the work done at Sandhurst annually, and this suggests the idea that perhaps a solution of the difficulty might be met by remodelling the condition of entrance to the army. Why should not Sandhurst and kindred institutions be thrown open to all-comers, subject merely to a qualifying examination and thorough medical overhauling? Two years, or even longer, might be passed in this military school, where the physical fitness of the embryo officer would be held as important as his mental qualifications. The competitive examination could come at the end of the term, and to prevent undue fagging for this marks should count from the date of entering the college, superiority in horsemanship being held to be as good as dexterity in conic sections, and agility in the gymnasium ranking almost as high as acquaintance with the bi-nominal theorem. Failure at the end of the course would not unfit a man for other positions—the Indian police, for instance—whilst the military training given would be beneficial to the individual and the State. We do not know how this will work in practice, and only throw out the unmodelled project. Perhaps some military readers will give their views thereon.

MORALITY IN SCHOOL MANAGEMENT.

(Indian Daily News.)

No one can reasonably find fault with Sir Alfred Croft for the stand he made at the Senate meeting on behalf of morality and truthfulness in the management of schools. He was right on the principle, and enforced it by the wider application of it as to its bearing on the character of the nation at large. In this view his position cannot well be objected to. Too intense a regard for truthfulness is not one of the national vices. It is not virtue pushed to the opposite extreme. And if the lesson could be widely enforced through schools, colleges, and homes the gain to the nation would be immense. We apprehend that not many of those who felt constrained to oppose Sir Alfred did so from opposition to the principle he sought to enforce, but only to the application of it in the present case. We are not concerned about its being the case of the Ripon College, because we deem it only a matter of accident that the question has arisen in connection with any particular institution. It was affirmed—and, so far as we remember, there was no denial—that considerable laxity had prevailed in giving certificates of attendance and otherwise in connection with the Educational Department. The evil has been general rather than particular; and it comes as a special hardship to make a victim of one institution alone, whose special iniquity consists in being found out. When it is known that a lax system prevails, and it is needful to make an example, it would not be unreasonable to give a general notice of the impending blow in order to be fair to all. And if the blow is to be struck, it should be fairly dealt all round. If we are to credit Mr. Mookerjee, who is, we believe, engaged in educational work, there is a "screw loose" in many institutions; and he plainly intimates that the Ripon College is not the only offender. From that point of view there is something to be said that rather detracts from the spartan advocacy of Sir Alfred Croft. It does not say much for the vigilance of the authorities of the University and the Educational Department that such gross abuses have been permitted to grow to the length they have done, and laxity cannot be denied; and this fact ought almost to be regarded as having the effect of "extenuating circumstances." It is almost a case of "contributory negligence" as where temptation is placed before people of suspected honesty. We would not desire to make a martyr of a college in a way that punishment will fall on students who have committed no offence. It would be well for the Senate and Syndicate alike to put their foot down upon evil practices in the future, and make it clearly known that laxity will not be tolerated as a matter of indifference, but will be treated as a serious offence.

THE BENGAL GOLD MINE.

(Indian Daily News.)

The movement in reference to gold-mining in Bengal does not show signs of abatement, judging from the numerous companies that are being placed upon the market. It is very likely that there are companies and companies; and we have heard it said that there are mining companies with no mining rights, and prospecting companies with every right to prospect where there is no likelihood of anything being found. This may be quite correct; and yet there may be something in many of the numerous companies that are being floated. The co-operation which a company in its ordinary sense implies is a legitimate thing. It is doubtful whether so much can be affirmed of the so-called syndicates, some of which have been glaringly impudent impositions, to which the greediness of a portion of the public too readily lent itself. Questions are asked as to whether there is anything at all to warrant the formation of so many companies. We do not profess to know what are the prospects of the several companies, and must leave the public to form their own judgment from the probabilities of the case, and the character of the agencies in whose hands the companies are placed; though even that may not be a safe criterion, judging from some of the projects put forth or contemplated. Primarily, it seems to us, the question arises—is there gold in the districts indicated? There is no doubt that gold has long been known to exist, and to have been found there. But it has been in such small quantities as not to seem to warrant efforts to work it by the primitive methods adopted by the peasantry of the country. But it has been recognised as a fact that the gold found in small particles in the alluvium must have been disintegrated from a parent source somewhere not far distant. And the assumption is that the metal exists in quantities that would pay for extraction by the appliances which modern engineering skill makes available. Men who profess to know declare that there is gold in the districts in which the companies have, or profess to have, acquired mining rights. And a not unnatural question follows as to whether there is room for all the companies. If, as is believed, the whole district is more or less auriferous, there is room for all the operations that are likely to be carried on. The extent of country over which rights are claimed is large enough to afford scope for a large mining population. One company has a hundred square miles, another more than twice that. Even a small company covers thirty or forty square miles! Now, a mine that extends even to one square mile, if it had anything in it worth working, would last a considerable time before it was exhausted. And, when the mile is multiplied by hundreds, it will be seen that miners are not likely to crowd each other for a long time to come. Some places will be found richer than others, and these localities will be reserved for working by the parent companies and the less prolific parts be sold to other adventurers, as has been done in Australia. From the whole of these mines, if, as is affirmed, the reefs are an outcrop of the Mysore reef, the outturn should be sufficiently extensive to have an effect on the relative value of silver and gold, unless the former still further outstrips the latter in productiveness. Though there are many companies formed, and the amount of capital invested is considerable, it is not excessive in relation to the possible outturn of metal which might be expected from so large an area energetically worked. Though the investments are in lakhs, the ultimate result should be the production of crores, though spread over a period of time, and won by legitimate operations. Meanwhile, is it not time a syndicate was formed to establish in the mining districts the inevitable "pools"? Probably they would be found more auriferous than the many "sonas" that now glitter in the eyes of adventurers.

UPPER BURMA.

(Rangoon Gazette.)

It seems to us that the chief point gained by Sir Lepel Griffin's visit to Burma has been that a fair account of the present state of Upper Burma has been placed before the public at home who are interested in such matters, and that the greatest English paper speaks in terms of the highest commendation of what has been done in that part of the province by our administrators. Up to the present, the casual newspaper reader knew little or nothing of Burma except that it was a country somewhere in Asia, where fevers, dacoits, and mosquitoes were very troublesome; and where officials seldom or never did anything right, not even by chance. The information which reached them by wire was, no doubt, sent with excellent intentions; but it is plain that great harm has been done when the one source of supply to English readers spoke only of dacoit raids and irregularities in the administration of justice. Doubtless, these telegrams form interesting and sometimes piquant reading, but it is a pity that they have taken little or no note of the other side of the picture. How the Times has received this information we do not know. "The telegraph brings news of every dacoit raid; so that the English reader comes after a time to imagine that the newly-annexed province is in a state of chronic turbulence," which, as that journal points out, is very far from being the case. How little there is nowadays of chronic turbulence everybody in Burma knows, and it is satisfactory to find that people are learning the truth in England. Sir Lepel and Lady Griffin and their party, with a guard of a few men, rode from Thabeitkyin to Mogok, which, two or three years ago, used to be one of the most troubled districts in Upper Burma. That one fact speaks volumes for the progress of the work of pacification. As Sir Lepel points out, nothing in Upper Burma at present is comparable to the position of affairs at Peshawur in 1875. "Yet Peshawur, says the Times, 'is now as quiet as Calcutta; and so will the whole of Upper Burma in a few years' time, if it continues to be administered by capable hands.'" Of this we have not the least doubt. The days have gone by when any official was thought to be good enough for Burma, and the reins will not be put into the hands of any but tried administrators. When Sir Charles Crosthwaite's term of office ends, the work done by him, and which is so highly spoken of by the Times and Sir Lepel Griffin, will not, we may be sure, be allowed to suffer by the appointment of an unworthy successor.

INDIAN RAILWAYS AND LOCAL CAPITAL.

(Madras Mail.)

In the course of his speech at the inauguration of the Mutupett Railway Lord Connemara said:—"I believe this is the first railroad which has been inaugurated in India under similar financial circumstances. It is the first railroad, I believe, where a Local Board has provided one half of the capital, and provincial funds have found the other half, &c." A correspondent writing to the Ootacamund paper says that His Excellency was not correct in his surmise, and he quotes instances of railways that have been constructed in India with capital raised locally. The first he mentions is the Rewari Ferozepore State Railway, which was opened out for traffic in the autumn of 1884. "This line runs through the extensive grain mart of the Punjab, is joined to the Rajputana Malwa Railway at Rewari on the East, and to Ferozepore on the West, where it joins the Raiwind branch of the North-Western Railway. There is also a branch running in a south-westerly direction, through the Bikanir desert, from Kotakapura to Fazilka on the east bank of the Sutlej, and which is the great wool market in Upper India, from which the Egerton Woollen Mills at Dhariwal and other Woollen Mills in the N.W. Provinces draw their supplies of material. It has always been said that the funds for constructing this railway (the Rewari-Ferozepore State Railway) were raised by Government from the merchants and traders in that part of the country through which the Railway runs." The Jodhpur State Railway, belonging to H.H. the Maharajah of Jodhpur, was, as far as can be ascertained, he says, constructed by the Maharajah himself, "who, I am confident, did not borrow his money in England. These two cases, I think, will suffice to show that the Tiruvallur-Mutupett Railway is not the first constructed with Indian capital." As we reported the other day, the Indian Daily News could not quite see where the "genuine private enterprise" came in in connection with the Mayaveram-Mutupett Railway. "No great enterprise is manifested when a guarantee is demanded and obtained from a public body, whether a Local Board or a Local Government. A much better illustration of genuine private enterprise is the scheme of the Bengal Provincial Railway Company—a Native scheme—which, in proposing to work without any guarantee, sets an example to European promoters of Indian railways."

THE CHARTERED BANK CASE.

(Pioneer.)

The Chartered Bank case, after a protracted trial in the Police Court and at the Sessions, culminated in an acquittal for the prisoner, Sham Churn Sen, who had confessed in writing that he had eased the bank of Rs. 12,00,000. These defalcations (so termed by the accused) extended over a period of eight years. The confession, although legally inadmissible as evidence, must have thrown considerable light on the path of the prosecution, and one would naturally have expected that any clue so obtained would have been persistently followed up by the Advocate-General, until it led to the conviction.

tion of the prisoner on at least one count. Shama Churn confessed that he had helped himself to a lump sum of three lakhs for the purchase of 300 chests of opium, which at the date of the confession were in the hands of Messrs. Gubby and Co. The law renders the course we have indicated imperative, for unless the specific sum embezzled and the time of committing the offence be proven the criminal count cannot be maintained. In spite, however, of the obviousness of this course, the Advocate-General proceeded to unfold a case that was legally unsustainable, for it seemed to point to a general deficiency in a running balance of account which at once destroyed the jurisdiction of the Criminal Court and transmuted the suit into a civil action. Notwithstanding this radical defect in the inaugural proceedings, the trial dragged its slow length, witnesses were examined, counsel for the prosecution addressed both judge and jury, counsel for the defence adopted a similar course, and the judge also addressed the jury, and in summing up his address practically directed them to return a verdict of "not guilty," or rather, "not proven," on account of the initial defect in the proceedings. The sequel to the trial was still more startling. On the verdict of "not guilty" being returned, the Advocate-General, addressing the Court, said that if the Court decided to proceed with the trial of Shama Churn on the next charge, "cheating," and of his son for abetting his father in the commission of that offence in respect of the sums of Rs. 1,26,000, Rs. 10,000, Rs. 46,000, Rs. 1,23,000, Rs. 75,000, Rs. 38,000, and Rs. 10,000, he had no evidence to offer. Accordingly on these counts also a verdict of "not guilty" was returned. Why did the Advocate-General, as the leading law officer of the Crown, draw up his case in a manner that was bound to defeat the ends of justice? Why did the Court permit the trial to proceed in that seemingly illegal form? Why did the bank indicate certain specific sums of which it alleged itself to have been cheated and then offer no evidence in support? Why were not the books of the bank thoroughly overhauled by an impartial public auditor and his report made the basis of the case? are questions which suggest themselves to every one who has followed the proceedings in this important commercial case. This third case turning upon bank frauds, following closely upon the other two which have already been adjudicated upon, is admirably calculated to destroy the public confidence which was once placed in our banking institutions, while the course adopted by the Chartered Bank is open to the unfortunate construction that the conviction of Shama Churn was but of secondary importance. The action of the bank in thus placing before the Court a lopsided case is deserving of the severest comment, but it is in vain that we look to the summing up of the Judge for any recognition of this. The case has played its part as a sacrifice to appearances, but no one can deny that the ends of justice have suffered a glaring and most discreditable defeat.

BENGAL.

(October 15.)

THE Indian Daily News says:—In connection with this gold prospecting and mining movement, we were told the other day that it was not safe to write or telegraph to or from the "diggings," except in cypher. This seemed to us such a serious statement that we doubted it, and asked who were the delinquents. They were not specified; but it was said that telegrams were not sacred, and that letters were undoubtedly opened to get at the contents. We do not accuse anyone either in the postal or the telegraph service. But it is certainly a matter of which the officers of the two departments should take notice, and remedy the mischief if possible. We might not have referred to it all, in the hope that it was only a groundless suspicion and not a fact. But we see that Capital has mentioned it specially, and there may be somewhere a "screw loose" that needs to be tightened to ensure public confidence.

A CALCUTTA paper reports that as the result of three days of unceasing toil on the part of all concerned the break on the Eastern Bengal Railway between Tiluckpore and Nawabganj was repaired. The statement that a bridge or culvert had given way turns out to be incorrect, the break occurring the best part of a mile from the culvert in question. For a distance of eighty feet the bank was washed away, leaving a clean gap over which the rails were suspended very much after the fashion of a suspension bridge. At this point the embankment is seven feet high, and there was a head of water of five feet. Mr. Finney, the Manager, and Mr. Dring, the Traffic Superintendent, happened to be travelling by the up-mail, and were promptly on the spot. An attempt was made to convey the passengers across by boat, but in the strong current this was found to take too long. Trolleys were then procured, and passengers and mails were "switchbacked" across the gap in the most successful manner, and without a single mishap. Fortunately, a quantity of boulders were in readiness at a short distance to be sent on to Assam, and a prompt use was made of this timely resource. The boulders were shot down on either side of the line until they formed a double enclosing wall, and the intermediate space was then filled up with brick ballast. Great credit is due to the Traffic Superintendent and his staff, whose efforts never relaxed until the mending of the break had been accomplished.

A SAD case of drowning, of a European Sergeant of the Ordnance Department, named John Dray, occurred on Sunday morning in the river. The deceased was in charge of the Ordnance powder boat, Lady Alice, and was proceeding that morning at about 8.30 with a shipment of ammunition to the s.s. Pundua, which was dropping down to Garden Reach at Nemuck Mehal Ghat. The Lady Alice got alongside of the Pundua, and on arriving abreast of the Royal Botanical Gardens, Sergeant Dray boarded her. Having obtained the receipt for the ammunition, he attempted to go back to the Lady Alice, which was secured to the steamer with two ropes, but just as he was about to step into her she appears to have moved off a little, so that he fell into the river. Mr. Owens, a saloon passenger of the Pundua, jumped into the river to rescue him, but the unfortunate officer never rose to the surface. Mr. Owens, although an excellent swimmer, narrowly escaped with his life. He was carried away by the force of the tide some distance from his vessel, and was picked up in an exhausted condition. Shortly after the Pundua proceeded on her voyage to Rangoon. Under the orders of the Commissioner of Police, a conservancy boat has been detailed to keep a watch for the body of Sergeant Dray.—Englishman.

MADRAS.

(Oct. 15.)

DURING last night the whole of the Harbour Trust Office was burnt down. Nothing remains but four bare walls. The fire was detected about nine o'clock yesterday evening, and an alarm was immediately given. The fire-engines soon arrived on the spot, but two were unable to work, and it was half-past nine before the steam fire-engine arrived, and a serious attempt made to quench the flames. An enormous crowd had collected, and the police had much difficulty in maintaining order. Some persons broke into the hotel contiguous to the Harbour Office, and stole 700 rupees from the till, which was smashed to pieces. A number of soldiers from the fort and gunners from the Garrison Battery worked hard, as did also the native soldiers and the police; but the course of the fire could not be stopped, and the whole of the interior of the building was gutted, the records, furniture, &c., being destroyed. The fire is still smouldering. The neighbouring houses escaped with little injury. The origin of the fire has not been ascertained, but rumours are rife of its having been the result of incendiarism.

It is stated that Lord Connemara has decided to appoint Dr. Smyth, who delivered a remarkable address to the students of the Medical College, a Fellow of the Madras University.

BOMBAY.

(October 18.)

MRS. FECHAY-PHIPSON, M.D., First Physician, Pestonjee Hormasjee Cama Hospital, has been allowed privilege leave of absence for one month, from the 15th inst.

THE Rev. A. G. Lewis, B.A., B.D., has been confirmed in the appointment of Archdeacon and Commissary, with effect from the 4th inst., vice the Venerable Archdeacon C. F. H. Johnston, M.A., resigned.

COLONEL PEACOCK will probably leave Oodeypore, and go as Resident to Jeypore, when Colonel Prideaux moves to Cashmere.

MR. JAMSHEDJEE KHANDALAVALA has declined to accept the post of Dewan of Cambay, which had been offered to him by his Highness the Nawab.

THE HON. MR. J. R. NAYLOR, C.S., C.S.I., Remembrancer of Legal Affairs, having obtained special leave, on urgent private affairs, for six months, left for Europe by Saturday's mail steamer. Mr. J. D. Inverarity, Barrister-at-Law, also proceeded to Aden by the same steamer en route for the Somali Coast, on a shooting excursion.

MR. FRAMJEE COWASJEE MARKUR, a wealthy Parsee merchant, who died last week, has by a deed of trust left about a lakh of rupees for charitable purposes. It is said that the income derived from the capital will be devoted, in a manner to be determined hereafter by the trustees, to the support of poor and destitute Parsees.

THE Rev. A. GOLDWYER LEWIS was on Monday inducted as Archdeacon of Bombay in St. Thomas's Cathedral. After the second lesson the Archdeacon-elect was conducted from the vestry to the altar-rails, where he was formally invested by the Bishop with the Archidiaconal dignity, and placed in possession of the Archdeacon's stall. The service was concluded by a celebration of the Holy Communion.

SIMLA.

(October 17.)

At the general meeting of the European Civil Services Association, held here yesterday, the Simla Committee presented a review of the proceedings of the Association up to the present time. They commence with the banquet to Mr. King in Calcutta, the announcement that the Select Committee would be appointed, and then give a list of their grievances, which were—(1) sterling pensions; (2) minimum furlough allowance in sterling to officers taking leave in England; (3) a certain portion of furlough to count as pensionable service; (4) the admission to the European service rules of all officers of certain classes taking leave to England; and (5) reduction of period of service entitling to pension from thirty to twenty-five years. The enactment in a legislative form of the rules applicable to the services. Later on complete discussions of the leave and pension questions were drawn up and sent home by the Simla and Calcutta Committees, the bulk of the work falling on the former Committee. Twelve selected officers were then nominated, and large sums were remitted home; and, though certain departments, such as the Civil Engineers, maintained their own committees, all worked in cordial unison together. The Simla Committee thus declare that no effort was spared on their part to render the inquiry a success. The result has been, however, unfortunate. In some respects the case was not perfectly presented or understood. Indian witnesses were not examined, and although the Committee admit Mr. Jenkins's Parliamentary counsel did admirable work, they regret that their case was not presented by a member of the Service. Finally, in order that the organisation may be permanently maintained, the Committee propose that the objects of the Association be defined—(1) Particular and immediate to urge that actions be taken to carry out the recommendations of the Parliamentary Committee, and in respect of the pension question to urge that the maximum ordinary pension should be at least half-pay up to £500 instead of Rs. 5,000. Also to secure the removal of special grievances in respect of which no definite recommendation was made by the Select Committee, and which are still under the consideration of Government and the India Office. (2.) General and permanent—(a) to obliterate, or lessen, the distinction between the different sections of European Civil Servants, and to procure equal treatment for all of such; (b) to obtain redress for special grievances in the various departments; and (c) to form a bond of union between all departments of the Service.

The Simla Committee of the E.C.S. Association have telegraphed to Mr. King as follows:—"Much regret idea your great services not recognised. Opinion quite unfounded. Letter follows." The letter explains that their resolutions reflect not on Mr. King, whom they cordially thank, but on the London Committee. They enunciate again their claims and acknowledge the redress gained, but hold that had more use been made of the Central Indian Committee and information tabulated in India, greater success would have been attained. They instance the deficient cross-examination of the India Office representative on several points. The dissuasion or prevention of certain witnesses appearing is also deprecated. The letter concludes by saying it is their intention to form a strong association in India instead of at London, and expressing further gratitude for Mr. King's exertions.

THE Bombay Municipal Corporation adopted at their meeting on Oct. 6 the report of their committee on the question of the proposed appointment of an additional police magistrate for Bombay. The Hon. Mr. Javerilal, who seconded the adoption of the report, strongly maintained that it was not for the Municipality to pay for an additional magistrate proposed to be appointed by Government, who ought to provide for the appointment from general funds at their disposal. Mr. Kirkham proposed:—"1. That Government letter No. 1,991, Educational Department, dated Sept. 20, be recorded. 2. That para. 3, containing the Advocate-General's exposition of the law, be forwarded to the Joint Schools Committee for information and guidance, and that it be an instruction to the committee, whilst observing the strictest possible economy, to gradually raise the provision of primary education for the city to the point of reasonable adequacy. 3. That, in the opinion of the Corporation, the municipal expenditure necessary for this purpose need not for years to come—say ten years—reach a sum equal to $\frac{1}{4}$ per cent. on the rateable value of the property of the city." Dr. Cowasjee Hormusjee moved an amendment to the effect that the Government letter be referred to a committee, consisting of Messrs. P. M. Mehta, Sir Henry Morland, Messrs. N. G. Chandavarkar, R. M. Sayani, R. D. Sethna, and Dr. Bhalchandra, for report, and it was carried by a majority.

OBITUARY.

—o—

MAJOR JAMES DUNCAN COWELL, late 3rd Light Dragoons and 10th Hussars, only son of the late William Cowell, Bengal Civil Service, died on the 24th ult., at 14, Grange-park, Ealing, in his 75th year. Major Cowell served with the 3rd Light Dragoons throughout the campaign of 1842 in Afghanistan, and was present at the forcing of the Khyber Pass, capture of Mamoo Khail, storming the Heights of Jugdulluck, actions of Tezeen and Huftkotul, and occupation of Cabool (medal). He was present as aide-de-camp to Sir Joseph Thackwell in the action of Maharajpore on Dec. 29, 1843 (bronze star). He served the Sutlej campaign of 1845-6, including the battles of Moodkee, Ferozeshah (charger killed), and Sobraon, receiving the medal and two clasps. Towards the close of the Sutlej campaign he officiated as deputy-assistant quartermaster-general of the cavalry division. Major Cowell served with the 10th Hussars in the Crimea from April, 1855, including the capture of Tchorgaun, battle of the Tchernaya, siege and fall of Sebastopol, receiving the medal with clasp, and Turkish medal.

THE PLAY "MAHOMET" IN ENGLAND.

Mr. A. N. Wollaston sends the following letter to the editor of the Times.—

Sir,—In your issue of October 27th there appears a letter from M. Lutf Ali Khan, the Persian Secretary of Legation in this country (which I accidentally omitted to notice until this moment), giving testimony regarding the miracle play of Hasan and Husain in direct opposition to the statements made in my communication of the 18th inst.

But the value of this unimpeachable testimony depends entirely upon the meaning to be attached to the terms "drama," "stage," and "theatrical performance." If the contention be that the "miracle play" is not an ordinary drama, and acted on an ordinary stage as an ordinary theatrical performance, I am prepared to acquiesce. The play of Hasan and Husain is, however, beyond doubt performed at the Muharram as a sacred drama. If any of your readers will pay me the compliment of referring to pages 314 et seq of my little book entitled "Half-hours with Muhammad," it will become evident:—

1. That, on the testimony of Morier, at the time (I believe) Secretary of Legation at Teheran, and an eye-witness of the miracle play as performed at that capital, parts therein are assigned to different actors, and the play, is therefore, a "drama," or "dramatic representation." The tent, too, in which he alleges the scenes to have been enacted was fitted with black linen and furnished with objects emblematical of the events connected with the massacre of Husain and his family on the plain of Karbala, and therefore there is a "scenic stage."

Again, Sir Lewis Pelly says that in the text of the miracle play as obtained from "a teacher and prompter of actors" the Prophet Mahomet and his family are at once the central figures and moving spirits of the whole, and that Mahomet appears on the scene at will. In other words, the Deity and his Prophet are impersonated upon the stage in Persia.

I again repeat that I assume M. Lutf Ali Khan, in his letter of Oct. 23, intended to draw a distinction between secular and religious dramatic art. If I be wrong in this supposition, I must perforce believe, apart from the information which I individually possess, (1) that Morier said he saw what he did not see, and (2) that Sir Lewis Pelly, with every opportunity of knowing what occurred year by year in Persia, was led to state what was wholly inaccurate.

Furthermore, I must suppose that writers of the stamp of Chodzko, Gobineau, Benjamin, Grattan Geary, the editor of the Bombay Gazette (see appendix to "Asiatic Turkey"), and others, have all joined unconsciously in a plot to mislead the European public in this matter.

Sir G. Birdwood, indeed, describes the performance of the play in Western India (see preface to Sir Lewis Pelly's Hasan and Husain, pp. xvii. to xxiv.) as a solemn recitation during which only "some of the celebrants come forward and take up the 'properties' before the tabut, and one represents Hasan and another Al Abbas, &c. . . . not after the manner of actors, but of earnest men absorbed in some high sacrament, without consciousness of themselves or their audience." But this description refers to Sunni Hindostan, and not to Shia Persia.—I have, &c., ARTHUR N. WOLLASTON.

THE Government of India has just decided that Bombay is to be considered the Presidency Town for officers serving in Central India and Rajputana where they can, while on furlough or leave out of India, draw their leave allowances.

ENGLISH MAHOMMEDANS.

(Spectator, Nov. 1.)

Allen's Indian Mail, a little paper which during two generations has endeavoured to record all matters of interest to Englishmen connected in any way with Asia, published on Tuesday, Oct. 27, the following extraordinary paragraph:—"A Native gentleman at Hyderabad had received a letter from Mrs. Cates, the local secretary of the Liverpool Moslem Society, in which the lady states that there are now in that city no less than twenty-five gentlemen and five ladies who have embraced Islam. Mrs. Cates asks for support to carry on the work of converting the English nation to Mahommedanism; and the leading moulvies in the city, in response to her appeal, have opened a subscription list for that object. The President of the Society is Mr. W. N. Quilliam, B.A., a solicitor of Liverpool, who has published a pamphlet entitled 'The Faith of Islam.'" The majority of our readers will probably disbelieve that statement without much reflection, and we have no knowledge from which either to confirm or disprove it; but the paper which makes it is most respectable, and is on its own special ground, and there is no antecedent impossibility in the statement itself. We ourselves pointed out a quarter of a century ago, that as the intercourse of Europe with Asia incessantly advanced, so that the time occupied in transport has been reduced by more than half—the precise figures, counting only the steam period, are as 35 to 17—Asia must and would exercise a graver reflex influence over European thought. She did it in the Crusades, and there is nothing in our mechanical improvements to prevent her doing it again. The process has been slower than we expected, but in many departments of art the influence of Asia has been distinctly marked; it is felt, on the Continent especially, in all philosophic discussion; and it naturally extends itself by degrees into the domain of theology. A trace of what is really Buddhism is getting visible in much theological speculation, and in all pessimist thought; while actual Buddhists, people who believe Gautama's ideas to be the best explanation of the mystery of the universe, are numerous in France, and can be talked with in the flesh even in England. We are not talking about the Theosophists, but genuine Buddhists, whom Cingalese temples would acknowledge. As most of our readers know, conversions to Judaism have for years been frequent in Germany, Austria, and England, and have not been confined to descendants of the House of Israel; and it is no matter for surprise, amidst the intellectual anarchy of the hour, that another great Asiatic creed should capture a few Englishmen. The worst active doctrine of Islam, polygamy, though permitted by the Koran, is not enjoined, and can be repudiated, as most Jews repudiate it, not as unlawful, but as not intended to be universal, and as specially unfitted to civilisations in which women rank high; and the central ideas of Islam are not without a charm for certain minds even among Europeans. The keynote of the Faith, the unconditional sovereignty of God, has been accepted, in theory, by some of the greatest Calvinists, and, indeed, as many think, taints all Calvinism; while the perfect equality of mankind, on certain conditions, is more completely realised in the Mussulman system than in any other in the world. The Mussulman will, and the Christian will not, marry his daughter to an inferior, say a converted Negro, because all who accept the Faith must be equally the creatures of Allah. We confess, when we reflect on the attraction of any successful creed for certain exceptional minds, and remember that a man like Halhed really believed in Hindooism, we are only surprised that Mahommedanism should have caught so few avowed votaries in the West. They must be a little more numerous than appears, for we have heard of a few in most countries; but they can hardly be so numerous even as the Comtists, or the believers in Joanna Southcote. That is not many, if one reflects that the doctrine is established in great Kingdoms, and is one for which a race like the Arab is willing to accept death, and repeatedly has accepted it wholesale.

It is not likely that the English Mussulmans will ever be numerous. It is not true that Europe instinctively repels the ideas of Asia, for all the successful creeds of earth own an Asiatic origin, and it is historically probable that Asia once made a most singular capture among the European élite. It is a custom in this country to assume that the Templars were the victims of greed and envy, and were suppressed by a sort of burglary; and no doubt envy and greed had much to do with their fall; but the Pope who condemned them must have known the truth about them, and modern research seems to demonstrate that even if the Order was, as an Order, unjustly accused, a Secret Society of Nature-worshippers, with ideas entirely Asiatic, had imbedded itself in the great fighting brotherhood, and impressed its worst ideas even on buildings still extant. There is, however, a definite repulsion to Mohammedanism in the European mind which has lasted ages, and has affected the whole course of history, which saved Spain, which prevented the conversion of the European subjects of Turkey—certainly not pious people, and with every inducement to become Mahommedans—and which in our own day renders the European in India who professes Islam a kind of social outcast. It is not only that his sincerity is not believed in; there is also a repulsion which was not felt towards Halhed, and would not be felt to an Englishman who turned Parsee or Confucian. The source of that repugnance is hard to trace, for it has been exhibited by people whom polygamy did not offend; but we suspect it is to be found in Mills's tremendous sentence, and that the European refuses from instinct to accept a God who, on the Mahommedan hypothesis, is not of necessity a good Being. He prefers revolt, as Mill said he himself would. Be that as it may—and we are not writing a treatise, but explaining a reported fact—nobody doubts the repulsion, and the English Mussulmans will probably remain for ever few; but that by no means destroys the importance of their existence. Every Mussulman is a potential missionary, interested to an almost inconceivable degree in the spread of his faith, and a very few English families who were genuinely Mussulman might directly affect the history of the world. A Mussulman saint and preacher, who was also an Englishman, yet not a renegade, but born in the faith, might acquire in many places, and among many of our subject races, almost inconceivable influence. We should be very sorry to see him in India, or among the Zulus, or even in the islands of the West Indies, where some day or other we shall witness the springing up of a most dangerous Mahommedan Church. Islam has an attraction for most dark races which is almost incalculable—it extends even to China, where the statesmen of Peking delivered their awful blow at the Panthays only just in time—and Islam preached by an Englishman would seem to prove its own compatibility with that strength which Asia and Africa see and dread in Europe, and which has made of scores of renegades the trusted statesmen and soldiers of dark dynasties. Such a man might even found a great sect among the negroes of the Southern States of the Union, and change within a few years half the conditions of the race war always simmering there, it being the first specialty of Mahommedanism that its votaries will always fight for the faith, and while so fighting will cohere in an obedient mass. White missionaries of Mahommedanism would be exceedingly formidable persons, and that they have never appeared is perhaps the strongest reason for believing that most European conversions to Islam hitherto made have been dictated by motives other than genuine conviction.

We wonder if an English Mahommedan sect really arose, and its children, born Mussulmans, petitioned for liberty to be polygamists, "liberty as in India," what the more fanatic Radicals would reply. The question has not come up about Mormonism, for the Mormons are hardly a sect here, and there are none who are at once born Mormons and born Englishmen, and therefore entitled to plead a double claim. Would the extremists plead that religious liberty must always be supreme, or would they put forward their other set of ideas, and argue that, as monogamy was for the benefit of the community, monogamy must endure? We suppose the latter would be the popular contention, as it has been in America; but, remembering some discussions on divorce, we cannot be absolutely sure. The Americans have not wives enough for their population, while we have too many, and they are not bothered with our logical difficulty, that in the most populous bit of the Queen's dominion we allow all laws of marriage, inheritance, and divorce to be regulated by the suitor's religious creed. Let us hope that the conversions will never be numerous enough to bring the question within the range of practical politics; for if the English Mussulmans ever controlled a few seats, we would, in the present temper of parties, answer for nothing. With a great division at hand, and numbers equal, both parties might discover that to be wiser than the Patriarchs was an exhibition of un-Christian self-conceit. The suggestion of such a crisis seems farcical; but it very nearly occurred in America—may tomorrow, it is asserted, occur exactly in that form in the State of Nevada, where Mormons hold the casting-vote—and would hardly be more surprising than the facts, if they be facts, which we have already quoted from the Indian Mail.

A NEW through telegraph line from Bombay to Calcutta via the Bengal-Nagpur Railway will be opened on April 1.

THE EGYPTIAN EXILES IN CEYLON.—It is reported from Ceylon that in consequence of the frequent representations that have been made to Her Majesty's Government respecting the unsuitability of the Ceylon climate for Arabi Pasha and other Egyptian exiles, instructions were received by the local government to appoint a medical board to report on the subject. Dr. Kynsey, the principal colonial medical officer, Brigade-Surgeon Robinson, and Dr. Macdonald were appointed for the purpose, and examined all seven exiles. The nature of their report on the subject has not been disclosed, but it has been sent to the Colonial Office.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE 1st Bombay Lancers are to receive the distinction of being allowed to call themselves The Duke of Connaught's Own.

CAPTAIN SWANN, 1st Bombay Grenadiers, has been attached to the Adjutant-General's Department to verify the histories of the Bombay Native Regiments.

THE Commissariat Accounts and Paymasters' offices at Rangoon will shortly be transferred to Madras, the method of audit in Burma not having given satisfaction.

MAJOR MUIR, 17th Bengal Cavalry, who was to have been posted as Assistant Adjutant-General, Presidency District, will now go in a similar capacity to Meerut, vice Major Dyce.

SIR GEORGE WHITE reports that his force is meeting no opposition. A column under Colonel Nicholson, 3rd Baluchis, has been detached to proceed against Dost Mahomed's villages.

GENERAL LUCK is expected to be present at the forthcoming Hyderabad camp-of-exercise, in which two regiments, one cavalry and one infantry, from the Nizam's army are expected to take part.

A NUMBER of officers of the Intelligence Branch of the Quartermaster-General's Department will be attached to the force assembling at Attock, in order to gain some practical knowledge of work in the field.

THE Simla Volunteers, under the command of Colonel Woodthorpe, were inspected by Colonel Murray, Assistant Adjutant-General, on Oct. 8. They mustered 246 on parade, and drilled admirably, winning the inspecting officer's approval.

IT is notified in General Orders that the Commander-in-Chief will be accompanied on his tour by Lieutenant-Colonel Nicholson, Military Secretary; Major Travers, Persian Interpreter; and Captains Hume and Ricketts, Aides-de-Camp. The Adjutant-General, the Quartermaster-General, and Surgeon-Major Owen, will join his Excellency at Khairabad on the 21st November, and will accompany him for the remainder of the tour. The usual directions are issued regarding official correspondence during his Excellency's absence from Simla.

THE following notification appears in the Allahabad District Orders:—"Major-General Viscount Frankfort, having been transferred to the command of the Presidency District, wishes to express to all under his command his entire satisfaction with the highly soldierlike conduct and excellent bearing of all ranks during the short time he has been in command at Allahabad. In saying farewell, the Major-General desires to thank all the Staff and Departmental Officers for the cordial support and assistance he has always received, and hopes he may have the pleasure of soldiering with them again."

THE Government of India, in pursuance of the policy of utilising the best fighting material to be procured, are about to convert four Hindustani regiments into Gurkha, Dogra, Punjabi, Mahomedan and trans frontier Pathan battalions respectively. The regiments likely to be chosen for conversion will be the 33rd, 38th, 39th, and 40th Bengal Infantry, which were raised during the Mutiny at Allahabad, Agra, Aligarh, and Shahjahanpur. With this change the last of the "levies" formed in 1857-58 will disappear from the Army List. It is intended also to localise the Baluch regiments of the Bombay Army, which will in future be always stationed in British Baluchistan.

THE Zhoib Valley Levies, which are composed of 416 cavalry and 520 infantry, a Native officer being posted to each, with a European commandant in authority above them, will prove extremely useful now that the survey of the projected Zhoib Valley Railway is being undertaken. They will take their share of escort duty, and their knowledge of the country and the people will be invaluable. There is always latent fanaticism among the tribesmen beyond the Suleimans, not to mention the lawlessness which exists among the young bloods anxious to distinguish themselves by some act of bravado, and it is these gentry alone who are likely to prove troublesome to our Survey officers. But the latter, with their guards of a score of regular sepoys and a detachment of men from the Levies, are not likely to be seriously interfered with. They can do their work quietly without any parade of military strength, more particularly as General White will be, as it were, covering them from attack from the west.

THE Brigadier-General Commanding the Bengal Presidency District has issued an order complimenting the artillery of his command on their good shooting. Considering the size of the artillery force in the District its performances have been certainly remarkable. The Commander-in-Chief's prize for the battery—garrison, field, horse, or mountain—making the highest figure of merit at the annual competitive practice, has been won by Battery 6, Western Division, the garrison battery at Fort William. The mountain battery at Darjeeling,

No. 3, was the highest of its class, beating every other mountain battery, and coming out fourth on the whole list. And finally, the cup given by Brigadier-General Nairne, the Inspector-General of Artillery, for a competition open to all field and horse batteries in India, was won by Major F. T. Beaver's battery at Barrackpore. Fifty-one batteries entered for this competition, but the 31st Field, though firing with the old 9-pounder muzzle-loader, distanced them all. Its score was 283 hits in 25 mins. 30 secs., whereas the S Battery R.H.A., which came second, though using the new 12-pounder breechloader, scored but 320 points in 21 mins. 23 secs.

ARRIVAL OF H.M.S. TROOPSHIP CROCODILE.

Her Majesty's troopship Crocodile, Captain Oxford Churchill, arrived in Bombay Harbour on Thursday morning, Oct. 16. The troopship left Portsmouth on the 17th September, calling at Queenstown on the 19th, Malta on the 28th, Port Said on 2nd October, and Suez on the 5th. She brought fifty officers, seven ladies, one child, 1,039 men, 44 women, and 38 children. During the voyage the Crocodile encountered a heavy gale of wind, between Queenstown and Gibraltar, when she lost a boat. The starboard accommodation ladder was washed away; and in the Suez Canal a wire hawser got twisted round her propeller. The following are the names of the saloon passengers:—

CONGRESS CANT AT CROYDON.

It was Archimedes, we think, who said that, could he get a point outside of the universe for a fulcrum, he would move the universe from its base, whatever that was. This was a very easily uttered boast, and no doubt the philosopher himself perfectly understood the sublimity of its swagger. The difficulty in finding the point for moving lesser things than the universe has been a very ancient and serious one with even more practical people than philosophers. This difficulty the friends of the National Indian Congress party tried to solve by seeking their fulcrum at Croydon, where about a fortnight ago a public meeting was convened by the Croydon Women's Liberal Association, for the purpose of listening to addresses on the subject of "Reform for India." In the absence through illness of Mr. E. W. Grimwade, J.P., Liberal candidate for Croydon, the chair was taken by Dr. Aubrey, Liberal candidate for the Horncastle division of Lincolnshire, and a well-known leader of political-opinion in Croydon. The platform was crowded with ladies and gentlemen of political and social influence in Croydon.

The above information is taken, as is that which follows, and on which we comment, from the Congress paper called India. But for that journal the world in general would have been ignorant of the power of Croydon as a fulcrum for moving it in the way of Reform for India.

The Chairman said that there was a great deal to be learnt about India, a truism which, however, he did not appear to think applicable to himself. He hoped, however, that none of his audience would be led away by the Anglo-Indian idea represented by certain officials "who have come back from India with enlarged livers and with plethoric pockets." These persons had only "an official notion" of India, whereas Croydon "wanted to arouse a healthy public sentiment regarding the people of India." Croydon, like Mrs. Todgers in Dickens's novel, "did the thing in style" when she set about it. "I wish you," said the Chairman, "to bear this fact in mind, that of the two hundred million of people in India who are our fellow-subjects it may be said in round numbers that one-fifth are living on the very edge of starvation. There are between forty and fifty millions of men, women, and children scattered up and down in India whose main subsistence is a little boiled rice flavoured with a little salt. Yet the very thing which gives flavour to this food upon which the people subsist is taxed two thousand times its actual value." This statement was, of course, received by the Croydon audience with loud cries of "Shame!" Mr. W. S. Caine followed. He found that the young Natives of Bengal who had been trained in Western ideas, Western civilisation, and Western political economy, who knew the doctrines of Adam Smith, John Stuart Mill, Henry Fawcett, Harriet Martineau, and others of the Liberal political school, were denied a share in the government of their own country. "My friend Mr. Bonnerjee" (thus spoke the indignant Caine) "is on the platform—a Native of India—and will be able, should he happen to be in England at the next general election, to record his opinion as to who ought or ought not to represent the borough of Croydon in Parliament; but when he goes to Calcutta, where he is the leader of the Bar, filling a kindred position to Sir Charles Russell or Sir Henry James in England, he is practically disenfranchised, and has no voice whatever in the Government, or in the ordering or building up of the political system of his country." This certificate of Mr. Bonnerjee's position at the Calcutta Bar will, possibly, be received with some surprise by the present Advocate-General and other members of the English Bar at Calcutta. Mr. Caine's statement that "there are a good many other Mr. Bonnerjees in India," is one, too, which may be accepted more with regret than satisfaction, for there is evidently no way of providing for the ambition of these excellent young gentlemen.

"When these young men have been called to the English bar, and go back to plead in the Law Courts of Lahore, they find themselves absolutely political ciphers, having no share in the government of their own country. You cannot, then, be surprised that one of the main demands of the Indian National Congress is that the educated people of India, at any rate, shall have some voice in the making of laws for the government of their own country. Their demand is a modest one. It is that they shall be permitted by some wise system of election to return to the legislative councils of their various provinces, and to the legislative councils of the Viceroy of India, half the representatives, leaving the other half to be nominated by the Government, or by the officials of the Government, the Governors and Viceroys in their respective Councils holding the casting vote. That seems to me to be a modest and reasonable demand, and one that in my opinion England ought to be only too glad to grant."

But this is not the modest demand made. The young gentlemen in question ask that the Government which has been instrumental in calling them into a political existence should provide them with pecuniary, if not political, employment. They not illogically hold that the British Government had no right to educate them up to a certain range of political ideas without providing them with the means of carrying those ideas into practice. They have the same reasonable argument on their side as the would-be suicide in the French drama brought forward against his rescuer: "Sir, you have taken the responsibility upon yourself to save me from drowning myself, and now it is your duty to provide for me for life." The British Government has only itself to thank for allowing its representatives in India to raise the Frankenstein monster which has been raised there by the system of inconsiderate English education. Mr. Caine, having talked to the full of his bent his unformed and ignorant ideas of Indian questions, was succeeded by Mr. Bradlaugh, who, dealing with misrepresented statements, misrepresented a good deal to his audience; but what in the end did he say? This:—

"What does India ask? Not to break a yoke that is heavy, not to take into its own hands the government of its own lands, not to have equality for its varying peoples, not to have the right of taxing itself, not to have the right of making laws for itself; but it asks that it may have mouthpieces in the legislative councils who may submit before those councils reasons why bad laws should not be made worse, and why good laws should be made better, with the right of appeal to the English public through the publicity their mouthpieces thus would give."

Mr. Bradlaugh is clever, and evidently does not care to commit himself. If the Congress be content with his programme, they belie themselves, and are content with little. But at present it is possible they must make the best of the situation, for, in this same issue of their journal called India, there are two long columns devoted to "Suggestions for Collecting Funds for the Indian National Congress." The suggestions are many—from street preaching to bare-faced beggary. This is, perhaps, the best evidence of the vitality of the agitation.

THE following is the summary of the Bombay Presidency season reports for the past week:—Rain throughout the Presidency proper, except Kaira and Baroda; moderate and beneficial to crops and fodder throughout the Deccan and Southern Mahratta Country; generally slight in the districts of Guzerat, Kattywar, and the Konkan. More rain required for the late-sown early crops or for sowing of late crops in parts of Broach, Panch Mahals, Khandeish, Nassik, Poona, Ahmednugger, Satara, and Dharwar. Standing crops suffering from drought in one taluka of Nassik; damaged by blight, rats, locusts, or other insects in parts of Kurrachee, Hyderabad, and Upper Scind Frontier; otherwise good. Reaping of early crops and sowing of late crops progressing generally. Fodder insufficient in parts of Nassik, Poona, Ahmednugger, Bijapore, and Dharwar. Agricultural stock good, except in parts of Surat and Nassik. Water scarce in parts of Kattywar and in four talukas of Dharwar.

EUROPEAN AND NATIVE MUSIC.

A European lover of music writes to the Indian Spectator:—In estimating European and Native music and the effects produced by it on the hearers of the opposite nationality, one important point seems to have been overlooked. Native music is altogether of a festive nature; that is, it is used only on occasions of public or private rejoicing, or for the purposes of entertainment or amusement. European music, on the contrary, has a double aspect—the festive and the solemn and sad. It is closely interwoven with religious feeling, and it is religion which has produced the loftiest flights in the musical art. The "Dead March" in Saul, with its long, wailing notes breathing the very soul of sorrow, is a piece which stands alone in its perfect simplicity and solemn grandeur. Native music may be searched in vain for a production which will bear comparison with Handel's masterpiece. There we have a long list of oratorio and masses which teem with ravishing melodies and grand and complicated harmonies. Now these pieces being all religious, founded on a passion which most deeply stirs the human heart, and must, therefore, live for ever. Whatever may be said in favour of the highest class of Native music, the street music, in which the drums have it nearly all to themselves, is anything but pleasant. In fact, the element of melody, and anything like harmony is entirely absent. It does not appear that what Europeans call harmony is understood or taught anywhere in India; by harmony I mean the blending of the four parts, alto, tenor, treble, and bass. We may go to the very best nauchas, and what he hear there is the voice of a solitary singer. The voice may be good, but however good it is you have only got one-fourth of the full harmony. Every note which is sounded is only part of the chord, to which it belongs. Solo singing is, of course, very excellent where the voice has power, volume of tone and sweetness, with a good compass; but even then continual solo singing becomes tiresome, and variety is needed. It is this variety which renders a first-class negro minstrel performance so unflaggingly popular—the continued change from solo to part-singing. All Native performers always sing without any written or printed music, which of itself prevents any scientific study of it. Most of the tunes which are sung to the accompaniment of the tom-tom consists of, at the most, two bars, which would occupy about two inches of paper; it can, therefore, not be a difficult achievement for each man to compose his own tune. They should certainly try to have less noise and more tune. It is a common reproach brought against religion that it has not encouraged the advance of science. If this be true, it cannot be said that she has not fostered the developments of the arts. She has brought up four lovely daughters—Painting, Sculpture, Poetry, and Music—and has, therefore, conferred vast benefits on mankind. Now, however, a stern young man with knitted brows and searching eyes steps in, and pushes these fair ones aside, or extends to them only a distant sort of civility, or a patronising nod. This is Science. But, however supercilious he may be, he cannot ignore the claims of music, for music is certainly founded on Science. The theory of harmonies is purely scientific, and is demonstrated in the region of Mathematics. Counter-point and composition are also founded on clearly defined rules and laws, the whole forming, as it were, a foundation of rock for the high and noble superstructure which it has to sustain.

FOR COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS. DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED A REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. J. Collis Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false. This Caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR OF CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—See The Times, July 13th, 1884.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE IN NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY, GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH, LONDON, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME OF DIARRHŒA." From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla. Jan. 5, 1880.

TO J. T. DAVENPORT, London. DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaar, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent.

of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power. We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescribe and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharmac. Society of Great Britain, the Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists, 1s. 1d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d.

SOLE MANUFACTURER, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, St. Russell St. W.C.

CURE FOR DEAF.

THE PRESIDENTIAL ARMIES OF INDIA.

BY THE LATE

Colonel S. RIVETT - CARNAC.

(Formerly 11th Hussars)

WITH A CONTINUATION AND GENERAL
REMARKS ON INDIA.

By the Author of "Our Burmese Wars and Relations with Burma," "Distinguished Anglo-Indians," &c.

"The volume is a graphic, stirring record of the English in India, as shown in the achievement of the armies of the three Presidencies. It is a book that deserves wide popularity."—ECHO.

"An interesting book."—DAILY NEWS.

"It is one of the best historical narratives of the real conquest of India that has ever been written. This is a book with which every Anglo-Indian should be pleased. Page after page it gives us some information we had not before. It lets us see far more, as it were, of the military operations of the Company—of its strength and its ambition—than almost any book of its size has hitherto done."—GLASGOW HERALD.

"A valuable contribution to the history of India, by the late Colonel S. Rivett-Carnac. The book has been edited and completed by the accomplished author of 'Our Burmese Wars and Relations with Burma,' and is very interesting."—THE FREEMAN'S JOURNAL.

"Colonel Laurie has done his part thoroughly and well, and we can cordially recommend this most interesting volume to the consideration of the reading public."—DAILY EXPRESS (Dublin).

"Colonel Carnac's share of the book is confined to the first six chapters, the remainder being furnished by Colonel Laurie. . . . It is the sort of book that every man in India ought to possess, for a reference to its pages would decide many points that are constantly cropping up. . . . The book is worthy of Colonel Carnac's reputation."—TIMES OF INDIA.

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

(The only Quarterly Review in India.)

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it... there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenaeum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophecy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

THE BROAD ARROW AND

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE.

ESTABLISHED 1833.

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other Service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs."

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"Those whom the matter concerns will find a faithful and fertile source of information."—SATURDAY REVIEW.

"Contains a fresh recipe for every day of the year, is clearly printed, and of a handy size. The recipes are clearly set forth, and likely to be of practical assistance to cooks and housewives, since they have all been approved by experience."—THE CATERER.

"A useful little cooking book."—HOME NEWS.

"Miss Lucy Jones' 365 receipts are admirable for their terseness and for the ease with which they can be understood. This handy book is a veritable treasure to young housekeepers."—PUBLIC OPINION.

"The collection as a whole in this handy and useful volume will be highly prized."—BRITISH WEEKLY.

"We could not recommend a better work."—ARMY AND NAVY MAGAZINE.

"A considerable number of the recipes are out of the ordinary run, and those which we have examined in detail appear to be constructed on sound principles."—MANCHESTER GUARDIAN.

"Will be found extremely serviceable."—METROPOLITAN.

Intending passengers are invited to send their addresses to MESSRS. HENRY S. KING AND Co., who will forward free of charge a copy of their "Traveller's Guide." Personal baggage Collected, Shipped, and Insured.

Passengers leaving England receive the personal attention of MESSRS. HENRY S. KING AND Co., or their representatives.

Passengers Homeward are received on arrival at the various docks by the representatives of MESSRS. HENRY S. KING AND Co., and special attention is paid to Ladies, Children, and Invalids.

MESSRS. HENRY S. KING AND Co.'s clerks meet the steamers of the P. and O. and other Lines, on arrival at Plymouth, Gravesend, and the Docks, to receive instructions and render such assistance as passengers may require.

Passengers' Baggage and Packages not immediately required may be stored in a dry Warehouse kept for that purpose, at a moderate rent, and facilities are afforded for examination when desired.

Goods, Baggage, and Parcels of every description are received for despatch to all parts of the world, or cleared and forwarded to their destination, in accordance with instructions.

Forms of Declaration for Customs and Insurance are furnished on application.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

"Earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

What higher aim can man attain, than conquest over human pair?

JEOPARDY OF LIFE, THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ:—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset!! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm. The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—
J. C. ENO.

CAUTION.—Examine each Bottle, and see that the Capsule is marked ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." Without it you have been imposed on by a worthless imitation.

OLD BY ALL CHEMISTS, PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS, POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S PATENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.,

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced life they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 10, 1890.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 25th October; from Allahabad and Madras to the 23rd October; and from Calcutta to the 22nd October.

THE VICEROY left Simla on the 21st October, and proceeded to Patiala, where he arrived the following day. In the afternoon he opened the Lady Dufferin Hospital; and on Thursday his Excellency invested the Maharajah with full powers of administration.

THE VICEROY alluded to the cordial relations which existed between the Patiala State and the paramount Power, and to the practical proofs of their fidelity which his Highness's predecessors had given to the British Government.

THE MAHARAJAH, in the course of his reply, said:—"I pray the Imperial Government may never stand in need of assistance from the Indian Princes; but should the occasion arise I will be found as faithful, as firm and as staunch an ally of Her Imperial Majesty as my predecessors have been before me."

RUMOURS regarding the probable resignation of H.E. the Viceroy on account of ill-health are absolutely groundless. His Excellency has now quite recovered from the effects of his fever.

H.E. THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF in India arrived in Bombay on 18th October from Simla, and inspected the harbour defences. He dined with the officers of the Bombay Rifle Volunteers in the evening, and left at night for Poona, where he inspected several of the regiments on Monday, and Tuesday was present at a parade of the whole garrison. He subsequently left for Bijapur, whence he proceeded to Mahableshwur.

LORD HARRIS was to leave Mahableshwur on the 6th November for Bombay, en route to Kattywar, where he will make a tour.

SIR CHARLES ELLIOTT succeeds Sir Stuart Bayley as Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal. In accordance with the usual procedure his nomination was made by the Governor-General in Council, and the Secretary of State's sanction has been received by telegraph. Sir Charles Elliott's place on the Council is taken by Sir Charles Crosthwaite.

MR. F. HENVEY, Governor-General's Agent in Central India, intends resigning the Civil Service from Jan. 1st.

COLONEL PRIDEAUX, Political Agent at Jeypore, has been appointed to officiate as Resident of Kashmir.

COLONEL MILES, Political Resident at Oodeypore, who went home on sick leave, has so far recovered that he expects to be able to return to his post on Dec. 20th. Colonel Peacock, who has been acting for him, and who is now on privilege leave, ending early in November, will then have to vacate.

THE arrangements for filling the vacancy in the Secretariat of the Legislative Department, caused Mr. Macpherson's absence on leave, will probably be that Mr. Leslie Porter will officiate as Deputy Secretary from Jan. 1st, by which time he will have finished his report on the Saharunpore settlement.

COLONEL PEACOCK will succeed Colonel Prideaux as Resident at Jeypore. Major Abbott will be posted to Oodeypore as Officiating Resident.

COLONEL KENNETH MACKENZIE, Judicial Commissioner of Berar, takes privilege leave to England from November 1st. Mr. Obbard officiates in his absence.

MR. W. G. RICE, of the Burma Commission, has sent in an application to retire from the Civil Service.

MR. H. W. BLISS, of the Madras Board of Revenue, will probably join the Legislative Council of the Government of India as an Additional Member during the forthcoming cold weather.

SIR EDWARD BUCK will proceed to Coorg in November, for the purpose of conferring with the Resident on the settlement operations which have been begun there this season. If possible he may visit Gwalior and the Berars en route with a similar object.

THE Khojak Tunnel, it is expected, will be fully completed in August or September next; but engines will be able to run through before then.

FASULBHAI VISIAM KHOJA, merchant, who recently published a volume of travels in Australia, has been appointed an additional member of the Bombay Legislative Council, in succession to the Hon. Rahimatalla Sayani.

MR. G. H. HART, Deputy Accountant-General of the Punjab, has been appointed Assistant Secretary to the Government of India in the Financial Department.

THE Nawab of Tonk goes to Ajmere to meet the Viceroy.

THE Government of India has sanctioned an expenditure of 1½ lakhs for the repair of the overland telegraph line to Persia, the insulation of which is defective.

CAPTAIN W. R. LE G. ANDERSON, Deputy Accountant-General in the Military Department, will vacate his appointment on March 31st next year, when the period of extension of his tenure of office expires.

THE rumours of the Amir's approaching departure from Kabul to Balkh seem to be quite baseless, the latest reports showing that his Highness is remaining quietly in the capital.

MR. W. YOUNG, who has been officiating in the High Court since the spring for Mr. Justice Tyrrell, will continue in that position during the absence of Mr. Justice Brodhurst, who has taken a year's furlough.

THE following resolution has been passed by the Simla members of the Uncovenanted Service Association:—"That this meeting accepts and endorses the report presented by the Simla Committee, and considers that the proposal embodied in it should be carried into effect; but this meeting is of opinion that it is to be clearly understood that the Association will support claims of the special departments."

THE cattle theft on the Nepal Frontier has been engaging the attention of the Government of India for some time past, and Major Durand, the Resident, during his cold weather tour, intends concerting measures with the British and Nepalese officials for the repression of this form of crime on the border.

DETAILS of a curious fatality at Murree show that a flash of lightning struck the chimney of the barracks of No. 9 Mountain Battery. The flash ran up to one side of the room, killing a gunner who was standing near his bed, injuring another three beds further on, finally passing out between the door and the wall, wrenching the former from its place. There were about twelve men in the room at the time. Some were knocked over, but no others were injured.

NEWS from the Chin country to October 21st states that the Chins all round are quiet, and seem settling down rapidly. Large numbers of them come in daily with fowls, yams, plantains, and occasional goat for sale, but are not allowed inside. The Post Siyins have commenced rebuilding their village situated on the other side of the Valley exactly opposite, and when this post is evacuated it is probable that the Tokhlaings will set to work on their village, using what remains of the timber left behind by us.

NOTHING further has been heard of Yatwel, the head Chief of the Kansows, since he left; but it is hoped he will fulfil all his promises, and bring in his Burmese captives within a month. His submission should have good effect on the Nwengas, a neighbouring tribe, who up to the present have held themselves aloof, and from all accounts seem inclined to oppose us.

OWING to bad weather the sickness among the troops has increased, thirty Goorkhas, thirty Bengalis, and seven Madras Sappers being in the hospital. Surgeon Hall is still seriously ill.

NOTES.

THE news that Lord Connemara has resigned the Governorship of Madras, and that his resignation has been accepted by Her Majesty, will not probably take by surprise some who, from private information, have been anticipating this event. It is an event, nevertheless, to be regretted, for Lord Connemara had shown himself a wise, vigorous, and kindly ruler, and like his brother, the late Lord Mayo, had won golden opinions from all classes of the community, European and Native.

MR. J. D. REES, in his account of Lord Connemara's recent tour, refers to some queer petitions which his Excellency received on his journey. At the Tanjore Hospital a petition was presented stating that "the surgeon in charge had not even got the pity to condescend to look at the miserable invalids, whose sight would shake any desperate and strong-hearted stranger." The petitioners expressed the opinion that this medical officer "had a string loose over his subordinates, and would never secure heaven." "Quite the contrary," said they, "will surely be his fate." Another petition for an interview, received at Tanjore, set out that the writer would have been at the station to receive His Excellency "had he not had the pleasure of a scorpion in his left leg, which rendered him unable to come." The same gentleman concluded his letter by asking, "Shall I bring my invaluable lute to play before your Excellency, as an indulgent son?"

REGARDING the possibility of opening out a good line of communication between Bengal and Burma, the Pioneer states that the local authorities in the Chittagong district favour the thorough exploration of the route over the Oipoom Ridge, which lies some distance to the south of the Demagiri-Lungleh road. The hills here sink to 1,200 or 1,400 feet, and the idea is that one tunnel of half-a-mile in length through the ridge would be sufficient to solve the difficult question of gradients. The rivers to be crossed are extremely narrow, and could readily be bridged, as their channels are through the solid rock. East of the Oipoom Ridge the route would lie northward to Haka. This proposed line of communication is to be carefully examined during the ensuing cold weather.

A CORRESPONDENT, signing himself "Codlin, not Short," writes to the Allahabad paper:—"I see with dismay—for too many cooks spoil the 'soorwa'—a proposal from 'Faith, Hope and Charity' to constitute a committee (in which he apparently will not take a part) on the Staff Corps Promotion question. Had he read your paper, or the Civil and Military Gazette, Times of India, or Madras Mail, he would have been aware that a certain number of officers have been quietly assisting to this end for some time past, and that they do not desire any combination or undue agitation: that Messrs. Grindlay and Co., London; H. King and Co., London; King and Co., Calcutta, and Grindlay, Groom and Co., Bombay and at Madras, the agents of either of these two firms will receive donations to the fund, which are invited at the rate of one day's net pay and allowances. Any other suggestions are misleading, and it would be well if those joining the movement at the eleventh hour would remember the proverb entre deux chaises on tombe à terre."

THE Amrita Bazar Patrika says:—"What is necessary to be done is to inflict exemplary punishment in one or two cases, and then Englishmen will take care never to kick their punka-coolies. Has an Englishman ever been adequately punished? Can he show one instance? Then he talks of an Indian assaulting his wife and killing her, and of the punishment of one month's simple imprisonment upon him! Can he show one such case? But we can show scores of cases, though the number of Europeans in India is infinitesimal proportionately to the Indian portion of the population, in which Europeans have been let off with a nominal punishment in cases where their violence has caused the death of an Indian." From this the writer would prove that Natives generally die from rupture of the spleen when struck by Europeans, and not when struck by one of their own countrymen.

BUT what will this truthful journal, and other Native papers which follow it in loyalty towards British rule, say when the details reach India of the accusations which Mr. Stanley has brought forward against the two Englishmen Barttelot and Jameson, as to their treatment of "black" men? The whole of Europe may feel a difficulty in believing such frightful charges of cruelty and murder alleged to have been committed by these English Christian gentlemen; but the Amrita Bazar Patrika and its imitators will declare that the story must be true, for it is only in keeping with their knowledge of English Christian character, and they will gloat over the disgusting details and amplify them and dilate upon them to encourage their readers in their pretended detestation of the English race.

ALL this is very sad to contemplate. But for the honour of humanity it is to be hoped that some speedy explanation will be forthcoming to vindicate the memory of the dead Englishman from the foul taint under which it now lies. Writing from Africa on Aug. 31, 1889, Mr. Stanley did not believe in the charges, for he says in a letter of that date to Major De Winton, "In re atrocities on the Congo, I do not know who made the horrible statement that I have seen connected with the names of Major Barttelot and Jameson. It is simply inconceivable nonsense—a sensational canard." Is it anything more than a wicked canard now?

THE Banker's Magazine has estimated the reduction in market value of recognised securities as nearly thirty-six millions sterling during the month of October. As to "jobbers" and other speculators there need be little pity—they play their game, and take their chance. But as to bona fide investors they are entitled to much commiseration. Still, some of them must have sinned against such light, as since March last we have tried to show them. In that appalling aggregate of loss we venture to affirm that Indian securities and investments bear no appreciable part. On the contrary, it will be found that on the average of British Indian stocks there has, notwithstanding the recent retrogression, been a very decided advance; so that the advice we have, with all deference, offered on this subject of practical commercial finance has been fully justified. Whilst South American, Cape, and United States stocks have gone down amongst the dead men Indian investments will be found to have been fairly well maintained all round. These remarks are necessarily cursory, but we shall endeavour to return to the subject if encouraged to do so.

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, NOV. 8.

The Viceroy inspected the Sardar Rissala or Jodhpore Imperial Cavalry on Thursday, when 326 men, out of a total strength of 436, paraded under Colonel Sir Grotap Singh. The regiment, which consists entirely of pure Rajpoots and Natives of Jodhpore, presented a splendid appearance, being well-mounted, equipped, and trained. Lord Lansdowne expressed his great satisfaction with the corps, and congratulated the officers on the efficiency of the force.

The Maharajah hopes to have in time 1,200 cavalry for the Imperial service, and is carefully selecting the required stamp of men.

Lord Harris is to meet the Viceroy at Abu-road on Tuesday.

Lord Connemara having a short time since expressed a wish to be relieved of his office, the Secretary of State has informed him that Her Majesty has graciously been pleased to accept his resignation, and it is probable that he will leave India in March, having been four years and four months Governor of Madras.

NOVEMBER 9.

The Madras Mail, reviewing Lord Connemara's administration, says that his resignation will be received with universal regret, for he has been not only the most popular, but the most fortunate Governor Madras has had for many years; that he has acquired at first hand an encyclopædic knowledge of the Presidency, its people and officials, that he will return home with enlarged experience and increased reputation, and that the friendly feelings established with Madras will not soon pass.

The Hindoo, the leading Native paper, expresses similar sentiments.

BURMA.

RANGOON, NOV. 7.

Although disappointment is generally felt and expressed that Mr. A. P. MacDonell, whose previous administration was so thoroughly successful, was not appointed Chief Commissioner, Mr. Mackenzie's appointment is favourably received. His past career and high reputation as an administrator eminently qualify him for the difficult task of bracing up the official system in Burma and in establishing a regular administration. That there is urgent necessity for an amendment and a stricter supervision than has hitherto been exercised is shown by the revelations made during the recent trial of Mr. Rice. It was proved that the power of summarily levying fines on villages, which is by law strictly limited to the Chief Commissioner, has been exercised in an oppressive manner by subordinate police officers and petty Burmese officials.

The question of the food supply in several districts of Upper Burma will require Mr. Mackenzie's early attention.

Bawlapaw, chief of the Red Karens, dethroned by the British in 1869, is dead. For many years he had caused much trouble on the frontier. The Shan State Momeit has been raided by a large band of Palangs and Kachins. A force of military and police has been despatched to assist the Tsawbwa.

Preparations for the expedition to the Chin Hills, in order to compel the submission of the remaining tribes, are being pushed on.

Yanyun has been removed from Myingyan to Rangoon. He declares that, before his surrender, explicit verbal assurances of an amnesty were sent to him through a Buddhist monk of high rank. A large number of monks and a great crowd of people escorted Yanyun from Myingyan prison to the steamer.

Prince Krommium, brother of the King of Siam, has visited Mandalay. The Burmese took no notice of him.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

THE INDIAN WHEAT TRADE.

(Englishman.)

The Director of Agriculture for Bengal has submitted to the Local Government an able and exhaustive report on the condition of the wheat trade, with special reference to the proposed introduction of the American elevator system into India. Mr. Finucane is of opinion that the elevators will have little effect in causing clean wheat to be exported so long as the present system of from five to seven per cent. refraction continues. Nevertheless he recommends the tentative encouragement of the proposed Company. This encouragement should take the form of a guarantee of interest at 4 per cent. per annum for five years on a maximum outlay of £25,000, and the grant of free sites for the building of fifteen elevators at the same number of selected stations. We have as little faith in the new plan as Mr. Finucane, for reasons which have before been stated in our columns. The elevator system is quite unsuited to the wheat trade of this country. Besides, the policy of the Indian Railways has hitherto been to encourage the decentralisation of the trade. Supplies are now collected from a hundred roadside stations where fifteen years ago they found their way to a central mart. It is too late for the retrogression which will be necessitated if the elevator plan is to have a chance of success.

THE EAST COAST LINE.

(Pioneer.)

Lord Connemara in inaugurating on the 1st October the construction of the East Coast Railway, with its splendid bridge over the Kistna at Bezwada, has performed a work of deep interest to all India. The fine Northern Circars of Chicacole, Rajamandry, Ellore and Masulipatam, now called the districts of Vizagapatam, the Godavery and Kistna, were the first large acquisition of territory by the British in the Madras Presidency. While, however, the Circars were among the first important territorial acquisitions of the East India Company, their value was enhanced by the circumstance that they enabled a communication by land to be opened up and a tapal to be established between Calcutta and Madras at a time when ships had to be content with going up the coast by one monsoon and down by the next. So strangely, however, have things altered since then that these districts are almost the last in all India to receive the benefit of railway communication. Although but nine hundred miles apart, the post between these cities still takes nearly a week. This state of things is not to last much longer, and although the whole of the project has not been sanctioned, there is no doubt that what begins this month will very shortly eventuate in a broad gauge line from Madras to Calcutta. Money has been sanctioned to survey for a broad gauge line direct from the Madras central station to the Kistna Bridge. This will make Bezwada the centre of four routes:—(1) the Nizam's line to Hyderabad; (2) the South Mahratta line to the Portuguese frontier at Castle Rock, part of which is known as the Bellary-Kistna line; (3) the line to Madras direct; and (4) the line to Calcutta. A branch to Masulipatam is also approved by the Governor of Madras, who has promised the residents of that place to give it his strongest support. The town of Bezwada, prettily situated on the banks of the Kistna, is extending as a trade centre with great rapidity. The magnificent bridge will consist of twelve iron girders, each 300 feet in length, and will cross the river about half-a-mile below the ancient. The girders will rest on stone piers built on wells sunk in the sand. The East Coast line with its bridge over the Kistna will be a splendid memorial of Lord Connemara's régime. He has done his utmost to get the great work sanctioned, and he has justly had the pleasure and pride of inaugurating it. It will give also to Mr. Spring, the Engineer who has had the good fortune to be entrusted with the construction of it, the opportunity of enhancing his fame as a builder of colossal bridges, which stands already on a high pedestal in virtue of his success in a far distant part of the Empire with the bridging of the Chenab.

THE FACTORY COMMISSION.

(Times of India.)

The Factory Commission, under the presidency of Surgeon-Major Lethbridge, Inspector of Jails, Bengal, commenced its sittings very unobtrusively in Bombay, no notification of the event being made public, and the representatives of the Press being excluded. At first sight this would appear to be a somewhat unwise course; but there would seem, on inquiry, to be excellent reason for it. Dr. Lethbridge informs us that the reasons which have influenced the Commission in their decision are, briefly, that if the public were admitted to the inquiry it might have a deterrent effect upon the frankness of witnesses, while it also might possibly lead to something in the shape of intimidation. As the object of the Commission is to get at the exact truth, and it is vitally important that all the witnesses should have an entirely free mind, we can scarcely find fault with the Commissioners for taking every precaution against the coercion of evidence. Besides Dr. Lethbridge, the Commission includes Rajah Piyare Mohan Mukharji, C.I.E., Mr. Sorabjee Shapurjee Bengali, C.I.E., and Mir Mohamed Husain, Assistant Director of Land Records, North-West Provinces, and these gentlemen will be assisted in their own provinces by—Bombay, Mr. Narayen Meghaji Lokhandy; Bengal, Babu Rasik Lal Ghose; North-West Provinces, Mr. Framjee Manckjee, foreman of the Cawnpore Woollen Mills. The subjects to be inquired into by the committee are: (a) Is the limitation of the hours of work for women to eleven in any one day proper and sufficient in view of the conditions under which factory labour is performed in India, and do the female operatives desire that the day's work should be limited to this amount, and, if not, to what amount? (b) Should the law draw a distinction between young persons and adults, and, if so, the age of a child being fixed at from nine to twelve, what should be the definition of a young person, and what should be the hours of employment of this class? (c) Is the limitation of the hours of work for children to nine in any one day proper and sufficient in view of the nature of the work on which children are employed in Indian factories and the conditions under which they have to perform that work? (d) Does Clause 5 of the Bill now before the Legislative Council sufficiently provide for holidays for women and children, and is any provision required prescribing an allowance of holidays for adult male operatives? (e) Do the male operatives desire that a general working day, and, if so, of what length, should be fixed by law except in such cases in which men work in shifts or sets, and, if this change is not desired by the operatives themselves, do the conditions under which they work demand that it should be adopted? (f) Do the male operatives desire that there should be compulsory stoppage of work at a fixed time of the day, and, if so, of what length, and should there be an exception in the case of men who work by shifts or sets? If the change is not desired by the operatives themselves do the conditions under which they work demand that there should be a compulsory stoppage of labour, and, if so, in what manner should it be provided for? The Commission is expected to sit in Bombay for about a fortnight. The Commissioners will then proceed to the North-West Provinces and Oudh, and on concluding their labours there will proceed to Calcutta, where they will conclude their inquiry and prepare their report.

INDIAN ORDNANCE REQUIREMENTS.

(Pioneer.)

The demands made this year by the Government of India upon the Ordnance Department at home far exceed any that have ever before been put forward. The indent includes not only a siege train, heavy guns for the elephant batteries and 12-pounders for the horse and field artillery, but fourteen more machine-guns and 75,000 Martini-Henry rifles. The rearmament of the Army in India is, in fact, being vigorously proceeded with, and it is fortunate that, at this juncture, the Finance Minister has had his coffers replenished by the rise in silver. Otherwise, with the demands for frontier railways, it might have been impossible for him to have displayed so much generosity in his grants for military purposes. The only difficulty seems to be whether the English Ordnance Department will be equal to sending out the arms which they have been asked to supply. The dilatory way in which they treat Indian indents has been notorious in the past, and it is not yet certain that they have shaken off their old indifference. If they fail again this year it will not be from any want of warning by the Government of India, who have pressed them urgently to meet the indents. That any large number of the magazine rifles will be sent out appears more than doubtful, for, so far as we can learn, the difficulty about the ammunition has not yet been solved. It has yet to be seen whether the new smokeless powder will stand the extremes of heat and dampness, while there are still differences of opinion as to whether the best metal covering for the bullet has yet been found. Until these points have been settled and machinery for the manufacture of cartridge on a large scale has been set up in India it would be a hazardous experiment to serve out the magazine rifle to the British garrison. An enormous reserve of ammunition has to be kept in store, and under existing circumstances India would have to depend upon English factories for this supply. The Martini and Snider cartridges now used are manufactured in this country, and the factories at Dum-Dum and Kirkee are quite equal to supplying the whole Army. The 75,000 Martinis which are to be served out on arrival to the Native Army will not, it may be added, be of the same bore as the magazine rifle, but will take the cartridge now in general use. We shall have to wait some years before the whole Army, British and Native, is armed with the same weapon, which will unquestionably be the magazine rifle; but meanwhile it is satisfactory to know that the Snider is being replaced by the Martini, which is an admirable weapon now that its chief defects have been remedied.

AN ADULTERATION ACT NEEDED.

(Bombay Gazette.)

The necessity for an Adulteration Act has once again been brought to notice by a decision of the Madras High Court, granting the conviction of two milkmen charged with selling adulterated milk. The conviction was by a Cantonment magistrate, and the only facts before him were that the defendants had put water in the milk. It is clear, however, from the adulteration section of the Indian Penal Code, beyond which the Cantonment rules, under which the men were convicted, could not go, that the mere diluting of milk does not constitute an offence. The section makes it a necessary condition of adulteration that the food or drink shall be so adulterated as to make it noxious as food or drink, and it has been held that mixing water with milk, sloe leaves with tea, or chicory with coffee, is not prohibited by the section. The object of legislation in these matters has thus far been mainly sanitary. The fine old principle of commercial honesty embodied in the almost classic injunction "when you ask for Glenfield starch see that you get it" has not yet been recognised in Indian legislation against adulteration, except in regard to drugs, the lessening of the efficacy of which by adulterations is made punishable with the same penalty as is provided against the sale of noxious food. The defects of the law have been made most glaringly apparent in discussions on the adulteration of ghee. This has been carried on in such a way as to degrade the quality of the article, or—what is more serious in India—to make it ceremonially impure, and yet the section of the Penal Code will not apply. This is an obviously unsatisfactory way of dealing with the question, and it weakens the guarantee even against the noxiousness which the Code only has in its view. Water may be, and often is, a highly deleterious addition to milk. The buyer of it may be poisoned as well as cheated, and if the law provides no safeguard against cheating in this form it should certainly provide safeguards against poisoning. Mr. Justice Handley had this view when he stated in his judgment in the Madras High Court that "considering the danger to public health which may arise from the mixture of impure water it would be very desirable that a rule be passed making the addition of water to milk by a milk vendor punishable." The Bombay Municipal Act keeps in view the danger of contaminating milk through an impure water-supply, inasmuch as it empowers the Corporation to make bye-laws providing for, amongst other things, the water-supply of dairies and cattle sheds and the cleanliness of milk stores, milk shops, and milk vessels. Whether the purpose in view be to prevent cheating the buyer, or the contamination of the milk he buys, the watering of milk is a practice that should be severely discouraged, and the Madras High Court has done a public service in referring the matter to Government.

THE BEER QUESTION IN MADRAS.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

Some time ago we, in common with our contemporaries, published a telegram from Madras, repeating statements which had been published there regarding certain action alleged to have been taken by the Secretary of State in connection with the Murree Brewery and the question of the supply of malt liquor to the British army in India. The telegram was as follows:—

"It is reported that the Secretary of State has telegraphed for a copy of the constitution of the Murree Brewery Company, and a list of shareholders since the formation of the company, along with particulars of the consideration for which these members obtained shares."

We had our doubts of the accuracy of the alleged implication by the Secretary of State of corrupt dealings on the part of the Murree Brewery Company, but we could not at the time obtain any information on the subject. We learn from England, however, that Mr. Whympere, on hearing of the publication of the telegram, addressed the following letter to the Under-Secretary of State:—

Sir,—The telegram given in the above appeared in all Indian newspapers at the time I was leaving Bombay last month.

I am doubtful as to its accuracy, as it emanated from Madras, where the Murree Brewery Company has received much unscrupulous opposition instigated by interested opponents.

I am, however, instructed by the direction of the company in England to address you on the subject.

I am to point out that when Mr. Caine last year published in Abkari an announcement that he intended to call in the House of Commons for a list of the company's shareholders I at once sent you the list as it then stood.

I am now further to state that if the Secretary of State has called for the information detailed in the telegram quoted in this letter I am to afford every facility for the fullest inquiry and investigation that such wanton charges of corruption on the part of the company, or of its shareholders, either present or past, may not be repeated, or receive attention if repeated.

To this end I am at once to inform you that the company was formed in 1860, that its memorandum and articles of association were registered at Lahore; but that it is doubtful whether the Lahore Registry Office will afford much information prior to 1870. I believe, however, the company's records re capital back to 1860 are intact, and if you so desire it I am to place at your disposal either in India or in England all past share ledgers and lists of shareholders, all registers of transfers and all transfer deeds.

I am to state that by these records you will see that the company has never issued a single share without full payment, and that the money paid has been carried to the debit of the capital account. The corresponding current records are of course open to the inspection of the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies; and if any shadow of suspicion or doubt should exist regarding the absolute purity of the company's proceedings I am to respectfully request that a complete examination may be made of the records above detailed, or of any other records which may be in doubt.

H. WHYMPER, Managing Brewer.

The reply of the Under-Secretary of State was courteous but brief, and stated that there was no truth in the report referred to.

We regret that we should unintentionally have given additional currency to a false report which can only, we imagine, have been circulated in Madras from interested motives.

FOOD ADULTERATION IN INDIA.

The Times of India, writing on the need for a Food Adulteration Act in India, says:—

A series of inquiries made recently into these subjects by a member of the staff of this journal gave some very curious results. Everybody knows how Exshaw's Brandy in the heyday of its popularity was "hocussed" by means of a tiny hole drilled in the hollow at the bottom of the bottle, and its contents made to serve as the basis of three or more bottles of best French Cognac; and how this artifice led to the proprietor enclosing each bottle in a soldered wire cage. But everybody does not know that the same artifice is still employed in the bazaar, and that Hennessy and Martell, and even Exshaw in its wire cage are thus amiably defrauded every day. Three establishments were visited in the bazaar in which a regular trade was done in German brandy, the retail price of which was seventeen shillings a dozen bottles. Seeing that the duty alone is now twelve rupees a dozen, it seems difficult at the first blush to see "how it is done," even for the profit on the packing case—for freight, corking, labels and packing must, at any rate, represent something. But the solution of the problem is very simple. The raw material—wood or potato spirit (according to taste)—is sent out in barrels, and comes through the Customs as "chemicals." The labels and capsules come by post, the bottles are found in the bazaar, and the flavour is imparted by means of "Rum Essence," "Whisky Essence," "Brandy Essence," et hoc genus omne, in which, at two rupees per bottle retail—each bottle containing sufficient for two gallons of "Fine old" anything—a large trade was done until quite recently in Bombay by one of its largest firms. The business is now, we believe, confined to the bazaar, where essences of all sorts—including one for the manufacture of sparkling bottled beer—can be obtained by all and sundry. The process of manipulation is a simple one, but requires, of course, a certain amount of care and skill to bring the bogus liquor up to the true Cognac or Glenlivet flavour. In his sense it is to some extent a work of art, and demands the guiding hand of the Legislature. Claret and many cheap red wines sold under various enticing titles are compounded for the most part of the poor cheap refuse of the French manufactories, which is here manipulated with rich aniline colouring material and flavoured to the bouquet on any required quality of lower grade wine. Subjected to evaporation blue aniline crystals are deposited. Many people are puzzled to know how it is that these decoctions so often get into genuine bottles. The matter is simplicity itself. So long as the consumer fails to deface the label especially, of a good wine, his servant can get a very fair price for the empty bottles in the bazaar, as much as four annas each being sometimes given for empty bottles that have contained high-class wines, and can be brought into the bazaars with a clean and perfect label. The dealer in spurious wines and spirits, however, makes no bones about inventing a label of his own and thus can be found in the bazaar bottles bearing labels closely resembling those of well-known distillers, but with a name attached entirely unknown to the trade. A few months ago there was a brisk trade being done in the bazaar in whisky marked "Fine Old Glenlivet, distilled by James, Son and Co.," with the letters and the name printed so closely together, and all in type of the same height, that a casual glance might very easily mistake it for Jameson, without heeding the description of the whisky. The bottle trick is also accomplished with the kerosene oil tin. When the well-known "Snowflake oil," 150 deg. is finished, the sahib's servant takes the tin in the bazaar and sells it, nominally to the tinman. He soon discovers, however, that if he can avoid breaking the hermetically sealed mouth of the tin, which is covered with a small screw top, he can get a much better price for the article, and accordingly he leaves the original opening intact, and bores a small hole about the size of a two-anna bit at the bottom or at the opposite corner of the tin. The gentleman who deals in those tins fills them with cheap oil, carefully soldering up the hole in the can or (sometimes even plastering over it a bogus yellow label with the word "Snowflake" upon it) and sells it as the genuine 150 deg. oil. These are a few only of the cheerful strategies of the bazaar, but they are typical of all. Nothing seems too cheap to imitate—soap, pickles, condiments, sauces, perfumes, all these things, and a score of others come under the same graceful manipulation as the wines and whiskies, and so long as the vendor steers clear (a very easy matter) of the Merchandise Marks Act he goes on unmolested.

THE ARMY INTELLIGENCE DEPARTMENT.

(Madras Times.)

It is now more than eight years since Sir Frederick Roberts, then Commander-in-Chief of the Madras Army, elaborated a scheme of which the importance was, perhaps, little understood by the lay public. Sir Frederick appears to have felt convinced that war should be prepared for systematically, however remote it might appear, and that, even in times of peace, officers should study closely the art of war. They might at some time have to wander far afield to fight, or they might have to defend themselves against attack. In either case no harm could result from their having a good knowledge of the features of the country in which they happened to be posted, nor from the possession of carefully-considered plans for the protection of non-combatants and the defence of cantonments. It was the opinion of Sir Frederick that a divisional quartermaster-general should not be content with mastering office work. He should study the country, its rivers, hills, towns, and means of communication; he should know which parts are best adapted for field works, and the construction of railways, and should not overlook the matter of water supply; he should know something about the climate, the productions, the fortifications of the country, its resources, and its political and military organisation. Last, but most important, he should be well versed in its military history, for the experience of the past in a given theatre of war is the best guide a commander can have when conducting military operations. To obtain satisfactory military information regarding India, for instance, it is essential that many details should be studied, and his Excellency therefore elaborated a system whereby information of a military nature might be compiled by officers in different districts in regard to those districts, and to any Native States in or about them. As regards Southern India, the following commands had to be dealt with—Mysore, Hyderabad, British Burma, Centre District, Nagpore, Ceded Districts, Malabar, and Canara, and while the hint was given that information that had to be obtained by inquiry should be obtained carefully, so as not to cause any suspicious feeling to be engendered among the inhabitants, nor to arouse uneasiness, a vague hope was held out that the Commander-in-Chief would regard with favour officers who acquired such intelligence as was wanted, and even that the Governor-General in Council was desirous to have reports of the progress made by individuals.

Going further into particulars of the work to be done we may run over the chief points officially recorded. A knowledge of the vernacular and of the customs of the people was deemed of primary importance, and it was further judged expedient to know which particular men might be relied on in times of difficulty. Maps, it was laid down, should be studied and prepared; and officers should not neglect to note topographical details at every opportunity. Regimental officers should be encouraged to assist in this, and everything should be done to enable the higher authorities to have at their disposal intimate local knowledge. This might be turned to good account, it was suggested, by plans of possible campaigns being drawn up. The great desideratum was that the General Officer in command might know exactly what were the local means of carrying on military operations, and might be in a position to act without hesitation. Defence being as important as offence local knowledge such as is referred to, would include an acquaintance with the best sites for defensive works. In regard to all matters, maps, plans, reconnaissances, lists of inhabitants, &c., all should be kept on record and readily available to officers, whether these officers be new to the department or not. The Intelligence Branch at the Horse Guards, it may be observed, is under Lieut.-General H. Brackenbury, C.B., R.A., who is the Director-General of Military Intelligence. He is assisted by six deputy assistants and six staff captains, all of whom are passed Staff College men. All arms of the service are represented by these officers, and the library attached to the branch is understood to be well and wisely stocked. At Simla the Indian Branch is under a well-known surveyor and explorer, Colonel R. G. Woodthorpe, C.B., R.E., who is assisted by one Assistant Q.M.G., one D.A.Q.M.G., and about half-a-dozen, or more, paid and unpaid attachés. On the basis of the scheme referred to, an Intelligence Branch for the Madras Army was established at Ootacamund in 1882, with Major Yule, of the Royal Scots Fusiliers, in charge, assisted by four officers. This branch was, of course, subordinate to Simla and Horse Guards; it worked up information connected with Burma, the Straits Settlements, Siam, Annam, and Ceylon. But in course of time, as it belonged to Madras, it collapsed, and only lately has there been any talk of attempting to revive it.

Last year, as a result of experience in Burma, Brigadier-General Protheroe submitted a recommendation for an increase of the local establishment of the Intelligence Branch of the Quartermaster General's Department in Burma, and it was further proposed that the branch should be transferred to the Government of Madras. But the point upon which stress was mostly laid in this instance was that it was desirable that the Intelligence Branch should be much more closely connected than it then was with the civil authorities in Burma, and Major-General Sir G. White proposed that an Intelligence Officer should be attached to the Secretariat in Rangoon, for the purpose of collecting information from the papers available in that office. Sir Charles Arbuthnot thought that this was worthy of commendation, that the officer thus employed should, so far as the collection of intelligence in the Burma Secretariat was concerned, be subject to the general control of the Chief Secretary, and that the information obtained should be made available for use by the Civil authorities. A good many boundary questions were likely to arise in Upper Burma, and settlement of these would be facilitated by the possession of accurate knowledge in regard to the new frontier and the people living on and near it. In due course a trial of the scheme for one year was sanctioned. Perhaps if Madras is, after all, to have a Branch again, the Burma branch will be made subordinate to it. Of the importance of having a branch in Madras, with headquarters at some central place, there can be very little question. The officers could all be M.S.C. men or officers from troops serving in the Madras Command. Intelligence is useless unless it is kept well up to date, and neglect in Madras is as much to be deprecated as in Burma. As Sir Frederick Roberts observed in 1882, the chance of having to carry out a plan of defence may be remote; that, however, is no reason why precautions should be neglected.

BENGAL.

(Oct. 22.)

In announcing the appointment of Sir Charles Elliott to the Lieutenant-Governorship of Bengal, the Pioneer states it has it "on the best authority that in the selection the claims of Sir David Barbour were fully considered; but that, in view of his past services and the character of the financial operations which the Government of India are likely to have to deal with in the near future, it was considered undesirable, in the interest of the public service, that he should be moved from the charge of a department the affairs of which he has conducted with so much success during the past few years."

It appears from the administration report of the Bengal Stamp Department for the three years ended on March 31 last, that the gross annual revenue collected during the three years was Rs. 1,39,64,263, against Rs. 1,34,62,561 in 1886-87. Both judicial and non-judicial stamps contributed to the increase; the total realisations during 1889-90 exceeded those of any previous year. The average receipts were highest in Calcutta (Rs. 19,51,882) and lowest in Singbhoon (Rs. 10,833). The incidence is highest throughout East and Central Bengal, where the trade is brisk and the population most prosperous. The general incidence of stamp revenue on the population of Bengal, estimated at 66 millions, is 3 annas 4½ pies per head. The revenue from the sale of stamps of all classes has increased from Rs. 87,88,026 in 1874-75 to Rs. 1,27,76,907 in 1884-85, and to Rs. 1,39,77,937 in 1889-90.

MADRAS.

(Oct. 23.)

JUST now a large building adjoining Tippu's palace in the Fort of Bangalore is being pulled down. It was known as the "Samayachar," or slave market. Under the late Maharajah females accused of incontinency and the wives and families of thieves were liable to pay a fine to the Maharajah. If they could not pay the fine they were imprisoned in this building, and sold into slavery at the monthly sales held here. This was done publicly, and under the eyes of the European residents of Bangalore. In July, 1883, when the government was taken out of the hands of Krisnaraj Wodiar, this iniquitous custom was abolished by the British Government.

A NEW ruling in the case of passage-money has been issued placing honorary commissioned officers, senior apothecaries, and warrant officers on the same footing as regards the grant of passage-money with combatant and other officers:—"Whenever passage-money is granted to honorary commissioned officers, senior apothecaries, or warrant officers, to enable them to make their own arrangements for passage to England or the Colonies, it will be at the British India Steam Navigation Company's rates, minus deductions for messing of 2s. per diem for honorary commissioned officers and senior apothecaries, and 9d. per diem for warrant officers, for twenty-nine days, converted into Indian money at the rate of exchange fixed annually for the payment of British troops serving in India.

BOMBAY

(October 25.)

THE Pioneer, in closing an article on the sittings of the Factory Commission in Bombay, says:—"The Native mill-hand may depend upon it, that if ever the day comes when he shall be chained down like his English peer to fixed hours and continuous work, keenly supervised, he will be far less comfortable than he is at present. Evidence, indeed, like that which we have cited, makes it more than doubtful whether in such circumstances the work of an Indian factory could be carried on without most undesirable and most injurious friction."

A CORRESPONDENT writes to the Times of India:—"Mr. Summers, the State Engineer, has left the appointment and joined Government service. The twenty-two "classers" who were under Mr. Summers have been compelled to resign. There will be a telegraphic line opened between Petland and Cambay. The mother of the Nawab, who some time ago left Cambay for Ahmedabad in consequence of some disagreement with Mr. Laud, the late Dewan, returned to Cambay a few days ago. The lady was escorted from the town of Kansam to Cambay by the Nawab and his two brothers, who rode on horseback with naked swords in their hands by the side of the palanquin in which their mother was seated. Major Kennedy, the British Agent, is carefully examining the State books of accounts in company with Lao Bahadur Keshavlal Hiralal, the new karbhari of the State. The distribution of prizes to the successful students of the Cambay Girls' Schools took place on Thursday, when, among others there were present Major Kennedy and Mr. Keshavlal. The Nawab was not present on the occasion. Major Kennedy was asked to preside, but as he declined to do so, the Nagar Sett was called to the chair.

THE following is a summary of the Bombay Presidency season reports for the past week:—"Fair rain during week in the districts of the Southern Mahratta Country and the Rut-nagherry and Sholapore; slight in two talukas of Surat. More wanted for late crops in parts of Ahmedabad, Panch Mahals, and Broach, and in all districts of the Deccan and Southern Mahratta Country except Sholapore. Cotton in parts of Ahmedabad and in one taluka of Baroda, and early crops generally in three talukas of Nassik suffering from drought; standing crops damaged by rats, crabs, locusts, or other insects in parts of Kurrachee, Shikarpur, and Hyderabad; otherwise good. Reaping of early crops and sowing of late crops progressing generally. Fodder scarce in parts of Nassik, Poona, Ahmednugger, Satara, Bijapore, and Dharwar. Agricultural stock good, except in one taluka of Surat and five of Nassik.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES AND PUNJAB.

(October 23.)

A SOMEWHAT unusual and very interesting event took place in Allahabad on Monday, says the local paper. Brigadier-General A. A. Kinloch, just appointed to the command of the Allahabad Division, was entertained to a regimental dinner by Major McCall and the officers of the 4th Battalion of the King's Royal Rifles. As General Kinloch had been connected with the battalion for thirty-five years, it can be well imagined that both the givers and the recipient of the honour of a regimental dinner felt deeply the separation caused by the gallant General's promotion. A special feature of the evening was the performance of a selection of Scotch airs by the band which was the signal for the display of immense enthusiasm.

THE Civil and Military Gazette draws a sad picture of the condition of the poor in the Punjab. "We think," it says, "that the great sufferings of the poor in the Punjab this autumn through the prevalence of fever, the number of households left destitute by the death, or impoverished by the illness of the bread-winners, the weak state of health of many tens of thousands, and the certainty that many hundreds more will die when the cold weather sets in, unless they can be assisted to recover health and strength now—we think that all these considerations are more than enough to justify an organised charitable effort on behalf of the sufferers. If public meetings were held at Lahore and other places, we feel sure that civil surgeons and others could give such details of widespread and bitter suffering as would open the strings of the tightest-drawn purse. Wealthy leaders of Native society find emulation in the good work of relieving the distress of the people more pleasant and profitable than racial and religious quarrelling."

THE HISTORY OF SERVICES.

The following Resolution has been issued by the Government of India:—

In June, 1889, the Comptroller-General, with a view to saving the duplication of work which results from the maintenance of the Service Registers in Account Offices, as well as the History of Services of Gazetted Officers, recommended that the Registers should be abolished, and that the Histories of Services, prepared on a uniform plan and in a condensed tabular form, should take the place of the Service Registers. He also proposed that these Histories should be invariably prepared in the Account Office. Local Governments and Administrations were asked for their opinions on these proposals and to advise whether there was any advantage in retaining entries regarding privilege leave and temporary acting promotions.

2. The replies of Local Governments and Administrations read in the preamble show a general consensus of opinion that the History of Services should in future be prepared in the Account Office and in tabular form. The Governor-General in Council accepts this view, and directs that the Histories be in future prepared in the form appended to this Resolution.

3. The general opinion is that only privilege leave taken since an officer last returned from furlough need be shown in the Histories. This view has the concurrence of the Government of India.

4. Though there is some difference of opinion with regard to the entry of acting appointments, the view most generally accepted is that an acting promotion which involves a change of duties should be shown, but that grade promotions should be omitted. This view appears to the Governor-General in Council to be reasonable; but, inasmuch as the Histories include a notice of the services of all gazetted officers in Civil Departments, it cannot be brought into practice without some modification. While, therefore, the appointment of an Assistant Magistrate and Collector or of an Assistant Engineer, 2nd grade, to officiate as a Joint Magistrate and Collector or an Assistant Engineer, 1st grade, respectively, should not be entered, it will be desirable in the case of members of services which, like the Financial and Educational Departments, consist mainly of grade, the duties of which are not separate and distinct, to enter all acting promotions.

5. Particulars of literary works should be entered in notes at foot of the tabular statements. This information will have to be specially supplied to the Account Offices by officers who have produced literary works, and a note requesting them to communicate such intelligence to the Account Office should be prefixed to each History. The Government of the Punjab is of opinion that the numbers and dates of any official letters in which officers have received the special thanks of Government or the Secretary of State should be added as footnotes, and that the tabular statement should show in italics appointments to, and promotions in, Orders, such as C.S.I., C.I.E., and C.M.G. The Governor-General in Council fears that it would be very difficult to distinguish between ordinary and special commendations, and considers that it would be preferable to omit mention of them altogether, lest the bulk of the Histories should be unnecessarily increased. Information in regard to the different Orders should, as suggested by the Punjab Government, be given in italics.

6. The Punjab Government has hitherto provided for the inclusion in the Histories for that Province of information showing (a) the place of education and academical degree, if any, in the case of European and Eurasian officers; (b) caste, tribe, home of the family if in India; and academical degree, if any, in the case of Native officers. There is no objection to the inclusion of this information in the Histories for that or any other Province in which the Local Government or Administration considers it desirable, but no other additions to the information contained in them should be made without the approval of the Government of India.

Miscellaneous.

THE case of "Mitchell v. Regina" came before the Law Courts again on Friday. Mr. J. D. O'Flynn applied to their Lordships in the Queen's Bench for a "Mandamus v. the Lords of the Treasury," to show cause why, when Parliament voted ample funds to pay Major-General Mitchell, R.E., his compensation money on retirement, the War Office not only withheld the payment, but returned a large surplus to the Treasury. The sums returned were £25,720 and £31,300. Their Lordships held that the gallant officer's affidavit did not disclose sufficient facts to warrant the issue of a mandamus against the Treasury; but they held that the application could be renewed in the form of an application for a mandamus against the Secretary of State for War. Mr. O'Flynn intimated his intention to renew the application at an early date. Grave constitutional issues are at stake. The plaintiff originally applied to the War Office and Treasury for money guaranteed to him by Royal Warrant. Failing to obtain any satisfactory reply, he petitioned the Queen, who endorsed his petition with her own sign-manual. "Let right be done;" but the War Office eluded a trial by the side-wind of a demurrer, thereby practically rendering the "Petition of Right Act, July, 1860," null and void. The War Office have also rejected the advice of the Attorney-General and the Duke of Cambridge to settle the matter. Under the circumstances, General Mitchell is determined to carry the matter on.

THE Commander-in-Chief in India, in a Headquarters' Order issued on Oct. 15, pays a high tribute to the retiring Adjutant-General. Sir Frederick Roberts says:—"I cannot allow Major-General Elles to give up the responsible position of Adjutant-General in India without placing on record my high appreciation of the conspicuous ability he has displayed in carrying out the duties of the important appointment he has held for the last three years and a-half, and I must express my deep regret that the exigencies of the service oblige me to dispense with the assistance and co-operation, not merely of a thoroughly competent official, but of a valued personal friend." Then, after having traced Major-General Elles's military career, Sir Frederick continues:—"Throughout his career Major-General Elles has displayed those qualities which pre-eminently fit officers for the Staff of the Army. He is surpassed by none in tact, judgment, and courtesy, and he is distinguished for his administrative capacity, military ability, and literary attainments. His merits as a soldier and Staff officer have been appropriately recognised by his being appointed a civil C.B. in 1879, Aide-de-camp to the Queen in 1881, and a military C.B. in 1887. In relinquishing his present appointment for a district command General Elles may rest assured that his work at Army Headquarters is not likely to be forgotten; that his efforts to improve the Army in India must produce a lasting effect; and that in exchanging Staff duties for an executive command he carries with him the esteem and affection of every officer with whom he has been associated."

SOUTH INDIAN RAILWAY.—An extraordinary general meeting of the South Indian Railway Company was held on Nov. 4 at Cannon-street Hotel, Captain J. G. Johnston presiding. The Chairman said that on Dec. 21 the contract with the Indian Government expired, and the price payable for the company undertaking it was proposed by the directors to apply, according to resolutions which would be submitted, by which every shareholder for £100 Five per Cent. Stock would receive £130, and for every £100 Four and Three-quarter per Cent. Stock £124. During the long period of thirty-two years the Five per Cent. Guaranteed had been paid. The company were on very excellent terms with the Indian Government, and an agreement with the Secretary of State for a fresh contract was practically concluded. The terms were for fifteen years, to be increased to twenty years. Shareholders who received the £130, if they invested in the new company, would receive 4½ per cent. for the first three years, and 3 per cent. for the subsequent seventeen years. The chairman referred to the great success of the railway and its future favourable prospects. He then moved a resolution authorising the distribution of £4,197,556 11s. The second resolution included the statement that that part of the first resolution relating to the gratuities to the staff be without prejudice to the rights of any stockholder who might not assent to the said gratuities. The third resolution indemnified the directors against any claims, demands, costs, &c., to which they might be subjected in relation to the distribution of the assets of the company. The resolutions were seconded and agreed to. Upon the motion of Mr. Bullock, seconded by Colonel Adams, it was proposed that any surplus that might remain from the £1,604, Section A, after paying for the costs of carrying the resolutions, be apportioned by the directors among themselves. Mr. Wood, as an amendment, moved that it be appropriated for the purpose of increasing the gratuities to the staff. The resolution was carried, only two voting for the amendment. The meeting then closed.

PROMOTION IN THE INDIAN ARMY.

INDIA OFFICE, NOV. 7, 1890.

Victoria, R.I.—Whereas it has been represented to us that it is expedient for us to amend the Regulations for Governing the Promotion in the Army of the Officers of our Indian Forces, and their transfer to the Unemployed Supernumerary List, our will and pleasure is that, with effect from January 1, 1891, the following Regulations be established, and be the sole Regulations for these purposes, viz. :—

1. A Lieutenant-Colonel may attain the rank of Colonel—
(a) By twelve years' service in the substantive grade of Lieutenant-Colonel in the "local service." (b) On being selected for the rank of Colonel under such regulations as our Secretary of State for India in Council may lay down, provided he shall have completed three years' satisfactory service as a Lieutenant-Colonel. (c) By Brevet, on appointment to be one of our Aides-de-Camp. (d) By Brevet, as a reward for distinguished service in the field. (e) By Brevet, for distinguished service of an exceptional nature other than in the field.

2. If it shall be necessary to appoint an officer to a situation which may be declared by our Secretary of State for India in Council to be one which shall carry the rank of Colonel, although the officer may not have the rank or service to qualify for promotion, the local and temporary rank of Colonel only shall, until he shall have completed the necessary qualifying service, be conferred on him while holding such appointment.

3. The rank of Brigadier-General shall be local or temporary only.

4. The names of General officers shall be borne upon four separate lists. The first shall contain the names of those on the Active List, and of those who, having been promoted out of their regular turn, shall be supernumerary; the second, the names of officers retired under our Royal Warrant of December 31, 1877; the third, the names of officers placed on the Unemployed Supernumerary List under our Royal Warrant of October 24, 1881; and the fourth, the names of those who shall have retired from the service.

5. There shall be no establishment of General officers, and after the number of General officers has been reduced, and the names of the Staff Corps officers removed from the list of the Indian Army, as provided in Articles 6 and 7, there shall be no more than one General. Subject to this limitation, a Lieutenant-General of the Indian Army shall be promoted to the rank of General when the Lieutenant-General of the Staff Corps next below him in seniority as a Lieutenant-General is promoted to the rank of General in ordinary course, or, if there be already a General of the Indian Army, so soon thereafter as a casualty may occur. The maximum number (not to be exceeded except during a period of war) of Lieutenant-Generals shall be three, and that of Major-Generals shall be thirteen, and promotion to those grades shall be made under such Regulations as our Secretary of State for India in Council may lay down.

6. The names of the Colonels and General officers of the Staff Corps now borne on the Indian List to regulate promotion shall remain on that list (to be thereon retained in italics, until their death, retirement, or transfer to the Unemployed Supernumerary List, for the purpose of regulating the promotion of the officers below them) until the number of General officers has been reduced as provided in Art. 7. The names of the Generals and Lieutenant-Generals shall be removed when the number of Lieutenant-Generals has been reduced, and the names of the Major-Generals and Colonels when the number of Major-Generals has been reduced.

7. After December 31st, 1890, the number of General officers on the Active List shall be gradually reduced as follows:—(a) Officers who were on the establishment of General officers on December 31st, 1886, shall be promoted to vacancies in the rank of Lieutenant-General as casualties occur. (b) As vacancies occur in the rank of Major-General the second vacancy in every two shall be absorbed; and when there are no more officers qualified under (a) for promotion to the rank of Lieutenant-General the third vacancy of every three in that rank shall also be absorbed. The remaining vacancies shall be filled until the number of Lieutenant-Generals of the Indian Army is reduced to three, and that of Major-Generals to thirteen.

8. Subject to the above reduction, every vacancy in the rank of Major-General shall be filled by the promotion of the senior Colonel of the Indian Army; or by the moving up of the name of the senior officer of the Staff Corps borne on the list to regulate promotion; or by the absorption of a General officer promoted for distinguished service. Every vacancy in the rank of Lieutenant-General or in that of General shall be filled up in like manner by the promotion of the senior officer of the Indian Army in the grade next below, or by the moving up of the name of the senior officer of the Staff Corps borne on the list of that grade.

9. Temporary or local rank and command as Major-General, Lieutenant-General, or General may, for the convenience of our service, be conferred on an officer of the next lower rank (whether he hold such rank permanently or temporarily), without regard to seniority.

10. A Colonel who shall vacate an appointment as temporary Major-General, may, upon the recommendation of our Governor-General in Council, be made an honorary Major-General.

11. Promotion may be conferred upon a Colonel, Major-General, or Lieutenant-General, without regard to vacancies, for distinguished service in the field or of an exceptional nature other than in the field; and in such case the recommendation of our Governor-General in Council, detailing the services for which the officer is promoted, shall be published in the General Orders of our Indian Military Forces and in the London Gazette.

12. Field-Marshal shall be appointed at the will of the Sovereign, and the rank shall be conferred without reference to seniority. A General officer, retired under our Warrant of December 31, 1877, or placed on the Unemployed Supernumerary List under our Warrant of October 24, 1881, shall remain legible for promotion to the rank of Field-Marshal.

13. A Major-General or Lieutenant-General on the Unemployed Supernumerary List, who was promoted to the former rank not later than Dec. 31, 1886, shall be promoted to higher rank when the officer next junior to him on the effective list is so promoted.

14. Until the number of General officers has been reduced, as provided in Article 7, a Colonel, a Major-General, or a Lieutenant-General placed on the Unemployed Supernumerary List shall be promoted to higher rank when the officer on the establishment who was next junior to him as a Colonel shall obtain such promotion.

15. A Major-General shall be placed on the Unemployed Supernumerary List on attaining the age of sixty-two years, and a Lieutenant-General or General on attaining the age of sixty-seven years.

16. Until the number of General officers in each grade has been reduced, as provided in Article 7, a General officer shall be placed on the Unemployed Supernumerary List after being unemployed for five years continuously since his promotion to Major-General, or after being unemployed for seven years continuously from the time of his last employment as Colonel.

17. A Colonel of the "local service"—that is, an officer whose appointment was not made subject to the conditions prescribed in the General Order of our Governor-General of India in Council, dated Dec. 9, 1879, No. 1,637, shall be placed on the Unemployed Supernumerary List, provided he is in receipt of Colonel's allowance and not in military employ:—If he attained the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel before Oct. 1, 1877, at the age of fifty-eight years; if he attained the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel on or after Oct. 1, 1877, at the age of fifty-seven years.

18. A Colonel of the "General List"—that is, an officer whose appointment was made subject to the above-mentioned General Order—shall be placed on the Unemployed Supernumerary List on attaining the age of fifty-seven years; a Lieutenant-Colonel at the age of fifty-five years.

19. In the event of an officer being called to, or engaged on, active service in the field, on or about the time when, under any article of this our Warrant, he would be liable to be transferred to the Unemployed Supernumerary List, our Secretary of State for India in Council may, on the recommendation of our Governor-General in Council, extend his term of service during the continuance of the emergency as a supernumerary to the establishment.

20. If in any special case, not under the terms of the preceding article, it appears desirable to postpone the transfer of an officer to the Unemployed Supernumerary List, our Secretary of State for India in Council may, upon the recommendation of our Governor-General in Council, so postpone it.

21. Our Secretary of State for India in Council, upon the recommendation of our Governor-General in Council, may also bring back an officer from the unemployed Supernumerary List to the Effective List, should it appear essential to the interests of our service to do so.

22. An officer whose case has been specially treated under Articles 19, 20, or 21, shall, so long as he remains on the Effective List, be supernumerary thereon.

Given at our Court at Balmoral, this 27th day of October, 1890, in the fifty-fourth year of our reign.

By Her Majesty's command.

COLLOQUIAL PERSIAN.*

The study of the Persian language has been confined, in Europe, to the classical and literary form of the language, because attention has been bestowed almost exclusively on the magnificent literature which it enshrines. A change is now coming over the scene; for the pressure of Western ideas can no longer be resisted, and accordingly the rich lands of Persia will again become scenes of activity and homes of plenty. The national advantages of Persia are very great, arising from its geographical position, its magnificent water frontage, its stretches of arable land of surpassing fertility, the equability of its climate, and its defensible cup-like formation. The powerful empire which once had its seat there is sufficient proof of the capabilities of this long-neglected country. The two visits which the Shah has paid to Europe indicate that the "dry bones" in that "valley of death" are about to arise, and to clothe themselves with sinews and flesh. New trade is springing up, new ideas are beginning to circulate, capital is being invested, strangers are entering the country more freely, and Persians are travelling and inquiring, and awakening slowly to the critical condition of their country. This remarkable revivification, after a slumber of centuries, is, at present, only recognised by a few Europeans; but it is already sufficiently active to occasion a demand for information about the colloquial forms of Persian as distinguished from the classical idiom. The Shah himself wisely wrote his famous diary in colloquial Persian, and displayed a prudence, both in the form and matter of that remarkable book, which his less penetrating critics failed to apprehend. Since the publication of that work the demand for exemplars of modern Persian has increased, and the book under notice is the last attempt to meet that demand. The book consists of three recent plays, which were written in Turkish by a Persian, and from Turkish rendered into the colloquial by another Persian gentleman. The idiom, therefore, is unexceptionable, for it is the language of a Persian, writing freely, in dialogue form, of common actions, so that ordinary Persians may be entertained by the relation. Mr. Rogers, of the Bombay Civil Service, has printed these plays, and has supplied an interleaved translation, which gives the literal meaning of each sentence as it occurs. Exception may be taken to this on the ground that, by so doing, the spirit of the original, that is, the real meaning, is thereby dissipated. But Mr. Rogers has prepared his book for students, for those who wish to unravel the idioms placed before them; and, in such cases, it is impossible for the instructor to be too precise and wooden. The book, with its complete vocabulary, cannot fail to be of great use to those who wish to acquire a practical knowledge of Persian.

THE RISE AND REIGN OF CHAOS.†

This is the completion of a work the prologue to which we favourably reviewed some time ago. In giving now Books II. III. and IV. of "Religion, or God in all things," of which the prologue was Book I., Mr. Spratly has put forth fresh strength of thought. He has done wisely in not insisting so much as he did before on the manipulation of vowel sounds, and, freed from the trammels of that artificial arrangement, his verse moves on with greater ease and not less harmony. He owns that he made a blunder at first in giving so much attention to the "vowels," the causes that produced the blunder being inexperience, ignorance, and want of sufficient training. "A self-taught writer must," he says in his modest preface, "always be severely handicapped in competing with more elaborately-educated rivals. Two or three years' schooling, much bodily weakness in early life, and the feverish rush of modern business engagements, are not calculated to assist the aspirant to poetic honours." There is little need, however, for apology. The freshness and vigour with which Mr. Spratly handles the difficult theme which he has chosen for his verse shows that, if self-taught, he has been well taught. He has essayed certainly an ambitious flight in attempting to deal with the mystery of evil, and to propound from it a theory connecting science and religion in closest bonds; but he has done so with such skill and reverence that his effort will commend itself to the thoughtful and educated reader. The arguments which preface each book are afterwards well sustained in sonorous verse, displaying great descriptive power and frequent passages of much poetic beauty. Here is one

* "Persian Plays. Three Persian Plays, with Literal English Translation, and Vocabulary." By A. Rogers. London: W. H. Allen and Co., 1890.

† "The Rise and Reign of Chaos." A Scientific Epic. By W. J. Spratly. Digby and Long.

from the description of the naked void before the creation of worlds:—

"Silence reposed upon the dark immense;
And solitude made stern the deep profound.
Grim stillness reigned, if we may robe the scene
With attributes of awful pomp, when space
Had none, was without life or moving soul,
Or essence of the lowest germ of force,
Was lighter than the shadow of a ghost
On moonlit sward or crumbling castle-tower.
Grand heaven as yet was not, save in the heart of God.

Here is another—a description of Faith:—

"Faith is the child of science and of fact,
The guide and goal of darkened mystery;
Light of the heart, the ecstasy of thought,
Nourished by knowledge, and by skill matured;
The poetry and heaven of finite souls,
And wand that shows the secret wish
Of God."

These are taken at random, but the book abounds with passages of equal power and beauty of expression, showing rare poetic gifts in the author.

MR. ARTHUR W. THOMSON, C.E., B.Sc., has been appointed by the Secretary of State for India to be Professor of Mechanism and Applied Science in the Science College, Poona, India.

AMONG the passengers on the Sutlej, which conveys the Marchioness of Lansdowne to India, is the Munshi Abdul Karim, the Queen's Indian Clerk, who is going home on three or four months' leave.

LADY EVELYN FITZMAURICE, daughter of the Marquis of Lansdowne, accompanied by her uncle, Lord Frederick Hamilton, leaves England for India in a week or ten days.

THE QUEEN has been pleased to confer a Knight Commandership of the Bath upon Colonel C. B. Euan-Smith, C.B., Her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General at Zanzibar.

LIEUT.-COLONEL C. H. MORE-MOLYNEUX, Bengal Staff Corps, late Deputy Assistant-Adjutant and Quartermaster-General with the Burma Expeditionary Force, has been offered the post of Military Attaché at St. Petersburg. He is a graduate of the Staff College, and prior to joining the Indian Army served in the 87th and 37th Regiments.

THE MARCHIONESS OF LANSDOWNE and suite left Victoria Station on Friday, at 3.15, en route for India, to rejoin the Viceroy. There was a very large gathering present of relatives and friends to bid her farewell, among them being her mother, the Duchess Dowager of Abercorn; her sisters, Duchess of Buccleuch and Marchioness of Blandford; her brothers, Duke of Abercorn and Lord Frederick Hamilton; her nieces, Lady Frances, Lilian, and Norah Spencer Churchill; Countess of Antrim, Viscountess Melgund, Viscount and Viscountess De Vesci, and Lord and Lady Camoys.

THE Calcutta Statesman deplors the decadence of the Calcutta Rifles Volunteer movement. It says, "It is an open secret that, while the number of corps has increased, while different branches of the service have sprung into existence, increased, and multiplied, the old original Volunteer Corps—the Calcutta Volunteer Rifles—has been steadily dwindling and deteriorating, suffering something very like what a contemporary the other day designated 'a species of dry-rot.'"

THE dulness of Rawul Pindee (says the Morning Post) has been enlivened by a sensational elopement and marriage. A gallant major's daughter and a sergeant of Ordnance are the dramatis personae of the adventure. While the "stern parent" of the fair one was on duty she and her chosen one went off to the Roman Catholic chapel, where the priest commenced the ceremony, or rather sacrament, that would make the loving pair "one." Just as the marriage service was concluded the "stern parent" rushed into the sacred edifice to forbid the union. Alas! it was too late; in fact, had he been earlier, the result would have been the same, for difference of rank is hardly a sufficient "cause or impediment," and the young lady was fully of age in the eyes of the law to choose for herself. Reports are very conflicting as to what followed in the chapel; but all agree that bride, bridegroom, and priest, to say nothing of the clerk, had a very mauvais quart d'heure. The Major is an "honorary," the bride is about twenty-two years of age, and the daring sergeant belongs to the Ordnance Department. It is said the father struck the bride at the altar, and the sergeant-bridegroom struck the Major; whereupon the Major abused and struck the priest, when the soldier-chapel-clerk interposed. We learn that bridegroom and clerk were both threatened with the terrors of military law; and for the present there the case rests.

DISCHARGED SOLDIERS IN INDIA.

"FADS" travel fast. An agitation has been lately raised in some newspapers and magazines in England concerning the "wrongs" of the private soldier, and writers who know nothing at all of the interior economy of a regiment have been giving their advice most liberally as to how these wrongs are to be remedied. It has been suggested that the State should pay Mr. Thomas Atkins better—that it should give him as much to eat and drink as he wishes—that when he damages his clothes or his barracks he should not be required to pay for his wilfulness—that his sphere of amusements should be enlarged—that he should not be rebuked for trivial faults—and that, in fact, life should be made not only easy for him, but very delightful. These were "recommendations" confined, we thought, to the home Press; but we were mistaken. By the present Mail from India we find that the "wrongs" of Mr. Atkins are also being agitated there, and that the Press has also come forward to right them. The Times of India leads the way of following the "fad" from England, as "per sample":—

"Before entering on the great question of the employment of soldiers after their discharge, which we believe to be the great secret of successful recruiting, it may be well to touch upon one or two minor matters that greatly affect the comfort of the soldier, small as they may seem. In the first place, his pay, whatever it is, should be free from all deductions except as a punishment, and when ordered as such should be regularly entered in the company defaulter sheet. He should be cut nothing for rations, the 'grocery' stoppages being only an irritating fine productive of little benefit to the State. Sufficient uniform should be given to the recruit to enable him to perform his duties without unnecessarily soiling the uniform for which he is responsible. For this purpose an old pair of trousers and a jacket should be given him gratis, in addition to his regular kit, sufficiently good to suffice for recruit drill, fatigues, &c., and yet not so good as to be spoiled by a few specks of dust. He should not be charged for altering his uniform to fit him, or for marking it, or for having his hair cut according to regulation, and a fair amount of barrack damages ought to be allowed for and met by the State. All these matters may seem trifles, but they are not so to the recruit, and 'stoppages' are a fruitful cause of desertion. Something has been done to lessen the amount of sentry-go, and care should be taken that no sentry is posted unnecessarily. Important as the duty is, it is equally important that it should not be regarded as a hardship."

This is very kind and considerate, and no doubt Tommy Atkins would appreciate every arrangement made to prevent every duty being a "hardship." Only make sure for him that military life shall be "all beer and skittles," and you will probably have reached the discovery of what is a British soldier's idea of perhaps happiness. But, unfortunately for the carrying out of this idea, common sense has not altogether abandoned the military authorities, either at home or in India, who have to mould the destiny and decide upon the duties of the soldiery whom the British and Indian taxpayers have to provide for. And with some experience of that soldiery we make bold to say that no soldier of any other nation is so well paid, fed, clothed, housed, and cared for as the British soldier, whether he is serving at home, in the colonies, or in India. In India he is most especially well looked after, and his lot there is altogether a pleasant one so long as he behaves himself. It may be somewhat monotonous, but so is the lot of his officer—of the civilian—indeed, of any Englishman there. But Indian service is immensely popular with the rank and file of the British army, and few complaints are heard against it from that body. It is from their foolish and ignorant scribbling friends in the newspapers that any such complaints come. But at a time when India is more than ever the best training ground for the English soldier, and the only place where the evils of the "short service" system have a chance of being combated, certain "faddists" recommend that the private or non-commissioned officer, on the expiry of his first term of service, should be provided with some civil employment by the Government, or the railway, or other companies, or encouraged to settle down and colonise in the hills. It is to be hoped that the Government of India and the military authorities there will not be led away by any such special pleading on the pretended grounds that it is for the benefit of India, as well as for the welfare of the discharged soldier himself. India will not benefit by a multitude of time-expired soldiers, free from the restraints of discipline, being scattered about the country in uncertain employments. The experiment has been tried on a small scale by the railway companies, and has not proved a success. Nor are military hill colonies wanted or possible. What the time-expired soldier or non-commissioned officer of sound character and physique should be encouraged to do in India is to—re-enlist. Let a liberal bounty be offered—throw in even a brief furlough to Europe—but if the man is worth keeping, try and keep him. He will be of more use to India, and better off himself in continuing in his profession than in any civil employment. We should by this means have in India a long service army, seasoned men, efficient non-commissioned officers—a force thoroughly trained, and to be relied upon should occasion arise.

THE Madras Government has just passed final orders on a scheme for the wider distribution of the quinine manufactured at its factory at Naduvattam. The powder has been made up in five-grain packets, which will be sold throughout the Presidency by the agency of Postmasters, Revenue officials, and heads of villages at a uniform rate of 3 pias. The price will be notified in District Gazettes, and the distributing agents prohibited from demanding a higher figure, though they will be allowed to retain a commission of 4 per cent., included in the price. Collectors are to report in due course how the scheme works. Government remarks that "it attaches great importance to the present experiment

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE Lahore paper is glad to hear that it has been decided to assemble annual classes at Rurki, Kirki, and Bangalore, for instruction of men as pioneer-sergeants. Under the Queen's Regulations, no soldier could be appointed a pioneer-sergeant unless he held a Chatham certificate. To do away with the hardship, it was necessary to provide means in India for enabling men to obtain certificates which would be accepted by the Horse Guards as equivalent to those granted at Chatham. We believe that this has now been arranged, and that classes will assemble in each presidency, on the 1st of November, annually, for the purpose of giving soldiers in India the opportunity of qualifying as pioneer-sergeants.

The conversion of the four Hindustani Regiments, which alone remained of the "Levies" hastily raised in the Mutiny, cannot have come, thinks the Pioneer, as a surprise to anyone who has watched the military policy of the Government of India since the Russian scare of 1885. Side by side with the question of strengthening the North-West Frontier and completing the system of coast defences has come that equally important matter of providing men fit to meet a European enemy in the field. The increase to the British garrison was made coincident with the raising of new Native regiments, cavalry and infantry, recruited from among the Sikhs, Dogras, Gurkhas and Punjabi Mahomedans. Then there was a pause, as the drain upon the fighting races for the Burma Military Police directly affected recruiting. But within the last year a portion of these very police has been changed into regular soldiers, displacing an equal number of Madrassi sepoy; while the formation of Afridi companies in certain Punjab regiments has also been carried out. When the disbandment of three Madras Infantry Regiments was ordered a few months ago, there was an indignant protest made on behalf of the "old Coast Army" and the cry went up to Bengal "Disband some of your own Hindustani regiments." Those who in their anger thus attacked favoured Bengal were not, of course, aware that under a consistent course of policy that step was actually impending, the object being to eliminate gradually from the Native Army the classes which now furnish inferior material for the rank and file. In the place of the 3,000 odd Sepoys hailing from Oudh, the N.W. Provinces, and the neighbourhood of Delhi we are to have Gurkhas, Dogras, Punjabi Mahomedans, and Pathans from beyond the frontier, four class regiments being raised instead of the old Levies. The change is one to be approved in every way, and though the interests of a few individual officers may, for the moment, be affected, the public at least must acknowledge that Government are anxious to spend their money on the best material, and not to waste it upon troops which could only be relied on for garrison duty of a certain kind in case of really great war. The question will probably be asked, continues our contemporary, what is to become of the officers of the four Hindustani regiments selected for conversion into battalions recruited from among the warlike races? Taking the regiments in order it will be found that the 33rd has two full colonels, Cumberlege and Cologan, as commandant and second-in-command, respectively. Colonel Cumberlege's seven years' tenure of command would not, under ordinary circumstances, expire until September 1894, while Colonel Cologan has already completed thirty-five years' service, and will probably take pension. There are no majors in this particular regiment. In the 38th Lieut.-Col. Gowan was only appointed to the command on November 1st, 1889. His second-in-command is Major Austin, appointed on the same date, but under orders to be transferred to the 3rd Bengal Infantry. The other officers include only captains and lieutenants. In the 39th Colonel Ommancey, formerly of the 11th Bengal Infantry, is commandant with nearly thirty-two years' service; the wing-commanders are both captains. In the 40th, Col. S. B. Home, commandant, is on leave, and purposes, we believe, retiring. Major Bailey is 2nd in command, and Colonel Vyvyan of the General List is the junior wing-commander. When new regiments are raised it is customary to make a careful selection of the officers upon whom will fall the responsible duty of working up some hundreds of recruits into good soldiers, and presumably, in the present instance, this principle will be followed. There are, fortunately, but few field-officers to be provided for; and if the offer of extra pensions be made to the seniors, as was recently done in the case of the infantry regiments, broken up in Madras, a small wave of promotion should pass over the Bengal Staff Corps. The new battalions of Gurkhas, Dogras, Punjabi, Mahomedans and trans-frontier Pathans will rank among the best in the army, and the officers selected for them may consider themselves fortunate in having splendid material to deal with in the first instance.

(From the Army and Navy Gazette.)

COLONELS C. W. R. CHESTER, Bengal S.C., and G. W. Cole and H. H. C. G. Warrington, Madras Infantry, have been promoted Major-Generals on the establishment of the Indian Army. General Chester, who was born Jan. 9, 1833, joined the Indian Army Sept. 7, 1850, and became Colonel Feb. 20, 1881. He was a Brigade-Major, Bengal, Oct. 12, 1864, to Oct. 11, 1869, and an Assistant-Adjutant-General of Division, July 30, 1873, to Oct. 27, 1879; served in the North-West Frontier Campaign of 1863 (mentioned in despatches, medal with clasp). Colonel Cole was born Oct. 21, 1836; joined the Madras Army Dec. 4, 1855; and became Brevet-Colonel July 1, 1881. He has no war service. Colonel Warrington was born July 2, 1836; joined the Madras Army Oct. 20, 1856; became Brevet Colonel Oct. 1, 1881; and served in the Indian Mutiny of 1858 (medal).

The officers on the Indian Local List who are first for promotion are:—Colonels F. G. Rideout, Madras; E. G. Dixon, Madras; R. A. C. Hunt, Bombay; C. S. Sturt, Bombay; H. Coningham, Madras; and H. R. Elliott, Madras. They all obtained their Brevet Colonelcies on July 1, 1881, the same day as Colonel Morley got his promotion. It will be seen, therefore, that when the new rule comes into operation on Jan. 1, 1891—which affects the Imperial and Indian service alike—the officers to be first injured on all three lists will be those who were advanced to Colonel's rank on the memorable July 1, 1881.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL CHARLES E. NAIRNE, C.B., Royal (late Bengal) Artillery, Inspector-General of Artillery in India, is about to be promoted to the establishment of general officers in succession to Major-General McCausland, retired; and as his colonel's commission is only dated May 1st, 1884, he makes a very big jump over the heads of 83 of his seniors on the colonels' list. He was born June 30th, 1836, entered the Bengal Artillery from Addiscombe in December, 1855, and has served in the Indian Mutiny, the Ensofzai Expedition of 1863, the Afghan War of 1878-79, and the Egyptian Campaign of 1882, when he gained his C.B. His immediate junior, as an Indian Artillery colonel, is Henry John Thornton, Royal (late Madras) Artillery, who was born in December, 1837, and received his first commission in June, 1857. Colonel W. R. Craster (late Bengal) follows on the seniority list.

The recent promotions in the Staff Corps leave Colonel H. P. Hawkes, C.B., Madras S.C., senior for promotion, with Colonel G. A. Prendergast, Bengal S.C., second, and Colonel H. S. Anderson, C.B., Bombay S.C., in the third place. Major-General C. W. Chester, who has just obtained promotion, was born in January, 1833, and obtained his first commission in February, 1850, so that his progress does not contrast well with that of the two senior colonels of the local forces promoted in the same Gazette. Major-General Cole, it will be noted, only joined the Madras Army in December, 1855, and Major-General Warrington is an ensign of October, 1856, both being some six years junior to Colonel Hawkes, C.B., who is coming forward for promotion to the next Staff Corps vacancy. The present cab-rank system of promotion in the Indian Army certainly seems capable of revision, the advantage of promoting an officer to the fixed establishment and retiring him some months later to an unemployed supernumerary list being more than doubtful in its benefit to the Service.

SOME eight years ago an agitation was set on foot by the officers of the Indian Staff Corps to try and obtain accelerated promotion to the ranks of Captain, Major, and Lieutenant-Colonel. A Committee, named "The Staff Corps and Indian Army Fund Committee," was formed, and agreed to administer a fund, raised by subscriptions from officers of the Indian Army, named "The Staff Corps Accelerated Promotion Fund." A circular was published by the Committee for the purpose of giving definite and vigorous shape to the undoubted grievance of Indian officers in the matter of promotion. The circular ran as follows:—"Under the present Staff Corps rules a Lieutenant is promoted to the rank of Captain after 12 years' service, to that of Major after 20, to that of Lieutenant-Colonel after 26; whereas in British regiments a cavalry Subaltern gets a troop, on the average, in 7 years, while the infantry Subaltern is promoted, as a rule, after 9 years. Only the Engineers have to wait 12 years, and for them the Government is understood to be going to do something. As to Captains, it is noticeable that they cannot be promoted to the rank of Major until they would, if in a British regiment, be superannuated; and it is a fact that, under the present system, unless some change be made, there will only be seven Majors in the whole of the Madras regiments. It is not, therefore, for Subalterns alone that this movement is set on foot, but to ensure accelerated promotion generally throughout the service." The result of this agitation was that Government reduced the qualifying period of Subalterns of the Indian Staff Corps, for the rank of Captain, by one year, making it eleven instead of twelve years. The qualifying periods for the other grades remain the same. Now, however, the same question has again cropped up—this trifling concession, apparently, being considered insufficient—and agitation on a very large scale is now going on. The officers of the Staff Corps undoubtedly have a grievance. Service in India is by no means what it was; the attractions of good pay is gone, and with the hope of becoming General officers gone too, there is little tangible benefit to be gained by a young man who enters the Indian service. The Indian authorities have, of course, certain financial difficulties to face. As, however, new rules as to first appointment are about to be introduced, and the system of passing Subalterns through Line regiments is to cease at the end of 1891, it would be well for the officers of the Indian service to bring all the pressure they can upon their Parliamentary friends, in order to obtain a further inquiry into their wrongs before the new regulations are framed. The present is an excellent opportunity for agitation, and it would be a pity if it were not taken advantage of.

LIEUTENANT GEORGE ALEXANDER SWINTON STONE, Royal Engineers, died on the 28th ult., at Rawul Pindi, of enteric fever, in his twenty-seventh year. He entered the Service in February, 1883.

LIEUT.-COLONEL LOUIS HARRIES HAMILTON, late 87th Fusiliers, died on the 5th inst., at Cranfield Lodge, Upper Norwood. Colonel Hamilton served as Assistant Adjutant-General in the second Burma War, and was twice honourably mentioned in General Godwin's despatches, and in the orders of the Governor-General.

MAJOR-GENERAL JOSEPH LYON BARROW, C.B., Royal (Madras) Artillery, died on the 29th ult., at Southampton, in his seventy-ninth year. He entered the Service in 1829, and, ten years later, served with the Field Force against Kurnool. He next served with great distinction throughout the first Chinese War of 1840-43, and in the Bundelcund Field Force in 1857-58, including the battle of Bunda.

MAJOR-GENERAL FRANCIS LANE MAGNIAC, late 5th Madras Light Cavalry, died suddenly on Sunday, at his residence, North Devon Hall, near Bideford. He had a distinguished career under the Indian Government, having served in the Southern Mahratta country in 1844-45, and with part of the contingent at Indore during the mutiny of the Holkar's troops in 1857.

CAPTAIN CHARLES FLEETWOOD SHAW, late 4th Dragoon Guards and 40th Regiment, died on Sept. 16th at Hobart, Tasmania, aged fifty-eight. He was the younger son of the late Major Richard Shaw, 1st Madras Light Cavalry, and served with distinction in the Crimean and New Zealand Wars.

THE Judge Advocate-General will go down to Calcutta with a Camp Office for about two and a half months from the beginning of December.

A VOTING UNIT FOR INDIA.

Mr. Pincott has sent us for publication the following scheme drawn up by himself, for meeting the demand for representation in India, "without injury to the machinery of Government":—

Objection having been taken to all the schemes hitherto proposed for electing representatives to the various Legislative Councils in India, and as much of the opposition which the "elective principle" has met with arises from the absence of an unobjectionable method of carrying out the idea in practice, Mr. Pincott offers the following practical scheme as a solution of the difficulty:—1. The whole of British India to be mapped into electoral districts, and one or two seats (according to circumstances) in the Provincial Legislative Councils to be allotted to each district. 2. The Universities, the Municipal Boards, the Chambers of Commerce, the Trades' Societies, the principal Hindoo and Mahomedan Associations, and the Planters' Associations, and such other bodies as the Viceroy in Council may select, comprised in any electoral district, to be the voting units for that district. 3. On the approach of an election two scrutineers (one official, the other non-official) to be appointed for each electoral district (? by the Governor in Council of the province to which the district belongs. 4. It shall be the duty of the scrutineers to receive the names of all candidates (? of a certain standing in society) who may offer themselves for election in the district. One month (?) before the day of election the scrutineers are to send (by registered letter) a printed list of the names of all the candidates to the chairman or president of each voting unit in their district. 5. The chairman, &c., is then to summon a meeting of the members of his Board or Society (as the case may be), and, by vote of the members present at that meeting, he is to mark the name or names (as the case may be) of the candidates which the meeting desires to be elected. The voting paper, thus marked, is then to be signed by the chairman (and perhaps countersigned) and sent back to the scrutineers as a registered letter. 6. The two scrutineers are then to open the voting papers in the presence of each other, and are to mark, on a general list, each vote as each paper is opened. The candidates with the highest total of marks to be declared the duly elected representatives. 7. The first duty of the elected representatives of all the districts of India will be to meet together in some convenient centre, and there to elect representatives to sit in the Supreme Council. At this election each representative to have one vote for each seat to be filled in the Supreme Council. The election to be by list, as before, or in any other convenient manner; but no representative to be allowed to give more than one vote to one candidate. Candidates for seats in the Supreme Council not to be confined to the representatives elected to the Provincial Councils, but to include also others, to be specially defined.

The foregoing scheme has the merit of giving an exceedingly moderate voting power to men who may fairly be considered to be the more intelligent, active, and public-spirited members of the community. They are men, also, who are already, to some extent, engaged in public duties, and who are now ready for the service required, without the least disarrangement of any existing organisation, or the special creation of any elective machinery. The duty of passing a political vote once in every two or three years would be imposed on bodies already in existence, if they desired to exercise the privilege. It is evident, also, that by such a process of election bribery and undue influence would be impossible; for, to be effective, these ill means would have to reach a preponderating number of the members of the various voting units spread over necessarily large districts. But as the members could not give effect to their desires only by an aggregate vote, for which no particular individual could be held responsible, the futility of any attempted corruption is evident. Nor could any particular municipal board, &c., be visited with disagreeable consequences on account of the election of any irritating representative; for no particular body in any district could be held responsible for the final result of the voting. Nevertheless, the representative himself would be fully responsible to his constituency; for the district could oust him at the next election. The scheme has, also, everything to recommend it on the score of economy. A moderate fee to two scrutineers, the cost of printing a short list of names, and the postal registration fee, is all that would fall on the State. The trifling fee for returning the voting paper to the scrutineers would fall on the voting unit—a very small price to pay for the franchise. The candidates would make themselves known at their own expense. Each voting unit should keep an attested copy of its own voting paper; and the original voting papers should be kept, for a reasonable time, attached to the scrutineers' computation. In this way any tampering with the voting papers could be detected and punished.

THE INDIAN FACTORY ACT.

The following letter has been addressed by Sir George Campbell to the editor of the Times:—

SIR,—I observe that a gentleman, who often comes forward as the advocate of Manchester commercial interests—Mr. Holt S. Hallett—writes to you to protest against the Indian Factory Act being settled in India, and insists that it should be laid upon the table of the House of Commons and debated there before it is sanctioned. I venture to say that this is just the course which I hope will not be taken. The question is whether the matter is to be settled in the interest of the people of India or in the interest of Lancashire. If the former, the Indian Government and Legislative Council are far the best judges; if the latter, no doubt the House of Commons, where Lancashire interests are so strong, is the most likely place. The interest on this subject in the House of Commons is certainly great—very much greater than in most Indian subjects. But it curiously enough happens that the philanthropic gentlemen who there actively move in the matter are invariably the representatives of English manufacturing constituencies, to whose trade the Indian manufactures threaten rivalry.

No, Sir; let us have some Home Rule for this country; let us manage our own affairs. But the worst tribunal to decide questions between English interests and those of the Indian people is the House of Commons, where one side is represented and the other is not.—Your obedient servant,

GEORGE CAMPBELL.

THE Superintendent of Stamps, Madras, recently declined to stamp a blank policy of insurance forwarded to him by the agents of an insurance company to be stamped in the usual way, on the ground that it was partly executed, as it was signed by the directors at the headquarters of the company. As all insurance policies sent to branches bear the signature of the directors at headquarters, the agents submitted that such a document is not executed until the policy is filled in and their signature as agents affixed, and asked the Collector of Madras for information on the point, so that the directors might, if necessary, be asked to discontinue sending blank policies signed by them. The question having been referred to the Board of Revenue, it has been ruled that the policy is not a completed document until the blanks are filled up, and that it can, therefore, be stamped in the usual way.
